PRODUCE EXCHANGE PRANKS.

THEY ARE HEREAFTER TO BE SUBDUED, OWING TO THE DISGRACE IT HAS BROUGHT UPON THE INSTITUTION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The pranks of the more blithesome members of the Produce Exchange have become intolerable to the sedate majority, and the rules for propriety of conduct on the floor are to be regarded hereafter. Formerly the brokers of the Stock Exchange had an unrivaled distinction for horseplay, and their doings in intervals of purely business uproar were one of the sights which drew regular visitors to the gallery of their hall; but soon after the completion of the new building of the Produce Exchange the speculators in provisions outrivaled their brethren of stocks and bonds in affording diversion to spectators. The day before New Year's the performances have been so extensively and elaborately demonstrative that on the last occasion printed tickets of admission were issued in order that the members might secure to their friends the exclusive privilege of seeing the show. Brokers gifted with powers of song and dance, athletic achievements, or clownish ability utilized their accomplishments to the utmost, and dignity had no consideration. Next came the remarkable visit by 200 members to the Fourteenth Street Theatre, professedly representing the Produce Exchange as a body, and thoroughly advertised beforehand as such, for the purpose of having special fun with the actresses in "Evangeline." It was an evening of disorder. The men on the stage were pelted with chestnuts whenever an ancient pun was spoken, and comment and retort were bandied across the footlights. Upon the women in the play the frisky brokers expended their efforts in affectionate outcries and critical ejaculations, while the recipients of these attentions responded with interpolated actions and verses. By harmonious prearrangement between the management and the brokers interested, two of the actors had been accorded the facilities to "make up" in imitation of two of the most marked characters on the exchange. The whole thing was a scandal to the exchange, and some of the facts concerning it have been alarmedly denied by the theatre folks. This week the jokers, disregarding the condemnation which their exploits had aroused, have spent the dull afternoons in more boisterous foolery than ever before. Intimations of impending amusement have brought large parties to the visitors' gallery, and the promises have been fully realized. Venerable members have been driven out by volleys of dough-balls formed of the grain samples, flour has covered the garments of non-participants, and freakish processions have cleared the floor of all legitimate business. Once the grain-ring was for an hour occupied for a war-dance by fellows fantastically decked in feathers as Indians. Formal complaint has been made to the Executive Committee and a reform is to be compelled.

A SCHOOL PROFESSOR HORSEWHIPPED.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—At 5:30 this evening Prof. Justin E. Dow, Principal of the Houston City Schools, was horsewhipped on Main street by Freeland F. Chew. Mr. Chew was arrested at the manner in which Prof. Dow conducted the examination of his young sister for admission into the schools. Prof. Dow taught school in Chicago, and is well known in that city. Chew is a young and slender man and Dow weighs about 170 pounds. Dow made no resistance.

OUR MARTYRED DEAD.

No Ceremony Upon the Occasion of the Removal—The Body Not Exposed to View.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Since the death of James A. Garfield it has always been the wish of the family of the dead President that his remains be put in a casket that would endure throughout all time. They all realize that the casket which contained his remains when first brought to this city would last but a few years and then crumble into dust, carrying with it the bones of their dead. With the end in view of avoiding such a result, an elegant bronze casket was purchased, taken to the vault in Lakeview Cemetery Oct. 6, 1881, and the remains of the dead President, in a good state of preservation, were placed in it. For over four years the casket containing the honored ashes of Garfield has remained in the vault guarded by United States soldiers. The coffin is an excellent one, but the Garfield family were doubtful as to whether it would last, as they desired, to the end of time. In order to set at rest any fears upon this point still a third casket or sarcophagus was ordered, and it arrived in this city early Friday evening. It was at once unpacked and prepared for the reception of all that is mortal of James A. Garfield. The sarcophagus is perhaps the handsomest burial case ever constructed or brought into use in America. It is made entirely of bronze, worked up to the very highest and richest finish. At each of the four lower corners beautifully-carved lions' feet act as supports to the strong frame, while the upper corners are relieved by deftly carved leaves and scrolls. On each side are three panels stayed by strong bronzed bolts at the corners, and at each end another panel is made secure and durable against the wear of time in the same manner. Attached to the sides and ends by handsomely carved bronze hinges are long handles, the rods of which are enriched by beautiful engraving. On the lids several oak leaves, modeled in bronze, act as handles. These are all the ornaments which the casket contains, and there are just enough to relieve the extreme plainness and at the same time not to make it a piece of fancy-work. Each little adornment is carefully worked up to a high point of elegance, and is rich beyond compare. Around the upper edge of the sarcophagus is a deep groove, and down over this the cover is placed and screwed fast. The groove is intended to contain the cement which renders the casket entirely and absolutely air-tight. Midway between the panels and the lid rests the bronze plate. On this plate is engraved "Garfield, 1881," in bold relief, the background being an artistic combination of lichen, calycanthus, lilies, and oak leaves. It took the engraver over a month to make this plate, the design being a beautiful study, the lichen symbolizing Garfield's love of home, the calycanthus his love of mankind, the lily his purity, and the oak leaves his courage. The inside of the casket is perfectly plain, and the whole lower portion is lined with lead. The sarcophagus alone weighs 420 pounds. It measures seven feet in length, is two feet and six inches wide, and two feet deep. Its cost is in the neighborhood of $1,700, and the inscription plate involved an expense of $400.

Early this morning Undertaker Hogan, with the new sarcophagus, and accompanied by several newspaper men, started for Lakeview Cemetery. They arrived at the vault, where the remains of Garfield have reposed so long undisturbed, shortly after 9 o'clock. The soldiers had just completed their "guard mount" and were in readiness to receive the party. Lieut. Edwards opened the grated and outer doors of the vault, and the elegant new casket was borne to the entrance and placed in position. Then, in the presence of James R. Garfield, Lieut. Edwards, and the newspaper men, the plate and handles of the old casket were unscrewed and lifted from over the form of the dead President. Young Garfield would not allow the casket to be opened, preferring that the remains be not exposed to view. The body is, however, in a fair state of preservation, despite the fact of the terrible emaciation which had taken place prior to death. Still there are indications that dust is returning to dust slowly but surely. Reverently the remains, still inclosed in the old casket, were carefully lifted into the new casket, never to be disturbed again by the hand of the living. The little company of spectators stepped forward and took a last look at the casket which surrounded the withered form of the dead President; the large lid of the sarcophagus was placed over the body and screwed fast, and the cement carefully and thoroughly applied. This done, the casket was placed in position, flowers were strewn over it, and Ohio's dead son was at rest forever.

A HIGH OLD TIME.

JAMES D. FISH AND HIS CAROUSALS WHILE IN NEW YORK LAST WEEK—HE DINES WITH DIVERS PRETTY ACTRESSES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—James D. Fish has returned to Auburn State Prison after his five days of vacation. He has had a high old time while here, quite after the manner of his life when, prosperous through the ruination of Gen. Grant and others, he was a heavy banker by day and a light roysterer by night. He was brought to town ostensibly to testify in a civil suit growing out of the Grant & Ward swindles, but, as the case was not ready for trial, and he goes back to prison without having been put on the stand, the suspicion is that occasion was indulgently made to give him an outing. Once before he was in the city, and for nine days, while testifying daily in court, was fully privileged to enjoy himself the rest of the time. The rumors then were that he gathered some of his former gay companions and resumed the jollity that had been his characteristic in prosperity. But his doings were carefully guarded against exposure. The second visit has been more careless. No secret was made of his absences from the Murray Hill Hotel, in which he and his two guardian officers had their quarters. One of his exploits, that of dining sumptuously at an inn overlooking the tomb of Grant, the victim of his and Ward's crimes, was an entirely unbidden carousal, during which he drank a full quart of champagne. Other acts of his strange outing have required troublesome investigation to get the facts. He spent one evening in the Mystic Flats, which belonged to him, and in which, handily across the street from the Casino, where he was a privileged stockholder, he maintained a headquarters of dissipation and orgy. Four actresses notorious in connection with burlesque were driven to this house in carriages after their stage duties were done for that evening, and then the coming and going of laden waiters proved that a bountiful repast was being served from a restaurant of the neighborhood. Another evening was spent in the entertainment of a party of male friends at his hotel, where he spent money in reckless disregard of the claim that he was impoverished. He went to some theatre nearly every evening, always sitting behind the drapery of a private box, while only his companions were visible. His taste theatrically was not changed from the old times, for his choices were comic opera and burlesque, although legitimate theatricals chanced to be plenty and excellent. The convict was accompanied by a keeper from Auburn, and two detectives were employed to make sure against an escape, but his movements were in no wise restricted, and the cost of his journey must have been very heavy. He is to come again in two weeks, and larger rooms at the hotel have already been bespoken.

THE TALK IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Republican Senators held no caucus today, as was announced would be done by papers here. The course of action which they will pursue, it is evident, has already been marked out and will not be deviated from. The Judiciary Committee, to which was referred Attorney-General Garland's letter refusing to furnish information, will meet Monday, and in pursuance of Mr. Edmunds' resolution will report to the open session of the Senate. Pending the debate, which is sure to follow the report, the other committees having similar resolutions before them are either taking no action or are reporting adversely. This latter was the case in the Committee on Rules, which had a meeting today. Senator Platt's resolution to consider all nominations in open session was passed on by the committtte and received support where opposition was expected, and vice versa. Mr. Platt was present to give his views in favor of the resolution. He has been preparing himself during the week and was able to make a strong case, but when it came to a vote Senators Sherman, Ingalls, Harris, and Blackburn voted against it, while the only vote in its favor was cast by Senator Frye. Mr. Blackburn has always been considered a believer in open sessions, and on several occasions has so expressed himself, while Senator Frye has been as far on the other side. The resolution will be reported to the Senate adversely by Senator Ingalls early in the week, and Senator Platt will ask that it go on the calendar, as he intends to call it up for discussion. The great political debate that is to come soon will therefore hinge entirely on Edmunds' resolution.

When the Senate a few days ago called on Attorney-General Garland for papers relative to charges against suspended officers the nominations of whose successors then being before the Senate for confimation, Mr. Garland declined to comply with this request of the Senate, and President Cleveland took occasion, in an interview for the press, to say that no suspensions were made without just cause. The following statement will show why the documents were not sent, as the sending of papers in one case would establish a precedent for the Senate to obtain the papers in all other cases:

Mr. Garland was directed by the President to submit to the Cabinet meeting Tuesday, July 21, 1885, all charges on file in the Department of Justice against the officers of his department in the State of Texas. He had the files searched, giving special instructions as to the case of A. J. Evans, the United States Attorney for the Western, and Asa E. Stratton Jr., United States Attorney for the Eastern Districts of Texas. There were no charges of any kind against Stratton, who was appointed April 2, 1884, and there were no charges against Judge Evans, except the following anonymous letter with indorsements:

BOERNE, Kendall Co., Tex., March 23, 1885.—The Hon. John Hancock, Austin, Tex.—DEAR SIR: A. J. Evans, United States Attorney, has been in the habit of denouncing you and Senator Coke in the most unmeasured terms. In company of some gentlemen a few days ago in San Antonio he expressed his contempt for you and Coke, and said he defied you and your influence at Washington; that he had come to stay, and would smile to see you try and bounce him; that you was too great a rascal to have a particle of influence with Garland. We are waiting to see who has the most influence.
MANY CITIZENS.

The foregoing letter has the following indorsements:

AUSTIN, April 2, 1885.—Dear Senator: If an active, immoderate, and bitter partisan is to be retained in office this man ought not to be removed, otherwise it is wrong to retain him. You have power in the premises; I have not. Yours, truly,
JOHN HANCOCK.
To the Hon. C. R. Coke, Waco, Tex.
[Personal.] The Hon. A. H. Garland, Washington, D. C.—DEAR GARLAND: This received from Judge Hancock, ex-member of the Austin District, and will explain itself.
COKE.

A. J. Evans, who had been United States Attorney for several terms (about fourteen years), was last reappointed July 7, 1884, hence his term of office would not have expired until July 2, 1888. He was suspended upon this anonymous letter, and the name of his successor, a partisan Democrat, is before the Senate. Evans is a Texan, and was a Confederate soldier. Mr. Stratton, against whom there were no charges of any kind, was also suspended.

Another case is that of T. J. Tuomey, United States Marshal for South Carolina, who was suspended by the President. Marshal Tuomey caused the removal by Judge Bond of several Commissioners of the Circuit Court of the District for nursing frivolous cases to make fees for themselves and the Marshal. The day before Tuomey's suspension was mailed at the Department of Justice, Attorney-General Garland received a visit from two prominent men from South Carolina—Mr. W. L. Trenholm, now Civil-Service Commissioner, and H. B. N. Smith, member of the law firm of Mitchell & Smith of Charleston, whose business in the United States courts is considerable. These men called on Mr. Garland relative to a proposed change in the office of Collector of the Port of Charleston, and to push their candidate for the place. In the course of the conversation Mr. Garland asked them whom they wanted for Marshal, saying: "I suppose you gentlemen from Charleston want Simmons?" In reply Mr. Smith stated that Tuomey, the incumbent, was a good officer, a respectable man, and gave general satisfaction. Three days after this interview, Marshal Tuomey received notice from Mr. Garland that he was suspended from office. Tuomey immediately telegraphed to the President and to Garland requesting to be furnished with a copy of charges against him if any there were. He received no reply. Tuomey is a South Carolinian, served with distinction in the Confederate army, and has ever since the War been a consistent Republican. This was the reason of his removal by the "civil-service reform" President.

Minister Soteldo declares the charges against him, outlined in THE TRIBUNE this morning, are malicious, and came from claimants who are trying to defeat his efforts to have certain of the claims annulled on the ground of fraud. He says a proposition was made him to have his Government buy the outstanding certificates, and he entered into correspondence to learn at what price they could be bought. Senator Morgan of the committee to which the matter was referred is quoted as of the opinion that the Minister had done nothing unbecoming his position. The charges have not been brought to the notice of the State Department. Assistant Secretary Porter says negotiations are pending to reopen the question, but there has been no evidence that the Venezuelan representative's conduct has not been straightforward and proper. The view is taken by some Senators that a full investigation will disclose a very scandalous state of affairs, and may result, not only in the removal of the Minister, but the withdrawal of the treaty now pending between this country and Venezuela. A fortnight ago Senator Sewell offered a resolution calling on the State Department for the correspondence on file with holders of certificates in relation to the matter, and also for information as to any proposal of Venezuelan officials or agents to buy up these certificates. The resolution is still in committee.

Le Grand Odell, who represents property-owners in the neighborhood of the bridewell lot, has been here urging the House members not to let the Wisconsin Central get north of Polk street. The property he was looking after lay mostly along Fifth avenue. The street there is only sixty feet wide, and it was claimed the hack-stand, etc., to be established in so narrow a thoroughfare would injure the property near by. Congressman Adams has suggested that the railroad could afford to do the fair thing by the city and take a thirty or forty foot strip off its holding, thus widening Fifth avenue to ninety to 100 feet. Odell is impressed with the idea and thinks if this were done the objections of adjoining property-owners would be overcome. He laid the proposition before President Colby before the latter went to New York. The Wisconsin Central people think the Government is driving a hard bargain with them, but they may be willing to make some further concessions in order to get the coveted lot.

The Post-Office Department has received no complaint from Chicago about the inefficiency of the special-delivery system. Gen. Hazen, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, said he could see no way of making the service more satisfactory under the existing laws. He had heard it said that the messenger-boys had been forced to take the risk which the Government would not. This was pretty hard on the boys, of course. The way to remedy the difficulty was to charge the same rate for service that telegraph companies do. If the boys in Cincinnati earned $15 per month it was because they had more to do, and not because of any different arrangement than that in force in Chicago. The difficulty arising from the last mail leaving for the sub-stations at 4 o'clock could only be fixed by having special wagons or messengers, which, considering the amount of mail, would be very expensive. So far the scheme had been successful in netting for the Government 2 cents for each letter sent by special delivery.

It will be remembered that last summer a committee of the House, with Judge Holman at its head, at public expense visited the various Indian agencies with the end in view of gaining information for the guidance of Congress in legislating on the Indian question. It is now more than four months since that committee returned from its travels and more than two months since Congress convened, and yet Judge Holman has not called his committee together. Members of the committee have suggested that a meeting be held. Judge Holman has assented, but fails to call the committee together. The fact of the matter seems to be that Judge Holman has too much on his hands. He watches the Appropriation Committee, he watches the proceedings of the House, and he watches the body. But with all he doesn't seem to have much time for attending to the real work before him.

Maj. Charles A. Story of Chicago is on deck. Mr. Story is the inventor of Frank Lawler as a spelling reformer. Congressman Frank's correspondence with his constituency is heavier than that of any other Chicago member, and a patent system of spelling would undoubtedly be a boon to him. The bill which he introduced for the benefit of Mr. Story's invention has got lost somewhere in the committees, but now that the author is here will probably be dug out and placed before the House.

VERY TOUCHING, VERY TENDER.

THE LETTERS WRITTEN BY MR. G. W. PHILLIPS TO THE WOMAN WHO ENSNARED HIM.

The batch of documents recently unearthed in a Wabash avenue boarding-house that are credited with being letters sent by Mr. G. W. Phillips to his erstwhile wife are interesting reading, inasmuch as they evidence the depth of sentimentality to which human nature under a certain pressure will sink. The letters were all written, it is said, before the marriage of the pair. The following epistle approaches the Gilbertian in paroxysmal tenderness, the allusion to a 37x41-page interchange of former missives being especially touching:

SATURDAY EVENING.—My Darling Wife: How happy I was this afternoon, and how loving and sweet and dear you were, and how kind; and when the parting came I thought my heart would break. I felt as I released you from my embrace I would fall a corpse at your feet. O dear, this must not last much longer. Think of the plan I suggested, dear, and add your own ideas to it, and bring it to a close, or I will soon die. You know, sweet, precious darling, that you can depend on me. You shall not want for anything. I will take good care of you, and be too happy to do so while the separation is being made, until such time as you may indeed be my lovely, loving wife and forever after. Darling love, I feel the time has come to act. Pardon me, dearest, if in my wild love I suggest what may seem to be impracticable. If by some means you could quietly bring it about it would be better. Dearest, tonight I read your letter of thirty-seven pages and I wrote you forty-one pages at the same time. And now, sweet love, let me again beg you to burn every line you have from me, no matter whether answered or not. I tell you, darling, as long as they are in existence, no matter where they are hidden, there is danger of some accident discovering them. Then please, darling, don't disregard my earnest request, but get them beyond the reach of human eye. You know that any one of the letters in the last two weeks could not only jeopardize our happiness, but might result in almost murdering me. Good night, my precious, sweet, lovely, loving, darling angel. God bless you and keep your vows sacred to me. O, my lovely sweetheart, a thousand sweet, hot kisses of love to Kittie.
FRANK.

Here is another, expressive of a manifest tightening of the tension. The terms of endearment employed, too, it will be perceived, are in more than one instance unique. It is an open question, however, whether a more youthful lover would have ventured such an open-souled allusion to the hue of his inamorata's capillary adornment:

SUNDAY NIGHT.—My Own, My Precious Darling Kittie: O, darling, I hope ere another Sunday comes it will be so you need not steal out to me, but that I may be permitted to go where you are. Heaven hasten that happy time. I feel sure, dearest love, you will make some move that will bring this all about. O, my precious little baby wife, my every wish is now on a strain to bring about the ties of our love. A few weeks more or less would make but little difference in the date we should be married. O, my dear darling, don't let the matter of dollars and cents stand in the way. Darling, I don't want one dollar of his money expended on you, and I hope you will take no more from him, and do not fear that I will feel any way but honored and proud of my sweet little red-haired wife—proud of her will be no name for it. We can and will show other married people what true happiness is and means. The main thing now is to take the first step, to take it with prudence, discretion, and judgment. In addition to what I suggested last night perhaps it might be well to see him. If he would only go away and leave you to manage it all could be done quietly and quickly and without much, if any, publicity. I think the longer it is delayed the more difficult it will be to bring it about (the divorce). It will kill me if I should lose you now. I would not want to live without you, my own, my life, my love, my all. God help us to a speedy and happy termination of this, our great trouble. Bless you, my sweet love, bless you.
FRANK.

The next one is eloquently illustrative of the fashion in which such enervating emotions enmesh the mind of a mercantile Strephon during business hours:

MONDAY NIGHT.—My Lovely, Darling Little Wife: The first hour on 'Change, 10:30, always finds me full of cheer, and when I get your letters and read them they are so tender and loving that I go back to the board with a light heart. You have said you have made a baby of me, and that I am a spoiled child. Well, I don't deny the soft impeachment, but I want you to keep me a baby and continue to spoil me. You know that a baby is easier controlled than a full-grown, wayward child. I do assure you I grow more and more impatient every day, and every day the pain of separation becomes more and more intense. O, this horrid thought that you must be with that man another night, lay by his side, and not by mine, almost distracts me. My angel, my wife, God bless you. A thousand kisses to my loving Kittie.
FRANK.

One could be excused for the belief that such an effusion as this would incinerate the paper upon which it was written:

WEDNESDAY NIGHT.—My Precious Darling: How happy I was this afternoon for the privilege of once again folding you to my heart and being unrestrained in our talk. Was there ever two mortals so madly in love as us? All the angels in Heaven could not shake my faith in you. As there is a God in Heaven, so I have been true to you. Leave it all to me and all will come right yet. I am as anxious as you can be for that time to come. I could smother you with kisses this moment. God bless you, my little darling.
FRANK.

All the comments a West-Sider would be likely to bestow upon this one would be "Rats":

THURSDAY NIGHT.—O, My Darling Kittie: If I do not get a letter tomorrow I will go wild. The little rose leaf I inclose is off a bud you gave me months ago. I have kept and looked at it every night since. Its color is as perfect as this leaf. Through those dried flowers I see the beauty and love of my Kittie beaming on me. Ever thine.
FRANK.

When shown a reproduction of the above letters yesterday Mr. Phillips virtually admitted their authorship, after first refusing to either acknowledge or deny it. "It only shows what a bloody idiot a love-sick man makes of himself," he remarked philosophically. "What a fool I was to write such stuff." Mr. Phillips said the woman was continually asking him to bring about a separation between herself and Rice, and intimated that he had received letters from her compared with which his own as printed above were as moonlight unto sunlight or as water unto Canal-street whisky. These, he said, he had burned as fast as he received them.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—There were no new developments in the Rice-Phillips case today. Matters have settled down. Mrs. Franklin, after selling the five letters she had for $10 apiece, has disappeared from sight.

A WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH.

JACKSON, Tenn., Feb. 6.—The insane wife of J. K. Whitelaw, a wealthy farmer living near Jackson, was accidentally burned to death last night.

I had not taken three doses of Athlophoros for inflammatory rheumatism before I was better, and I have been improving ever since. I am satisfied it is the best remedy for rheumatism there is to be had. C. Lockwood, Millbrook, Ill.

IN SOCIETY.

McVicker, Mr. A. A. Munger, Mr. E. B. McCagg, Mr. G. W. Montgomery, Mr. W. S. McCrea, Mr. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mr. S. P. McConnell, Mr. Thomas Murdock, Mr. J. Henry Norton, Mr. Edmund Norton, Mr. E. M. Phelps, Mr. F. S. Peabody, Mr. G. M. Pullman, Mr. R. W. Patterson Jr., Mr. G. M. Rogers, Mr. Arthur Ryerson, Maj. J. P. Sanger, Mr. Joseph Stockton, Mr. Charles Schwartz, Maj. J. M. Schofield, Mr. George W. Stevens, Dr. Charles G. Smith, Mr. O. S. A. Sprague, Mr. F. B. Tuttle, Mr. Norman Williams, Mr. G. H. Wheeler, Mr. G. S. Willits, Mr. Wirt Dexter, Mr. J. L. Woodman, Mr. F. Ziegfeldt.

It will be seen that this is substantially the same as the management of the brilliantly-successful charity ball of 1885, and it is intended to make a still greater success of that of 1886. Decorations, music (by John A. Hand with an orchestra of fifty pieces and a military band), supper, etc., will be on a more elaborate scale, and a much larger attendance is confidently looked for. The net receipts last year were over $4,000, which were equally divided between the charitable institutions for whose benefit the ball was given.

The experience of 1885 has suggested changes which will add to the brilliancy of this, the most conspicuous event of the social season. The invitation list will be made up from the calling lists of the patronesses, as last year; but, as errors and omissions are almost unavoidable in combining so many lists, the management desire the opportunity to correct such as may occur, which will immediately be done upon notification to any of the patronesses or managers. Invitations will be issued as soon as printed, and complete details of arrangements will be published in the Sunday papers of the 14th and 21st inst.

The social gayeties of the last week include several notable evening parties, quite a number of afternoon receptions, three or four weddings, and the usual variety of smaller entertainments. Mr. and Mrs. Edson Keith gave a very large party Monday evening at their home, No. 1906 Prairie avenue, which was largely attended by representative society men and women. The arrangements were as perfect as they were elaborate, and the affair throughout was as handsome as the beautiful surroundings, brilliant company, inspiriting music, lovely flowers, and an elegant supper could make it. In the afternoon from 12 to 5 o'clock Mrs. James H. McKindley of Michigan avenue entertained a large company of women. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Lee of Cincinnati and Mrs. Ira Holmes. In the evening Mrs. McKindley gave a cotillon, those present including the members of the Dancing Class. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. George M. Pullman gave one of the handsomest parties of the season, entertaining over 500 guests. The spacious family residence was beautifully decorated with rare cut flowers, special designs, and flowering plants, all gracefully arranged throughout the house. The supper served by Kinsley was elaborate. The two tables, one in the main dining-room and the other in the charming little theatre, were ornamented with balls of Jacqueminot and Maréchal Niel roses. The music was furnished by two full orchestras and dancing was a pleasing and popular feature of the reception. Mrs. Wirt Dexter of Prairie avenue gave an afternoon reception Monday, and Mrs. George C. Walker entertained her friends in a similar manner Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. George W. Hale gave a lunch at Kinsley's to thirty young women Tuesday in honor of Miss Pendleton of Cincinnati, who has been the recipient of numerous tokens of favor during her sojourn in Chicago. The suite of private parlors at Kinsley's was decorated for the occasion and the Florentine Quartet provided music.

The marriage of Miss Mamie B. Field and Mr. Clarence I. Peck was celebrated Wednesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2009 Indiana avenue, in the presence of a goodly number of relatives and intimate friends. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. McPherson. The bride was attended by four charming little girls, three the nieces of the groom and the other the niece of the bride. Masters George and Sanger Pullman acted as ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Peck left the same afternoon for an extended trip to Florida, going by way of New York. Upon their return they will be "at home" to their friends at No. 2254 Michigan avenue. At noon the same day the wedding of Miss Emma M. Smith and Mr. Samuel Percy Jones was celebrated at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. Pierson D. Smith, No. 1553 Michigan avenue. Owing to a recent death in the family of the bride the wedding was strictly private. At the same hour the Church of the Messiah was the scene of a pretty and stylish wedding, the parties to the contract being Miss Evelyn Seavey, daughter of Mr. Daniel H. Seavey, and Mr. Herbert A. Thomas. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. David N. Utter. The bride was attended by Miss Mabbett of Milwaukee and Miss Fitch of Chicago, and the groom by the two brothers of the bride. After the ceremony at the church a wedding breakfast was served at the Southern Hotel, and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Thomas, parents of the groom, gave a large reception at their residence, No. 20 Walton place. Thursday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Couthoui, No. 536 Sixty-first street, Englewood, Miss Gertie Couthoui and Mr. George Norris of Baltimore were happily married by the Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer. The wedding was strictly private, and after a collation Mr. and Mrs. Norris left for Washington, Baltimore, and New York. The marriage of Miss M. Pauline Eberman and Mr. Anson H. Slosson was solemnized Wednesday evening at the Epiphany Church, the Rev. T. N. Morrison officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Slosson left for St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Vernon Booth and Miss Alice Booth gave a young people's party Wednesday evening at the family residence, No. 1618 Michigan avenue. Music, dancing, and a dainty supper were the features of the entertainment. The Misses Buckley, No. 3035 Michigan avenue, gave a dancing party Tuesday evening, the program concluding with a german, gracefully led by Dr. W. F. Fowler. The Harvard Club of Chicago held its annual banquet and reunion at Kinsley's Tuesday evening. Owing to a variety of reasons the attendance was considerably smaller than last year, but the entertainment, however, proved a decided success in every particular. The Real-Estate Board sat down to an annual dinner at the Palmer House Thursday evening. The decorations were unique and appropriate, one piece representing the first hotel in Chicago in 1836 and another miniature corner lot labeled "For sale," all wrought with moss and flowers skilfully combined. Mr. E. A. Cummings presided at the banquet, and introduced the several speakers of the evening. Friday evening Mr. De Witt C. Cregier, the retiring Commissioner of Public Works, was tendered a complimentary banquet at the Palmer House, the participants including a number of prominent citizens. Mayor Harrison presided, and a number of complimentary speeches made during the evening. Mrs. J. W. Boardman and Mrs. H. C. Woodrow gave the second of a series of progressive euchre parties Thursday evening at the Woodruff Hotel.

The friends of Prof. Swing are perfecting arrangements for a grand testimonial entertainment celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Professor's first services in Chicago. The affair will probably take the form of a banquet at the Palmer House Feb. 22, to which all the friends of Mr. Swing will be invited. Mrs. J. R. Winterbotham, No. 2215 Michigan avenue, will give a progressive euchre party Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Duell gave a similar party Friday evening. The alumnæ of Ferry Hall held their annual reunion and meeting at Kinsley's Thursday. Lunch was served after the meeting. The german given by Mrs. J. M. W. Jones, No. 480 La Salle avenue, Thursday evening for her daughter was a delightful affair. Mrs. F. S. Eames gave a dinner party Wednesday evening. Mrs. W. P. Johnson, No. 1545 Michigan avenue, gave a progressive euchre party Tuesday evening. The French Club met last night at "La Maison du Lac." Mrs. J. Lafe Curtis, No. 2978 Indiana avenue, gave a Mikado euchre party last Tuesday evening. The prizes consisted of unique designs in Japanese and Chinese bric-à-brac. The Misses Adams, No. 2822 Michigan avenue, entertained a party of young friends Monday evening. Progressive euchre was the feature. Mrs. B. Douglas, No. 355 La Salle avenue, gave a dinner-party Thursday evening and a german Friday night. Mr. John B. Carson gave a sleighing party Monday night, the guests including among others the members of the Rosina Vokes company.

The young people of the Second Presbyterian Church will tender a reception to the pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. J. McPherson, tomorrow evening. The marriage of Miss Minnie Blair and Mr. Warren will be celebrated Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2909 Prairie avenue. Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Farwell and Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Farwell Jr. have issued cards of invitation to a large evening party next Thursday. The Union Club will give a brilliant reception Thursday evening, Feb. 18. Mrs. Frank G. Logan, No. 2919 Prairie avenue, will give an afternoon reception tomorrow. Mrs. A. P. Miller gave a musicale Wednesday afternoon and Mrs. Roswell A. Peters, née Howard, held her first reception the same day at No. 58 St. Clair street. Mrs. George A. Armour will give a ladies' luncheon Friday. The next party of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church will occur Thursday evening at Bournique's. The lecture to be given by Col. Charles Chaillie Long under the auspices of the Chicago Press Club Thursday evening at Central Music-Hall will undoubtedly attract a large audience. The wedding of Miss Sallie Rae, daughter of Col. Robert Rae, to Mr. Thomas Phillips will occur early in April.

Mrs. George M. Pullman left for the East yesterday, accompanied by the members of her family, Mrs. M. C. Sanger, and Miss Nichols of New York. She will be the guest of Mrs. Senator Logan in Washington and later will visit the South. Mrs. C. W. Pierce and daughter of Boston are visiting Mrs. C. F. Pierce, No. 1630 Indiana avenue. Mr. C. H. Rowe left Thursday for the East to attend the funeral of an old friend at Lowell, Mass. Miss Halliday left yesterday for Detroit to act as bridesmaid for Miss Josephine Hall. Mr. and Mrs. James S. Kirk and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Kirk left early last week for Winter Park, Florida. Miss Addie Ayers of Blawenburg, N. J., is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Enos Ayers, No. 1732 Michigan avenue. Miss Reynaud of New York, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Arthur J. Hawxhurst, for several weeks, has returned. Miss Grant of Canada is the guest of her brother, Mr. George R. Grant, No. 1834 Prairie avenue. Mrs. A. L. Stevens of California is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Smith, No. 2633 Indiana avenue.

This year's charity ball will be held Thursday, Feb. 25, at Battery D Armory and the Cavalry Armory. The persons under whose auspices it is to be given are about the same as last year.

The ladies and gentlemen who have consented to act in the management of the charity ball are requested to meet at the Cavalry Armory, No. 185 Michigan avenue, Saturday next, Feb. 13, at 2:30 p. m.

IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The week has been almost as quiet socially as those in December before the season was fairly begun. Wednesday Washington was visited by one of the heaviest snowfalls since New Year's-Day, 1877. Thursday the streets were a most impassable, but a few society veterans braved the weather and paid visits to the wives of the Senators.

Mrs. Logan had made elaborate preparations for her Thursday afternoon, and all those who ventured out to her handsome home, Calumet place, were well repaid by the welcome which they received from her and her assistants. Mrs. and Miss Talmage, wife and daughter of Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, were among Mrs. Logan's assistants. In honor of her two young guests, Miss Andrews of Ohio and Miss Gillette of Chicago, Mrs. Logan had invited a number of young women to receive with her.

Mme. Nordica, one of Mapleson's leading women, called with her sister, Mrs. Baldwin of Boston, and Mme. Nordica kindly sang two numbers while there. Miss Heckle of Chicago, who was one of Mrs. Logan's assistants, sang two or three times, greatly to the delight of the visitors. Dr. Talmage made a short call during the afternoon and Gen. Logan was in the parlor after he returned from the Senate. Mrs. Seguin, who is here with the "Mikado" company, received Thursday with the wife of the Hon. Jeremiah Wilson. The Chinese Minister was at home Thursday to receive congratulations upon the Chinese New Year. The invitations to this reception were verbal and the hours were from 2 to 6. The Minister received the guests in the large reception-room. His nephew, Mr. Chang Hansen, who has been educated in this country, made the introductions. Refreshments were served in the large dining-room, which was very beautifully decorated with flowers and smilax. The mantel was a bank of Jonquils. Real Chinese tea was served at a small table in the dining-room. Among those present were Chief Justice Waite and Mrs. Field, Viscount and Viscountess Noqueiras, Mrs. and Miss Ricketts, Mrs. Carlisle, wife of the Speaker, Mrs. Hawley and her sister Miss Foote, who is so well known through her stories in the Century, Senator and Mrs. Dawes, Judge and Mrs. MacArthur, and Marshal Wilson and Mrs. Chace, wife of Senator Chace of Rhode Island.

Mrs. Audenried, widow of Col. Audenried, who was a member of Gen. Sherman's staff at the time of his death, gave a tea Thursday evening in honor of her niece. Mrs. Audenried introduced a new and very successful feature by inviting two young men to receive with her and assist in the entertainment for her guests. The wife and daughter of Commodore Schley also gave a tea Thursday in honor of their guests, Miss Little of Boston and Miss Horwitz of Baltimore. Friday Mrs. H. M. Martin of H street gave a tea to her daughter, who is another young woman added to the long list of this winter's débutantes. Miss Martin, who is a very pretty blonde, wore white satin with tulle draperies and carried two large bouquets. A number of pretty young women were among Mrs. Martin's assistants, Miss Beach, daughter of Congressman Beach, being one of the most noticeable. She is tall and slight and a very striking brunet. She wore Friday a black costume, the neck pointed both back and front, and trimmed with jet. A large number of residents were among the guests at this tea. Mrs. R. A. Hayes gave a small party to young people Friday evening. A very large number of society people were present Friday evening at the National Theatre to see the Standard company in "The Mikado." Mr. and Mrs. Leiter, with two or three friends, occupied one of the lower boxes, and in the box next them were Gen. N. L. Jeffries with his pretty bride. Mr. Abakene, Secretary of the Japanese Legation, occupied another box with a party of American friends. In the audience was seen Justice Matthews and Justice Blatchford with a party of women, Senator and Mrs. Morrill and their son, Mr. James Morrill, and Miss Swan, Col. McCauley of the Marine Corps and Mrs. McCauley, Gen. Jones, ex-Consul to Nagasaki, Japan, and Judge and Mrs. Weldon. Mrs. Cannon of Illinois received the guests at the hop at Willard's Hotel Friday evening.

THE PROGRAM FOR THIS WEEK.

Next week will open with a tea to her female friends Monday given by Mrs. Lathrop Bradley. Senator and Mrs. Sherman will give the second of their evening receptions the same evening, and the Army and Navy Club will give the third of their germans. Secretary and Mrs. Endicott will give a dinner Tuesday evening to the Cabinet and the female members of their families. The President will give the dinner Thursday evening to the Justices of the Supreme Court and their wives which was postponed from last week. To this dinner are always invited the Attorney-General, as head of the Department of Justice, and the Chairmen of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees. Senator Edmunds is Chairman of this committee in the Senate and Randolph Tucker of the House Committee. Friday evening the President will give the reception to the Diplomatic Corps. The officers of the army and navy who are in Washington and Congress are invited to meet these gentlemen. These invitations also include their wives. No cards are issued, the invitations being made through the newspapers. Representative and Mrs. Hopkins of Pennsylvania give a reception next Friday evening. Mrs. Rockwell, wife of Col. Rockwell, will visit Washington next week with her daughter, Mrs. Crozier. They will be the guests of Gen. and Mrs. Card. Mrs. Card will give a tea next Tuesday evening for Mrs. Rockwell.

Mrs. Sheridan is suffering from a severe cold, and will not be able to see friends next Tuesday.

The marriage of Miss Frank English, a daughter of Admiral English, to a man from Culpeper, Va., will take place early in March. The marriage service will be read at St. John's Church, and the wedding reception which is to follow will be held at the house of Mr. Niles, an intimate friend of Admiral English. The reason for this is that Admiral and Mrs. English are living this winter in the house of their daughter, Mrs. Rixey, on Sixteenth street. The house is very small and not at all capable of holding the large number of guests which the English family intends to invite. When Admiral English was ordered away the last time he rented his handsome house on K street to Representative Curtin of Pennsylvania. The Curtins will keep the house another winter, and as Miss Frank is the last unmarried daughter of the family the Admiral and his wife will probably travel another winter, and will be in Washington but a short time. The wedding is to be one of the handsomest seen for a long time in Washington. Weddings in Washington are quite rare, partly for the reason that there are so few eligible men, and partly because so large a proportion of the population is a floating one that most of the prominent young society women go to their homes for their weddings.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Bullock of Chicago are at Willard's for a short visit.

Mrs. Barbour, wife of the Virginia member, who was so severely injured last week by falling down-stairs, is unconscious today, and her death is hourly expected.

Gen., Mrs., and Miss Parsons of Illinois are in the city.

Mr. Preston, the Haytian Minister, who has been in Paris with his wife and daughter for many months past, is expected to return to this country the coming week. Mr. Preston will spend a short time in New York and then come to Washington for the remainder of the season.

Mr. Chang Tin Wau, the newly-appointed Minister from China, will leave Pekin the middle of the present month for this country. Upon his arrival here Mr. Cheng Tsao Ju, the present Minister, will return to China. An extensive change in the personnel of the legation is anticipated, and it is probable that the new Minister will be accompanied by several attachés.

NEW YORK'S GAY AND FROSTY WHIRL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—While two-thirds of the population of New York and its vicinity have been groaning over the atmospheric conditions of the last few days, and deploring frozen water-pipes, icy blasts, and the general demoralization that accompanies a cold wave, the remaining third have been throwing up their caps in triumph at the prospect of more skating, sleighing, and tobogganing. At the cotillon Thursday night at least a dozen parties for Orange and the Country Club were made up, and the driving snow and bitter wind that to rational humanity revealed apparitions of pneumonia, rheumatism, and other ills that flesh is heir to, were welcomed by the giddy dancers as if they had been balmy zephyrs from Florida or Cuba. It is a mistake to suppose that no danger attaches to this new craze. Several rather serious accidents have already occurred. One man had the ligaments of his knee torn so badly that no surgeon's skill can ever make them do their work again. A woman from Troy had her face and head badly bruised and cut, while such trifling injuries as broken fingers, frost-bitten ears and toes occur just often enough to add spice and interest to the fun. Coasting on bob-sleighs on public roads is more certainly fatal, it is true; but tobogganing has its privileges and opportunities for the destruction of life and limb and will soon make winter nights as hideous to anxious mothers and stay-at-home wives as spring and autumn days are during the hunting season.

The balls for the week had fortunately nearly all taken place before the great storm reached us or they would undoubtedly have been less gay and lively than they were, as outdoor sports all day, with the mercury at zero, have rather a stiffening effect upon the youngest and most agile limbs. Mrs. Ogden Goelet's ball Monday night was the first and best of the week's dances, simply because the house is well adapted in all its belongings and appointments to a large entertainment, and the hostess is admirably well fitted to dispense its sumptuous hospitalities. To the smallest detail everything was harmonious and complete, and the result was a smooth, even, undisturbed enjoyment for guests of all ages but seldom to be met with in any country.

The youngest detachment of the dancing brigade had a very good time at Mrs. Van Duzer Ried's cotillon Tuesday night. There was only one married woman present, and the cotillon was as pretty as an unlimited number of lovely girls flying about in fairy-like costumes could make it. Miss Brady and the younger Miss Heckscher were distinctly the belles. There were few or no strangers from other cities, which gave a homelike, comfortable feeling to those who were there, and which not a few of the young women admitted that they were "just selfish enough to enjoy."

The same evening a large audience, composed of a more mature section of the fashionable world, assembled at the Nineteenth Century Club to hear Harvard and Princeton discuss, through their respective Presidents, the rather grave question of the importance of religion in colleges. Their hearers, of course, were divided in opinion as to which one of the combatants should have struck his colors and declared himself vanquished in the intellectual battle, but the women generally gave their preference to the smooth and polished diction of President Eliot over the rugged Scotch humor and vehemence of Dr. McCosh. Among the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Cross, Miss Redmond, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pierson, and Sir Roderick Cameron. Apprehensions were felt lest the driving storm of Thursday should interfere with the complimentary reading tendered to Mrs. John Sherwood by her many friends in this city, but her rooms were crowded with an interested audience, which enjoyed Mrs. Sherwood's gracefully written and delivered paper, as well as the readings and recitations by Miss Van Auken, Miss Baker, Mr. Riddle, Miss Wickham, and Mrs. Rice-Knox.

THE SECOND COTILLON BALL.

The second cotillon ball was given Thursday evening at Delmonico's, and was generally pronounced the gayest and jolliest that has ever taken place. Mrs. Oliver Northcote, Mrs. William Jay, and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt received the guests and made a handsome semi-circle at the door, as their dresses harmonized in color and did not make the glaring and violent effect of angry and opposing tints so often seen in a reception committee of women. In Paris, where every detail of dress is made a lifelong study, a hostess is careful to assimilate her costume to the tone of color prevailing in the room where she receives her guests, otherwise the first effect of her toilet would be hopelessly marred. Mr. Thomas Howard covered himself with glory in the gay and spirited german that he led, introducing the scarf and the driving figures, which, if not quite new, were a decided novelty to the younger part of the dancers. The scarf figure, with its clouds and mists of vapory tulle, folding and unfolding, enveloping the lithe figures of the dancers one moment and setting them free the next, produces about as pretty an effect of form and color as one could wish to see. The driving of two or three women abreast by one man who holds the silken ribbons is an old invention of cotillon dancers, and was first introduced at the old assemblies, when Delmonico's rooms were at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street. Mrs. Ronalds and Miss Lena Peters in double harness were the first to be guided down the long room, and an old wag who was present said the off pony shied and the near one kicked, and both wanted a stronger hand to hold them in. One of the most striking and original gowns at the cotillon was Mrs. S. S. Howland's, which was of dark olive tulle, with a pink silk sash, disposed and draped as only Worth's skillful fingers could have arranged it. The bride of only a few months back, Mrs. Henry Monroe, looked extremely well in black, with a blaze of diamonds covering the front of the corsage. Mrs. Walker Smith wore a beautiful dress of black tulle, silver-spangled, with large silver butterflies fluttering over the skirt and waist. Among the young women Miss Bulkley and Miss Lina Post wore graceful and becoming costumes of white tulle, Miss Bulkley's with a broad blue ribbon passed over one shoulder, something in the fashion of the blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter, and Miss Post's decorated with large bunches of golden grapes. More flowers were carried than at any previous ball.

VARIOUS NOTES.

The engagement of Mr. Raymond Ward to Miss Frances Barnard has been announced.

In the varied amusements and entertainments of the week amateur theatricals have not been left out. The performance of "Misunderstanding," an adaptation from the Hungarian by Mrs. Walter Andrews, was extremely creditable, and the play itself very bright and clever. Mrs. Andrews is a natural actress, and everything she undertakes on the stage is done without effort, affectation, or straining after effect. The second piece, called "Peacock's Holiday," was a screaming farce, and was well acted throughout by Miss Van Auken, Miss Katharine Brady, and Messrs. Sturgis, Mason, Chauncey, and Elisha Dyer third.

The sale of Mrs. Mary Jane Morgan's magnificent collection of pictures, statuary, porcelain, ivories, and curios is likely to make as great a stir in the world of art and fashion as the sale of her orchids did among horticultural collectors and enthusiasts a few months since. For the first time in the history of this country, although common enough abroad, an illustrated catalog has been prepared from photographic reproductions and also from etchings by well-known artists, which will be issued to subscribers next week. This is said to be a work of art in itself and will cost $25 a copy. One less expensive for popular use will be supplied before the day of sale. The collection is said to contain picked and carefully selected specimens from every great ceramic factory in the world, while in Japanese metal work and porcelain hundreds of thousands of dollars have been judiciously expended. Among the pictures there are some fine Meissoniers, Fortunys, Rousseaus, and Millets, and for those whose fortunes compel them to be satisfied with seeing without possessing such costly luxuries the opportunity to examine them will be a most welcome treat.

FLOWERS FOR COTILLONS OUT OF FASHION.

New York Society Paper: Nothing was more noticeable than the lack of bouquets at the ball [F. C. D. C. in New York.] It seems to be no longer the "right" thing to send flowers, and the society young man thanks his guardian angel that the custom has been changed, and that he can now ask the object of his young affection before-hand to dance the cotillon with him without putting his hand into his pockets to a depth that quite destroyed the pleasure of the evening whenever the memory of that awful florist's bill rose before him. Three years ago every woman carried a bouquet and every débutante carried half a dozen; the other night there were not twenty bouquets in the room, and as these were mostly carried by married women they may be taken more as tokens of "dinners received" than as the tributes of admiration.

CHAMBERS CONVICTED.

FOUND GUILTY OF THE FAMOUS MONON ROBBERY AND ASSAULT—THE PENALTY TWO YEARS' IMPRISONMENT.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—At 9 o'clock this morning the famous express robbery trial came to an end by a verdict from the jury of guilty of manslaughter, assessing the punishment at two years in the penitentiary. At first upon retiring the jury was six to six, then ten to two, and then a compromise was made by making a light punishment. When the result was announced Chambers was thunderstruck, and said that he had no idea of such a fate. "But, thank God," said he, "I am an innocent man, and that is one consolation." When sentence was pronounced tears came to his eyes, he for the first time showing any signs of the terrible burden upon him. A motion for a new trial was overruled, but the case will likely be taken to the Supreme Court.

The Monon express robbery, of which Chesley Chambers is said to be guilty, was committed April 29, 1885. The night express left Louisville at 6:30 for Chicago, and at 11 o'clock, when between Harrodsburg and Bloomington, some unknown man alone entered the baggage and express car combined, struck Peter Webber, the baggagemaster, on the head, shot George Davis, the messenger, and then compelled Webber to open the money safe of the American Express Company, taking from it $1,300. Then, shooting Webber, he made his escape. Webber was conscious all the time, and immediately described the villain. Davis lingered and now is living, although his mind is nearly gone. Three weeks later Webber was brought to Bloomington, and, upon seeing Chambers, identified him as the man. This caused intense excitement, as Chambers was regarded as one of the best young men in the county. A trial followed in September, when the jury stood six to six. The second trial began Jan. 25. The indictment was for assaulting George K. Davis, and also for the robbery.

HE WAS EJECTED.

THE JURY, THEREFORE, GAVE HIM $4,000 DAMAGES—SUIT AGAINST THE PULLMAN PALACE-CAR COMPANY.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Argument in the big damage suit of P. Henry of Vicksburg vs. The Pullman Palace-Car Company for $25,000 was resumed before Judge Hill of the Circuit Court of the United States today at 1 o'clock. Percy Roberts of New Orleans continued his speech begun yesterday, and spoke for an hour and a half. He was followed by Judge Lochrane of Atlanta, Ga., for the defendant, who made a superb effort. L. W. Magruder of Vicksburg made the closing argument for plaintiff, speaking three hours. The Judge charged the jury, which retired, and in fifteen minutes returned with a verdict giving the plaintiff damages in the sum of $4,000.

A motion for a new trial was entered by the defendants. The basis of the suit was this: Pat Henry, a young lawyer of Vicksburg, entered the car of the defendant with a friend of his—Mr. Merrigold, also of Vicksburg. Another party, who was shown to be a three-card monte man and a bad character generally, also entered the car at the same time. The conductor, as he claims, thinking that Henry was also a suspicious character, ejected him from the car, and, Henry claimed, in a rude and insulting manner. Mr. Merrigold also has a similar suit against the company.

OVERWORKED DEMOCRATS.

THEY CAN'T DO AT NEW ORLEANS THE LABOR THE REPUBLICANS BEFORE THEM PERFORMED WITH EASE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The charge having been made that the United States Sub-Treasurer in this city has been refusing to receive silver dollars on deposit and issue certificates therefor, Samuel Flower, the official in question, states that the force allowed by the existing laws to the office in this city is insufficient to meet an unlimited demand for redemption of silver coin, which demand is heavy at this season of the year. He has, therefore, to regulate the receipts of coin according to the capacity of the office force to receive, count, and examine the same, with attention to the other business of the office. This is the sole reason for refusal. He says that the need of the office for more help has been repeatedly brought to the attention of Congress without result. Mr. Herwig, the predecessor in the office, while constantly demanding more help, always managed to perform all the duties that came to him to do, and it is a doubtful compliment to the civil service to plead this excuse in behalf of the fresh employés for this neglect of duty.

THE END OF HIS ROPE.

A SWINDLER WHO HAD OPERATED EXTENSIVELY IN DIFFERENT STATES BROUGHT TO TIME IN ATLANTA.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A man named G. H. Barton, whose swindling operations have extended over Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, and Georgia, is now under a sentence of one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine. Barton represented himself as the agent for W. H. Porter, Son & Co., No. 212 State street, Chicago, general agents for the Butterick Publishing Company of New York, and Barton advertised for a number of salesmen who would be paid $75 per month and all traveling expenses. Barton began making contracts with them. He required them to deposit $10 each as evidence of good faith and to pay for the samples furnished, the money to be returned after one month's service. He proved to be a fraud and was arrested before he could leave the city. The publishing company had been trying to catch him for many months. An attempt was made to have him photographed this evening, but he kicked so vigorously that it had to be abandoned.

NO MORE SUNDAY PERFORMANCES.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 6.—James E. Fennessy, manager of Heuck's Opera-House, pleaded guilty in the Police Court today to the charge of the Law and Order League of giving a theatrical performance Sunday, and promised to close his theatre Sundays hereafter. Sentence was suspended.

THE COURTS.

A Wronged Wife Separated from Her Erring Husband—Result of Finding a Box.

Other Legal Items—A Decision in the Storey Will Case to Be Given Tuesday.

The divorce courts were dull yesterday, and the seeker after sensations was disappointed. The only case of special interest before Judge Shepard was that of Marion C. Daggett against George H. Daggett. The complainant is a refined looking woman about 35 years of age, and bearing deep traces of sorrow in her face. She gave her testimony with much emotion. She said she was married in June, 1879, in Milwaukee, and she and her husband resided there until the latter part of 1884, when they went to visit her mother in Boston, and then came to Chicago to live. Before they left Milwaukee she received an anonymous letter accusing her husband of having misled a young school-girl named Minnie B. Hughes, and of going to [illegible] with her, etc. Daggett was then in Chicago, and the wife did not believe the letter, but she subsequently showed it to her husband and asked if the charges were true. He said they were not, and at first denied even knowing the girl, but soon confessed that he was slightly acquainted with her, and that she was an intimate friend of his sister. Last March, when complainant and her husband were going out one evening, he suddenly pleaded indisposition and went up-stairs. She followed and found him crying, and, on asking him what was the matter, he confessed that he had been untrue to her for a year. She immediately thought of the anonymous letter, and asked if that too was true, and he admitted it was. Then he went into another room to bid his boy good-by, but she refused to allow him to touch him. She begged him to give the girl up, and promised to help him to reform, but he said he could not; that he had tried twice to kill himself, and that the girl's father wanted to kill him when he found out the truth. Then he left the house, but came back in less than an hour and told his wife it was too cruel to leave her in that way, and asked her to send for her mother from Boston. The old lady came, and, after Daggett had confessed his guilt, she begged him to reform and offered to do anything she could to prevent the scandal and disgrace being known. It was finally agreed that the wife should go East for six months and give her husband a chance to reform and give up the girl, and if he did so she was to return. A month after she left, however, she received a letter from her husband telling her not to come back. She said he is employed by Rosenbaum Bros., Board of Trade men, at a salary of $2,000 a year, and lives at No. 3392 Cottage Grove avenue under an assumed name. The mother-in-law, after Daggett's confession, took a trip to Milwaukee, where she found Minnie B. Hughes in a high school, made her promise to give Daggett up, and induced her to send him a letter saying she hated him and would never live with him again. The girl told how she had been misled, and expressed great sorrow that she had been instrumental in breaking up a happy home. The old lady then announced her intention of seeing the girl's father, but the girl implored her not to do so, saying that her affair with Daggett had broken him down and made him neglect his business, and that hearing any more about it would kill him. Mrs. Daggett's mother then came back to Chicago, where she saw Daggett, and he remarked that he had received a noble letter from Minnie, "and seemed to feel we all ought to condole with and pity him, and that he had not done anything wrong." This was all the evidence, but the Judge held it was amply sufficient.

A LONG-LOST BOX FOUND, AND THE RESULT.

A motion for a new trial was argued yesterday before Judge Rogers in the case of Mrs. Regina Gattman against the Hamburg American Packet Company. This was a suit to recover $2,500 worth of laces, dresses, and other wearing apparel claimed to have been lost in 1883 while in transit from Europe by the defendant company. The case was tried several months ago, and the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $1,756. A motion for a new trial was made by the company, but was put off from month to month to accommodate Mr. Byam, the woman's attorney, who was engaged in the Mulkowski case. In the meantime the goods, which, as a matter of fact, had been seized by the Government, were found, and some of them were brought into court to show that the valuation put on them by the woman was much too high, and hence the verdict grossly excessive and should be set aside. Affidavits were also filed, showing that the property was found since the trial, and the company, therefore, asked for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. It appeared that the discovery was made by accident. The 11th of last December, while an employé of the company was hunting up a basket for a messenger at the Government store or warehouse in New York, he mentioned the fact to the storekeeper that the company had on hand a lawsuit over a box which had been consigned to one Rothgerber. The storekeeper recollected it, and on investigation it was found that the box had been seized on suspicion that it contained dutiable articles, as when it came over a man offered $5 and then $10 to have it passed unsearched. The box was taken to the warehouse, and, not being claimed, was sold in January, 1885, to one Lee, a Government employé, for $16. He was hunted up, but refused to give up the box for less than [illegible]. He, however, sold some of its contents for [illegible], and these, consisting of very ordinary wearing apparel, were shown in court as a fair sample of the contents of the long-lost case. The Judge granted a new trial, but the company, which a short time ago offered to settle for $800, now claims it is not responsible at all, as it brought the box to New York and was not liable for the seizure by the Government and subsequent loss.

THE CHICAGO LAND COMPANY.

In the case of Pearce against the Chicago Land Company and others, the receiver, E. B. Sheldon, filed a petition yesterday before Judge Blodgett setting out that in October last Walter S. Gurnee of New York offered to give $125,000 for Blocks 46 and 56 in Elston's Addition to Chicago, payable $25,000 cash and the remainder on the completion of the docking of the property by the receiver. The latter has since completed the docking at an expense of $9,216, and the local stockholders of the company strongly recommend the sale. Thomas Dougall also offers to purchase Lots 33 and 34, Block 76, in Elston's Addition, for $4,000, one-quarter cash, balance one, two, and three years. John Kreklan wants Lot 54, Block 23, in Sheffield's Addition, for $300. Otto Ptag wants Lot 55, Block 23, same addition, for $300, and Eugene B. Moore will take Lots 73, 74, 75, and 76, same block and addition, for $300 each, one-quarter cash. The receiver thinks all these offers are advantageous and advises their acceptance.

PERSISTENT KATE MIDDLETON.

The petition filed in the County Court against George Middleton, to compel him to support his two children, came up before Judge Prendergast yesterday morning. The answer of the defendant states that he and his wife, Kate Middleton, separated March 17, 1885, at which time he gave her over $5,000 worth of new household furniture, besides diamonds to the value of $2,000; that Mrs. Middleton then had a house and lot in Madison, Ind., worth $2,000, and that he has paid her since their separation $750 in cash and bills amounting to $1,000. He further states that she filed a bill for separate maintenance last June, pursuant to which an interlocutory decree was entered by Judge Tuley for the payment of $200 a month to Kate Middleton pending the suit, besides $200 solicitor's fees. An appeal from this decree is pending. Defendant paid the additional solicitor's fees under order of court, Oct. 19, 1885, but the bill was afterward dismissed. Now a bill is pending for the specific performance of their contract of separation. Judge Prendergast heard evidence on the petition for support, and found that George Middleton is the father of the two children. In his answer he disclaimed any knowledge of the existence of one of them, Katie. The court also found that the children were without means of support, and their father able to support them. The case was continued for further action until March 13. Until that time Middleton is to pay into court [illegible] a month for the use of the children. From the order he prayed an appeal, but it was denied him by Judge Prendergast.

THE STOREY WILL CASE.

The inability of Mr. Goudy to be present Monday morning has caused Judge Rogers to postpone until Tuesday the announcement of his decision in the Storey will case. He will deliver a written opinion Tuesday at 10 a. m.

GONE TO JOIN THE JUDGE.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 6.—Hattie Carmen, who has frequently been mentioned in connection with the Judge Yates sensation, left by Rock Island or Wabash Road this morning for Montreal to join the Judge.

For all Lung Complaints and Throat Troubles Dr. Jayne's Expectorant is both a palliative and curative. It is a standard remedy besides for Coughs and Colds, and needs only a trial to prove its merit.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1886.

AT Cleveland, O., yesterday, the remains of the late President Garfield were placed in a bronze sarcophagus.

THE total imports of merchandise at New York during the last week were valued at $5,740,560, exclusive of dry goods.

THE seals of office were yesterday handed to Queen Victoria by the Salisbury Ministry, and by her transferred to the Gladstone Cabinet.

THE Rev. Father William Fennelly, pastor of a Roman Catholic Church at Oneida for twenty years, was struck by the cars at that place yesterday morning, and died in thirty minutes. He was 86 years old.

THE Hydrographic Office at Washington has just issued its February pilot-chart of the North Atlantic Ocean, and devotes a large part of its margin to recommending the use of oil in storms at sea. It says the evidence of the value of oil in a heavy sea continues to be of so satisfactory a nature as to justify the policy of disseminating the facts as widely as possible. The use of mineral oil is not recommended, but the importance of carrying a supply of the animal or vegetable product for use in cases of emergency cannot be overestimated. About one gallon of the latter for every ten miles run by the ship is referred to as having proved sufficient in one case of terrific storm.

GOV. OGLESBY of Illinois has just pardoned a man who was serving a three years' term in the penitentiary for stealing three quarts of ice-cream. The scarcity of this article in Vermilion County, where the heinous crime was committed, probably accounts for the severity of the sentence.

MAYOR SMITH of Cincinnati has suspended Edward Hudson, Superintendent of Police, for insubordination. The Mayor has appointed Arthur G. Moore Superintendent. This brings to a crisis the conflict between the Mayor and the Police Commissioners, as the latter refuse to recognize the validity of Gov. Foraker's action in removing them from office.

THE apparently impossible feat of telephoning through a distance of 2,465 miles was recently performed in Europe. The terminal points of the line were St. Petersburg and Boulogne. The conversation was continuous in spite of the fact of a rather high induction. It is thought possible to beat even this extraordinary achievement in the near future.

THE Dublin Freeman's Journal is probably correct when it says that the Earl of Aberdeen, who has been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, will be "a figurehead" in that office. It would not do to send a strong man there, as he might interfere with Mr. Morley, who goes in the capacity of chief pacificator rather than that of Chief Secretary. The Earl's appointment, however, will please the Ulster Liberals, who are, like him, stanch Presbyterians of the old correct school. He is a man of considerable literary attainments. His training in Ireland will probably fit him for a higher post, which he will soon get, as Mr. Gladstone is his warm personal friend. The new Viceroy is only 39, which is young for a man holding that office.

A WRITER in the hot climate of the East Indies calls attention to the possibility of serious mistake through accepting as correct the school-book statement that sound travels at the rate of 1,093 feet per second. That is its speed at the freezing point of water, or rather at the melting point of ice; but the rapidity of transmission appears to increase about one and three-quarters feet for each degree of temperature. That makes a difference of seventy-five and one-half feet at the temperature of 100° which prevails in India. A shrapnel shell intended to be thrown 1,000 yards, the distance being estimated by sound, would fall seventy-five yards short of the mark aimed at and do no damage. In the shelling of intrenchments at a distance of 4,000 yards the error would amount to about 250 yards, and the result might be to render useless a whole battery of guns.

THE money market was dull and a trifle weak. Sterling bills were strong at unchanged prices. The demand for investment securities was moderate. The New York stock market was dull, and there was a considerable decline in prices.—The Chicago grain market was steadier, with good buying of wheat on reports of a fair export movement at the seaboard, while provisions were easier. As compared with Friday pork closed 12½ cents lower, lard 2½ cents lower, meats 7½ cents lower, wheat unchanged, corn ⅛ cent higher, oats ⅛ cent lower, rye and flaxseeds steady, barley weak. The shipments of wheat from this city last week exceeded the receipts by 10,000 bushels, and those of corn were less by 218,000 bushels. The packing of this city since the beginning of the winter season includes 2,207,000 hogs, against 2,221,000 to the same time last year, and 1,882,000 to the same time in 1884.

THE REORGANIZED COUNTY BOARD.

There was much confidence just after the election in November that the five County Commissioners who had been elected would aid a few clean men of the County Board who held over in giving Cook County an honest and economical government. It was hoped that as soon as they had taken their seats the work of reform and retrenchment would begin. The two Republicans who had been elected were vouched for as reputable citizens of an economical turn of mind who would make their presence felt in the new board greatly to the advantage of the taxpayers; the two Democrats who succeeded were confessedly the best men their party could find for the offices. Their praises as economical business-men were sounded everywhere; and Mr. Geils, the country Independent, was spoken of as a rock of sense and a walking magazine of economical rules, precepts, and ideas.

The new Commissioners have not come up to the public expectation. The Democratic members and the Independent have fallen meekly into the ways that Van Pelt has marked out for them, and the Republicans have not been true to their own pledges or the promises of their friends. One of them refused to aid the honest members who held over to arrange the committees so as to insure some degree of economy in the purchase of supplies; the other, though an honest man, has impaired his usefulness in the board by taking counsel of bad advisers. It is now two months since the new Commissioners took their seats. With the possible exception of some of the members of the Committee on Charities the Commissioners go on spending the county's money lavishly and as uselessly as before the election. Van Pelt and his confederates are as powerful in the board now as they have been at any time. There is hardly a change in the methods pursued. The old ring contractors yet furnish the supplies for the county. The bills for goods of various kinds are filled by the same old firms. The same high prices are charged. Jobbery is resorted to now as before the board was reorganized. At the last meeting the electric-light job was fully consummated and the bill ordered paid, notwithstanding the repeated protest of Commissioner Wren that the work had not been completed and that the lights were defective. Fortune, Hemmelgarn, and Geils—three new members—voted for this payment. The grand jury for February is as bad as any drawn during the Wasserman-Van Pelt régime. It consists largely of saloonkeepers, ward politicians, and professional grand jurors. Many of them were drawn by the new men.

Every effort of the Charities Committee—the only one of the committees economically inclined to cut down expenses—has been bitterly fought. Last week this committee decided to reduce expenses at the Insane Asylum about $500 per month in the item of salaries alone. It was proposed to do this by dispensing with the services of useless officials and by cutting down the salaries of others to reasonable figures. Straightway there was a kick, led by a Commissioner claiming to be a Republican. He was supported by Van Pelt, who was afraid that the Insane Asylum employés who could not earn 50 per cent of the salaries they are now getting at any other place would involve the county in litigation because their salaries were cut 10 per cent. The retrenchment decided on was postponed—perhaps indefinitly—by the aid of the votes of Fortune, Casselman, Geils, and McCarthy, the latter a spoilsman masquerading as a Republican. Thus it goes. The few clean men in the board are naturally disgusted at the turn affairs have taken, and the taxpayers are grievously disappointed at the failure of the new Commissioners to carry out their ante-election pledges. A majority of them have fallen easily into the way of the ringsters. The system of jobbery, extravagance, and corruption is maintained by their influence and their votes. They stand in the way of economical and honest management of the county institutions, and pack grand juries in the interest of notorious law-breakers and criminals. They maintain Van Pelt as chief of the County Board. They have falsified their own pledges and the pledges made for them by their friends.

RELIGIOUS SENTIMENT IN THE SOUTH.

Some weeks ago, in commenting on the spread of prohibition and Sabbatarian laws in the South, THE TRIBUNE pointed out that the people of that section were not only homogeneous in character but as a rule of a strongly-marked religious temperament, the whites as well as the blacks being largely enrolled in the Methodist, Baptist, or Presbyterian Church. With a population native to the soil for many generations and largely under the influence of the clergy, it was only to be expected that in the reorganization of Southern society since the War there would appear a marked tendency toward prohibition and Sabbatarian laws. Under the old régime the South was strict in the observance of Sunday and it had prohibitory laws for the government of at least one-half the population, since the statutes applied practically not only to the blacks but to the "poor whites" living in the rural districts. In the process of reorganizing Southern society the point has now been reached where an effort is making to rehabilitate the old codes as to Sabbath observances and liquor-selling. These results spring naturally from the homogeneous and religious character of the Southern people, and they are not to be matched in any community containing many persons of foreign birth or where the influence of the clergy is weaker.

Some of the Southern papers that feel bound to dispute every expression of opinion coming from the North have denied the assertion that the Southern people are eminently religious, although in so doing these journals put themselves in an amusingly inconsistent position. For instance, the Kissimmee (Fla.) Leader declares the assertion that "free thinking and agnosticism do not flourish south of Mason and Dixon's line" nothing less than "a damnable lie," which implies, of course, that the South abounds in infidelity. Kissimmee contains a considerable admixture of people from the North, and can hardly be regarded as a typical Southern community, but the same issue of the Leader from which we have quoted furnishes abundant proof that the original orthodox sentiment is not yet wholly destroyed. In another column the Leader prints the following from a sermon on "eternal punishment" by one Elder Knapp:

> The soul of the impenitent sinner is plunged by beneficent and omnipotent justice into the awful lake of Hell. Weighted with its sins, it sinks down into the molten billows, and down and down for centuries, for thousands and tens of thousands of years. Each instant of this descent is an awful, an unendurable agony, a thousand times worse than the pressing of the quivering human flesh against blazing coals. Millions of years after the plunge the damned soul rises from the molten depths and emerges on the surface of the seething billows. Casting his despairing eyes across to where the Father sits, he cries, "God, is it not enough?" to which the righteous Father, as His countenance flames with wrath, thunders in a tone which shakes the vaults of Heaven and Hell, "Down, down to all eternity!"

The Leader dissents from the views of Elder Knapp as to an unmodified Sheol, but, as the editor was originally a Northern man, he may perhaps be regarded, even in Florida, as a sort of Ultramontane heretic. In another column of his paper he furnishes still further evidence as to the religious character of Kissimmee by publishing the following extract from the town ordinances.

> SEC. 1. No merchant, shopkeeper, liquor-dealer, bartender, or other person shall keep open store or barter, sell, exchange, or dispose of any goods, wares, or merchandise, spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors the Sabbath-day; provided, that in case of urgent necessity they may dispose of the necessaries of life without keeping open doors.

So that in Kissimmee the "necessaries of life" cannot be sold Sunday except in case of "urgent necessity," and even then it must be done without keeping open doors. If the town ordinances are strictly enforced in Kissimmee and the people are in the habit of listening to sermons like that of Elder Knapp the community must be one of the most strictly religious and orthodox in the United States. With all these evidences at his command we should think the editor of the local paper would rejoice in the superior morality of the place and hold it up for imitation, just as the Rev. Sam Jones does when he declares exultantly that in point of piety and orthodox sentiment Georgia is the model State of the Union. The South owes her power to enforce prohibitory and Sabbatarian laws to the unmixed character of the population and the great influence of the churches. It is for these reasons that the South remains fixed in her ways, holding the old faiths unchanged and sending forth such evangelists as Sam Jones and Sam Small to preach the Gospel of the old version in the North.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK'S READING LIST.

So long as literary tastes differ it will always be a work of supererogation for any man to assume to dictate the hundred best books, even should the dictator happen to be a man as eminent in natural science as Sir John Lubbock, who, in a recent address before the Workingmen's College of London, picked out the hundred best books—in his opinion. The futility of the task is evidenced by the opinions of a large number of persons quite as eminent in various departments of literary and scientific work as himself, whose criticisms of his list have been printed in the Pall Mall Gazette. As might have been expected, they differ radically from him in their judgment, and some of them, like Mr. Ruskin, for instance, who is a model of taste and comprehensive criticism, slash his list until it is barely recognizable.

THE TRIBUNE has already printed this list, and it need not be said that American scholars and connoisseurs will also take frequent exception to his recommendations. Most of all, however, his list will be criticised on this side of the water for its curious and seemingly studied omission of all American books except Mr. Emerson's essays and Mr. Longfellow's poems. Even the works of Washington Irving, than which English literature can produce nothing finer in style since Addison's time, and which are widely read in England, are completely ignored. In his historical selections no reference is made to such American historians as Prescott, Bancroft, Parkman, or Motley, the peer of Macaulay in the fascination of his method. Among our poets Lowell, Bryant, Holmes, Whittier, Halleck, and Poe are omitted, though they outrank many of the English bards whom he mentions. Not one of our scientific writers is named, though in this department, to which he belongs himself, one would have thought he would have recognized such eminent scientists as Agassiz, the great geologists Dana and Owen, the mathematician Pierce, the botanist Gray, whose sketch of the American flora was voted the ablest paper read before the British Association for the Advancement of Science last year, or Prof. Draper, one of the most profound of modern thinkers on physiology, intellectual development, chemistry, and other scientific subjects. In politics Mr. Lubbock confines himself to English statesmen. He seems never to have heard of the wonderful speeches of Daniel Webster, which will bear comparison with the finest specimens of British eloquence. Among all our American writers of fiction not one is accepted by him, not even Cooper, the master of woodcraft, or Mrs. Stowe, whose "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has had more readers in the various countries of the world than Dickens even. In theology we have not had many great writers, but among the clergy what modern preacher has been more eloquent than Beecher?

Sir John Lubbock's list is a remarkable illustration of the insular egotism of Englishmen; but, after all, the truth is that his list represents only his own taste. There are numerous authors of widespread renown whom he apparently has not read at all because his tastes do not run in that direction. There are many whom he has read and recommends whom other people do not read. For instance, he omits Dante, who is widely read, and puts in Bacon, whom he may read himself while not one intelligent person in 10,000 ever looks at his works, famous as they are. But, after all, it is superfluous to criticise Sir John Lubbock's selections. They show his taste, but they do not reflect the taste of other people. No list of 100 works can be made up by any person, however intelligent he may be, that will suit even twenty per cent of any 100 intelligent readers. There is great truth in the old writing-book copy, "Many men of many minds." Some people's tastes turn them to history, some to natural science, some to politics and political economy, some to literature, and some to poetry, while the multitude rush to fiction and humor. The list of books which Mark Twain might recommend, for instance, would not suit Prof. Sumner. Mr. Whittier's list would not suit Senator Edmunds, nor Senator Edmunds' list Henry James, nor Henry James' list Dr. Talmage. Sex, age, education, temperament, early training, pursuits, as well as natural taste, all serve their purpose in determining what kind of books a person will choose to read. The moral of all this is that Sir John Lubbock's list is of value only to Sir John Lubbock. If the truth were known it would probably be found that among his auditors in the Workingmen's College scarcely one had ever or will ever read the larger number of the books he recommended. The tendencies of taste are as radical in reading as they are in eating or in amusement, and it is well that it is so. It a universal literary taste could be manufactured and squared to suit a particular literary regimen it would be a dreary world so far as the encouragement of authors is concerned.

HAMBURG BUTLER'S LYING STATISTICS.

In the course of the debate on the Dakota bill Butler of South Carolina made the preposterous assertion that in 1884 the State of Illinois polled only 62 per cent of its total vote. This ridiculous assertion was based on a table of stuffed statistics used recently by the Democratic press, but whose falsity was completely exposed some months ago by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. If some of the Republican Senators had read this paper with greater care they would have been able to expose Butler's ridiculous assertion on the spot and estop him from sending out such notoriously false statements to the country. The vote of Illinois in 1884 was 672,849, being over 50,000 in excess of that cast in 1880, and a slight consideration of the facts will show that it was at least 93 per cent of the voting population and as heavy a poll as could be reasonably expected in any State under any circumstances.

Remembering that the vote of Illinois in 1884 was over 50,000 in excess of that at the previous Presidential election, it is necessary to go back to the census year of 1880 to compare the number of voters with the total population. In that year Illinois had a native white adult population of 505,000, and the vote polled was 622,159, which indicates the proportion of votes cast by the 13,000 blacks and the naturalized foreigners. Through some blunder which the census officials have never been able to explain the entire adult foreign-born population of Illinois is classed as "males over 21," and the same mistake having been perpetrated in other States the tables show that of all the foreign-born men, women, and children in the United States over one-half are voters! With the native population there is only one voter to four of population, but in 1880 there were at least 850,000 foreigners in the United States who could not have been naturalized legally, since they had come into the country within five years. Many foreigners, especially Englishmen, are never naturalized, and thousands fail to take out their papers promptly at the end of five years, a fair average being from six to seven years after they come to the United States. It seems clear that in stating the foreign-born adult population of Illinois as 277,889 in 1880 it was intended to include men and women. Supposing on a liberal estimate that one-half were voters, Illinois had in 1880 139,000 persons entitled to cast their ballots on naturalization papers. Adding this to the 13,000 blacks and the 505,000 native white voters and 657,000 would have been the largest possible poll in the State. From this must be deducted the insane, paupers, prisoners, inmates of charitable institutions, hospitals, etc., as well as a considerable number absent from home or who had not lived in the State, county, or election district a sufficient time to entitle them to vote, and still others who paired or were "crowded out" at the polls. It has been estimated on the basis of elaborate calculations that the classes named, together with the aged and infirm, will amount to 7 per cent, and it is never expected that any community can poll over 93 per cent of its total vote. Yet, when a deduction of 7 per cent is made, it will be found that in 1880 instead of 611,000, as the highest reasonably to be expected, Illinois actually cast 622,159 votes. This simply means that the election called out every vote that could be had and brought many of the sick, the aged, and the infirm to the polls. So far from justifying the ridiculous assertion of Senator Butler the vote in Illinois in 1880 was the greatest that could possibly have been expected, and reached the extraordinary proportions of at least 93 per cent of the total voting population. It may be doubted whether a more exhaustive poll ever took place in any State in the Union.

Senator Butler might have gained some enlightenment by comparing the vote of Illinois with the total population and learned that the voters in this State are about one out of five, whereas in South Carolina in 1884 the proportion was about one in ten. With a population returned in 1880 as 995,577 South Carolina cast in 1884 only 91,578 votes, or a poll of only 50 per cent, indicating that nearly one-half the voters failed to cast their ballots. Comparisons taken from 1880 and 1884 show the following significant results:

	Total population.	Actual vote.	Ratio about
Mississippi	1,131,597	116,401	1 in 10
New York	5,082,871	1,103,945	1 in 4½
Ohio	3,198,062	724,941	1 in 4½

This comparison, however, is not strictly fair, since the North has a large foreign-born population; but, even with this allowance made for the Southern States, they still show a poll only one-half that in Illinois, New York, or Ohio. With these plain, undenied, and indisputable facts before him Senator Butler ignorantly or craftily attempted to make a comparison by counting all the adult foreigners in the North as voters, and on this based his preposterous assertion that Illinois cast in 1880 only 62 per cent of her vote. Unless Butler's assertions are explained on the score of stupid ignorance, they must be regarded as proving that a Southern Senator, even when sitting in the Senate of the United States, cannot resist the temptation to Mackinize or Daltonize election figures so as to make them lie in the face of facts known to the entire country.

BRITISH DIPLOMATIC BUNKO.

The chapter from the second volume of Mr. Blaine's book giving the history of the fisheries question, printed in THE TRIBUNE of yesterday, is a timely contribution to the discussion of that subject, and so far as it touches upon the arbitration phase alone furnishes an overwhelming reason why Congress should peremptorily refuse to sanction the new commission which the President has recommended.

The story of the Joint High Commission as told by Mr. Blaine is the story of a Joint High Diplomatic bunko game practiced upon us by England and Austria with the connivance of Canada. It is not necessary to review the circumstances leading up to the arbitration. They have already been frequently discussed and are familiar to our readers. In the article providing for it, it was agreed that one of the three Commissioners should be appointed by the President, one by England, and the third by England and the United States conjointly, and in case they could not agree within a period of three months after the article went into effect then the third Commissioner was to be named by the Austrian Minister at London. Shortly afterwards the English Government was notified by Secretary Fish that we would suggest a certain number of names from which a selection might be made of the third Commissioner. Such a list was sent, containing the names of the various Ministers in Washington, except those who from their peculiarly friendly relations to the English Government would feel disqualified from acting. Among those omitted was M. Delfosse, the Belgian Minister. There were good reasons for omitting him. In the first place, he was prejudiced in favor of England; in the second place, the King of Belgium was a cousin of Victoria, had married an Austrian Princess, and his sister was the unfortunate Carlotta, for the death of whose husband, Maximilian, Austria held this country indirectly responsible.

Now the bunko game of diplomacy began. The reply to Secretary Fish's notification was a request from Lord Granville that M. Delfosse, whose name had been specially omitted, should be the third Commissioner. It is needless to say that Secretary Fish promptly objected to this impertinent proposition, and set forth his reasons. Lord Granville replied that under these circumstances he must consult Canada as to her wishes, and intimated that she wanted the choice left to the Austrian Minister. After long and provoking correspondence, which was protracted by England in order to consume the three months' limitation, Lord Granville deliberately proposed M. Delfosse. Secretary Fish declined him, and was then notified that Canada declined the services of any one of the Ministers resident in Washington, though Canada under the treaty had nothing to do with the selection.

The next move in the bunko game was a suggestion from Lord Granville that probably the American and English Ministers at The Hague might agree upon some Dutch gentleman who would act. This suggestion was promptly rejected because it was a palpable evasion of the treaty, but it answered the English purpose of using up time.

At last, disgusted with the English quibbles and delays, Secretary Fish notified Lord Granville that we would waive the question of time in hopes that the two Governments might agree upon the third party. This was what England wanted. When the three months were up Lord Granville notified Secretary Fish that the limit had expired and that the selection now rested with the Austrian Minister in London. Secretary Fish protested in vain. Lord Granville announced that the choice had been left with Count von Beust, the Austrian Minister, who had a special grievance against us and was specially friendly to England. Of course he named M. Delfosse, and Canada, which had protested against the appointment of any Minister in Washington, approved the selection.

Thus the bunko game was set up on us, largely through Secretary Fish's want of firmness in objecting to Delfosse first, last, and all the time. The result is well known. The commission met in Halifax, and by the aid of forged entries, false vouchers, doctored books, and the Belgian Minister, prejudiced beforehand in England's favor, we were mulcted in the sum of $5,500,000. In the face of this swindling transaction, and in despite of the petition of the American fishermen, the President and Secretary Bayard, without authority from the Senate, deliberately arranged with the English Minister to extend the one-sided treaty for six months from the time of its expiration, with the understanding that the President would further recommend to Congress the appointment of another commission. If there were no other reason against it the recollection of the bunko game set up on us by England, Austria, and Canada ought to be sufficient to induce Congress to unanimously refuse its consent.

THE faith-cure people occasionally tell of those who through faith, after long years of confinement to bed, literally take up their beds and walk. Evidence to support these statements is lacking. The nearest thing to authentic testimony in this line is furnished by Judge Yates, late of Peoria. The people down there had unlimited faith in the Judge, which he reciprocated, not exactly by walking off with his bed, but with everything else he could lay his hands on. There is no doubt that if he had been given a little more time he would have got away with the bed also.

IT is well known that the Eastern Congressmen occasionally make trades with the legislators from the wild and howling West. For instance, Congressmen from the vicinity of Boston and New York, and other points where agriculture is subordinated to literary culture, will trade their quota of seeds to the Congressmen who have agricultural constituencies for public documents. As a rule, the books in this way go to the cities and the seeds to the rural districts. Mr. Lawler's constituency, living altogether in the city, one of the rural members approached him the other day for the purpose of making a trade, but was astonished to find the Congressman from the Second District was determined to send home all his seeds:

"Why, Lawler," remonstrated the rural member, "none of your constituents are farmers. What use will they have for the seeds?"

"O, go away wid ye; what use do ye suppose they'd have for the public dockyments?"

"To read, of course."

"An' much ye know about my constitooency. Why, man alive, they can sell the seeds. And what use would there be in carting books to a city where ye can buy good kindling-wood for 50 cents a load?"

AMONG the dutiful subjects who lately received titles at the hands of the Ice King in St. Paul was the Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, who was made Duke of Atlantis. If the new Duke will proceed to drain and generally improve his estate he will make it a much more desirable place of residence. Its condition has become notorious.

THE "company store" continues its appearance as a factor in differences between coal operators and miners. The "company store" may be all right frequently, but there is a smirch on its reputation. Where kindly provision ends and monopoly begins is a line which, there is reason to believe, is crossed too frequently.

COL. MURAT HALSTEAD is believed to be in good spirits just at present. He has endured a good deal of abuse, but his foot, if not on the neck of his lampooner, is at least in the vicinity of his coat-tail.

WE earnestly direct the attention of the Commercial Club and the Literary Club to the urgent need of reform among the lawyers of Chicago. If half that they say of each other is true they are the class in this community most in need of missionary effort. And the Judges, too! No lawyer ever yet lost a case without deciding that the Judge was either a fool or a rascal, and the Judges know many of the lawyers must be so described. The lawyers and Judges ought to be reformed.

MOST of the large cities have a district from which is frequently sent to Congress some ignorant blatherskite, never an American, and usually a ward politician of the lowest type, whose presence in the National Legislature is an absurdity and a disgrace. Why is it that these districts are never Republican? Why is it that the "tough" portion of a city is never Republican?

IT is reported that an old soldier recently refused to accept a pension on account of disability incurred in the service because the Government's revenues were partly derived from whisky. Some people may think that this was St. John; but it was not.

GOV. ROBINSON is not wholly exempt from the feeling prevalent among men outside of journalism (especially among lawyers and pork-packers) that they know a little better how newspapers should be conducted than do those whose business it is to conduct them. This is a flattering opinion to those who cherish it, but it has cost a great many men a very pretty sum of money in the vain attempt to justify it.

ANOTHER big oil-well has been developed in Ohio. This, notwithstanding many recent events that would imply a different state of affairs, may insure the continuance of a Democratic Senator from the State named.

THE Philadelphia Press has no more gallantry than a mule. It refers to the Star-Eyed Goddess of Reform as a "toothless crone with pencilled eyebrows, scrawny arms, and bony hands, and she wears a wig of Kentucky hemp," and says: "If this wrinkled and weazened wretch imagines she can flirt around Washington and captivate any of the enlightened statesmen assembled there she is fearfully mistaken." We are very much mistaken if the Philadelphia Press does not hear from Col. Watterson of Kentucky soon. He is the one bound in all honor, now, to defend the Goddess, and the description which appears above is but an outrage. The Star-Eyed Goddess of Reform is not a toothless crone who wears a wig, but a lissom young thing, with white neck and cheeks which need no paint, and abundance of rich tresses all her own. She is ravishing of form and feature, and but for her escapades with Watterson and Morrison would be a belle today. We hope to see the Colonel she loved not wisely but too well at least defend her claims to beauty.

CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK remarks in a recent work that "A star of abnormal glister might palpitate with some fine supernal thrill of dawn." Is it possible that a residence in the suburbs of St. Louis has affected Charles Egbert Craddock's style? Down there they call the sort of thing quoted eloquent writing.

MAGISTRATES in St. Louis are thoughtful. The other day a young man was arrested for burglary. Before being brought up for trial, under charge of an officer, he was taken out and married to a St. Louis girl to whom he was affianced. When this was made known to the magistrate he promptly released the young man. He probably considered that the demands of justice were fully satisfied.

MAD-DOGS seem to be particularly prevalent in poor old Missouri, so much so that there is danger of this species of Missouri property becoming extinct from the efforts of overzealous people who shoot and kill indiscriminately. If the coon dogs are killed off in Missouri and any misfortune should befall the mules the State would go into bankruptcy.

A NEW YORK policeman who had a bartender arrested for violating the excise law in selling the officer a whisky sour ignobly failed, and also incurred a reprimand from the magistrate because he could neither tell of what ingredients the drink was composed nor identify it in court. This shows lamentable ignorance on the part of the New York police, and, since reform is the order of the day, the policeman should go. A Western man so notoriously and palpably incompetent would be ashamed to apply for a position as one of the guardians of the peace.

But straightway advertises.
Then comes a sudden boom to trade,
—Boston Courier.

Max knows a young woman who is not afraid of her convictions. She lives in a house where Methodism is the prevailing creed. One day the dominie who has the care of souls in that particular family came to make a pastoral visit. After conversing with the elder members of the family on their spiritual welfare, he turned to the young woman in question and said, with all unctuousness: "And you, my dear daughter, are you a child of God?" "No, Doctor," said the young woman, "I'm an Episcopalian."—Buffalo Express.

Not long ago a young man called upon a Paris doctor and asked him whether his uncle, whom the doctor had attended for many years, was not failing very fast; "for," he said, "we notice that, whenever he plays picquet, he will insist upon marking ten points too many, and that nothing that we can say will persuade him that he is mistaken. Is not this a very bad sign?" The doctor, smiling, assured him that he had nothing to fear (or hope) upon that head; "but," he added, "if your uncle should begin marking ten points too few, send for me at once."

A man who had never seen the inside of a law court until he was recently introduced as a witness in a case pending in one of the Scottish courts, on being sworn took a position with his back to the jury, and began telling his story to the Judge. The Judge, in a bland and courteous manner, said: "Address yourself to the jury, sir." The man made a short pause, but, not comprehending what was said to him, forthwith continued his narrative. The Judge was then more explicit, and said to him: "Speak to the jury, sir—the men sitting behind you on the benches." The witness at once turned around, and, making an awkward bow, said, with great gravity: "Good morning, gentlemen!"

PERSONALS.

Joseph Cook, in the plenitude of his philosophy, says: "The trouble with Ireland is that it is Ireland." This suggests to a Hibernian friend a solution to another grave question—"The trouble with Joseph Cook is that he is Joseph Cook."—Boston Traveller.

"You should visit the Supreme Court tomorrow," Judge Bradley is credited with having said once, "for there will be some interesting arguments made. Mr. Sidney Bartlett of Boston is on one side and Mr. Roscoe Conkling is on the other; and one of them is a great lawyer."

A short time ago was printed an account of the heroism shown by Maude Long of Independence, Mo., who walked three miles after midnight, on a bitter cold night, to rescue two children who had been left by a madman to die in the snow. It is pleasant to tell that the citizens of Kansas City, appreciating her pluck, have given Miss Maude a handsome watch, suitably inscribed, a diamond ring of considerable value, and over $300 in money. As for the man, S. S. Baker, whose crazy freak gave occasion for Miss Long's heroism, he is in a private asylum in Philadelphia, and the doctors say that there is very little hope of his recovery.

Mr. Buck, the Kentuckian sent as Minister to Peru, has stirred the fashionable circle of Lima to its centre by appearing at a state official dinner in a business suit. The dinner was given in his honor, and he was the only one who did not appear in evening dress. Mr. Buck honestly states in his own defense that he had not in his wardrobe such a thing as a swallow-tail, so some of the Americans have formed a syndicate to supply him with an evening dress suit. The Rt.-Hon. W. E. Forster of England committed a similar gaucherie at a dinner in his honor given at the Union League Club, New York.

Says a Washington Letter to the Philadelphia Inquirer: "It is common talk in Washington that Mr. Cleveland has been looking around for an Indiana man to go on the ticket with him in 1888, and has at last pitched upon Senator Voorhees, the Tall Sycamore of the Wabash. Mr. Cleveland, with one eye on New York, looks to Indiana with her fifteen votes and such other Western States as may be induced in the next four years to turn Democratic. He knows Senator Voorhees' power on the stump, where he is simply matchless, and it is often heard that Cleveland and Voorhees is the ticket which Mr. Cleveland favors. Senator Voorhees is in high favor at the White House, and anybody who thinks Grover Cleveland is not figuring on 1888 is mightily mistaken."

A Washington letter to the Lewiston (Me.) Journal says: "A good story is told of ex-Gov. Long of Massachusetts and Congressman Reed of Maine. A newspaper reporter, in referring to possible Presidential candidates recently, mentioned Mr. Long and Mr. Reed as among the number. A few days later he met Mr. Long, who thanked him for the compliment, but said: 'You will have to withdraw my name now. Reed and I have made a bargain. He has offered me $15 to withdraw in his favor and make a speech nominating him at the next Republican Convention. The only hitch in the proceedings is, that I want the $15 down; but he wants to pay $5 now and the other $10 after the speech is made.'"

FROM THE FOREIGN MAILS.

Master Courtenay, in the Dublin Common Pleas Division, decided that the security of the late Prof. McKane, M. P., for Mr. Callan's petition against the return of Mr. Joseph Nolan for North Louth is sufficient. The petition will accordingly proceed.

A miser who died at Canterbury is reported to have left an immense sum of money and a large number of most valuable paintings, including several Raphaels and Vandycks. He had bricked up many of the windows of his house and left only one door.

The Kentish Observer states that, in consequence of the agricultural depression in Kent, the income derived by the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury from the rents of their farms has diminished by about £4,000. With a view to economize their expenditure, the Chapter have been obliged to reduce the gratuities hitherto granted to the lay clerks of the cathedral by £ per annum each, while in other matters also it has been found necessary to retrench to the utmost.

The latest idea of the German Government—later than the proposal to make brandy a state perquisite—is said to be an Oriental Academy in which young men would be trained for diplomatic and consular work in the East. The advantages of such an institution as this must be recognized. Government officials in the lands of the rising sun must, in order to do their work properly, be versed in the languages spoken around them. To acquire knowledge of Eastern tongues is not a simple matter, and it is plain that, when the tongues have to be learned on the spot, the interests which should be protected must, in part at any rate, suffer. If, as is proposed, the Oriental Academy spoken about in Berlin should be associated with the university there, the Government would have at its command an agency of great value to the diplomatic service of the country. We have not yet seen the last evidence of how thoroughly alive the Germans are in these latter days.

THEY WOULD MARRY,

"Yer's yer New York and Chicago newspapers pictorials, illustrated magazines, pamphlets, and bound books. Yer's yer 'Art an' 'And, the greatest matrimonial newspaper published," howled the train-boy as he flaunted a copy of his literature before the face of a TRIBUNE reporter upon an incoming train yesterday. An old man with a broad-brimmed felt hat and a long frock coat that gave him the appearance of a Pennsylvania Quaker dropped into his lap a copy of the morning paper he was reading, and, over the rim of his gold-bound spectacles, looked with inquiring eyes at the enterprising "train butcher."

"Yes, sir, yer ye are," replied the boy as he whisked a copy of the paper from the bundle under his arm. "Offers to provide any man's livin', young or old, with a wife on short notice, sir."

The old man, with an expression of mingled curiosity and amusement, purchased the copy, and, judging from his manner, was soon deeply interested in its contents.

"Just 16, and good enough for any man," he read aloud, as with a smile he folded the paper and turned to the reporter, who sat in the same seat.

"Here, young man, mayhap this may interest you more than it will me. I only purchased it out of curiosity. A matrimonial paper! Why, bless me! I wonder what our folks down in Massachusetts would a' thought if some feller had opened up a sheet like that in our community when I was a boy. In them days we didn't need anybody to help us get husbands and wives. This is the last thing I expected to live to see—a newspaper 'devoted to the dissemination of useful knowledge for the unmarried.'"

A visit to the business-office and editorial rooms, in Madison street near Clark, showed the reporter a snug room, with a very brisk and energetic young man seated at a desk near the window. This proved to be the editor. At another desk was seated a meek-looking young man with blue eyes, light hair, and a red necktie, busily engaged in filing away a pile of letters before him, and just opposit a woman of uncertain age, with eyeglasses. A gray-haired man was the only remaining occupant of the office, and all turned an inquiring glance in the direction of the door as the reporter entered.

"We issued 25,000 copies of the last number," said the editor in answer to the reporter's inquiry, "and shall issue even a greater number in our next. We come out once a month and go to every portion of the country, but principally to the West."

"Do you guarantee to provide an applicant with a life partner?"

HOW THEY WORK IT.

"O, no; nothing of that kind. We simply offer to publish the advertisements which are sent us at so much a line, and receive the answers at this office. For instance"—and here the editor produced a copy of the paper—"you will see that our fifth, sixth, and seventh pages are devoted to such ads. Now Miss N. of Newark, N. J., sends us her ad describing her charms, her possessions, and her qualifications, and indicating the kind of a man she wants for her husband. She sends us her full address, etc., but we do not publish this unless it is desired. We simply publish the ad as sent us opposit a certain number, say 5,000. The young man who wishes to reply to Miss N. does so by inclosing his letter to us with the number 5,000 written on the upper right-hand corner of the envelope, where the stamp is customarily attached. We then turn to our files and find the address of No. 5,000, after which we mail the letter accordingly. The young woman receives the letter and writes the young man, if she likes the style of his letter. If she does not like it, then he receives no reply and we never reveal an address intrusted to us. Of course after the first exchange the parties continue their correspondence independently of us, and we lose track of them unless they advertise with us again."

"Do they exchange photographs through you?"

"No; but we help advertisers in the matter of photographs by what we term our 'stamp photos'; for instance, a young woman sends us an ad, and with it her photograph. We have a sheet of small photographs made, of the same size and exactly upon the principle of a sheet of postage-stamps. These, together with the young woman's photograph, are returned to her at the rate of fifty for $1, so you see if the young woman receives fifty answers to her advertisement, each requesting a photograph of herself, she can supply the demand at a comparatively trifling cost."

"What percentage of your correspondents marry as the result of their being placed in communication?"

SAMPLE "ADS."

Some of the advertisements inserted are certainly novel and undoubtedly original in wording and expression. For instance, No. 4,667 says:

An intelligent widow, refined and upright, good-looking, warm-hearted and sincere, with that true womanly heart necessary for a good wife and happy home. Wants a husband between 45 and 75 years old, her equal in honor and intelligence, and with means.

Here are a number of others:

A country school teacher, aged 20, who is regarded as "very successful," "strictly commonsense," and an "ornament to society" by her friends, a reader of seven excellent papers, and very liberal in her views, wishes to correspond with sensible, well-to-do young men. Object, improvement and acquaintance.

An affectionate girl of 23 years, light five feet five inches, weight 135, called very good looking, of a kind but loving disposition, wishes to correspond with a gentleman of some means who is respectable, temperate, and industrious. Object, a "hubby."

4,651. This is worth your attention. I am an intelligent and good-looking widow, 43 years old, five feet one inch in hight, weight 115 pounds, with dark hair, a light complexion, and a perfect form. My family connections are excellent; I move in the highest circles and enjoy refined society, but my tastes are thoroughly domestic. Am a good housekeeper, and consider home the woman's heaven. I possess a cheerful disposition and am inclined to look upon the bright side of every picture. Would like to correspond with a number of true gentlemen, those past 40 years of age preferred, with a view to matrimony. I do not object to money, yet it is not my object; a true-hearted man is what I want. All letters will be answered immediately and in all sincerity.

HOW THE MEN ASK FOR PARTNERS.

It is from the male sufferers outside the paradise of connubial bliss, however, that the most interesting collection of appeals come. These are from railroad-men, dry-goods, grocery, and bank clerks, ranchmen, miners, telegraph operators, druggists, mechanics, soldiers, lawyers, doctors, and others in every position and avocation in life from the cowboy in Montana to the "elegant man of means and leisure in a large city." No. 4,722 is a member of the Presbyterian Church and 25 years old. He lives in Washington Territory, and says his ideal "is a young woman refined in mind, and beauty would be no objection if the soul corresponds."

No. 4,745 thinks that he is "a 'snap' for some nice-looking, smart girl, as he weighs 175 pounds and possesses a valuable piece of property."

Here is one worthy of reprinting:

Any widow lady who has $7,000 to invest can have a good home, work as she pleases, make money, and have everything secure. I can furnish her with any references she may ask for. Particulars made known by letter.

This young man is too kind. His offer to let a widow "do as she pleases," provided she pays him $7,000 for the privilege, is doubtless standing yet, and will be until the young man is no longer young. As a rule widows do as they please and make somebody else pay for it.

A resident of Kansas writes:

Any lady wanting to marry the best man in Kansas had better answer this. Is 58 years of age, good looking, with a small property and no family. Address Box 24, Detroit, Dickinson County, Kas.

Mr. Marshall Woods of Ash Fork, A. T., begins his advertisement for a wife with: "I Sought with the 'Lost Cause,' but now fight With Cleveland and the Democrats: am a Methodist of temperate habits; and my home is and shall ever be in the sun-kissed land of Arizona, the stockman's paradise and the consumptives' home, where the finest climate in the world is to be found."

Perhaps the gem of the lot, however, is one from Mr. Edward Reichenbach, at Orrville, O., in which the writer says:

Am a wealthy farmer's son, having excellent mental and physical development, education, business ability, independence, courage, stability, morality, honor, affection, mild temper, robust health, dark hair, gray eyes, fair complexion, average size and well proportioned, varied experience, traveled 75,000 miles, and wrote several hundred essays for publication. I wish to correspond with young ladies who are loving, intelligent, and properly developed and trained. To such I guarantee an entertaining correspondence, a valuable secret, and perhaps a comfortable future.

The future Mrs. Carter must be an orphan, between five feet and five feet six inches in hight, 120 and 146 pounds in weight, and 18 and 24 years of age, and possess the following qualities: Charity, industry, knowledge of domestic affairs, kind, affectionate disposition, health, and beauty. Advertiser is 28 years old, a Yankee, with every essential for a good husband, and believes that a man who doesn't have a little heaven here below isn't "N. G." Any lady filling the bill will never regret addressing Charles C. Carter, Hyatt, Tyler County, Tex.

Mr. Carter states as a starter that he will take no chances. "The future Mrs. Carter must be an orphan." She shall spring no mother-in-law on Mr. Carter if he knows himself, and he evidently does.

HOW TO GET RICHES AND RETAIN THEM.

Don't speculate in anything whatsoever that you are not conversant with.
Don't go on any one's bond.
Don't drink when not asked.
Don't buy anything you don't need.
Don't waste your time.
Don't marry an extravagant woman.
Don't marry an extravagant man.
Don't marry a penurious man.
Don't marry a penurious woman.
Don't get amusement-crazy.
Don't get crazy at all.
Don't buy wheat at all.
Don't spend money.
Don't dabble in stocks.
Don't stay out late at night.
Don't have anything to do with politics.
But make money by saving it and buying anything and everything at Revell's Temple of Economy, corner of Fifth avenue and Randolph street, whose practical experience with economy in household goods has enabled even the most humble to butter their bread on the right side, put jell on the other, and use cream in their coffee at all times.

T. NELSON & SON, WALL-PAPER DEALERS, PAINTERS AND DECORATORS.

This firm was established in 1856, since which time they have occupied a prominent position as decorators, house painters, hardwood finishers, etc. Their constantly-increasing business has rendered larger quarters and more central location necessary. In consequence they have recently moved to their new store, 246 Wabash avenue, where they have concentrated their different departments, making one of the most complete establishments in their line in the city. They will carry a large and varied stock of fine paper hangings and decorations, and are prepared to offer special inducements.

A CHANGE.

W. H. Furlong, who has been manager of the Putnam Clothing House for the last eight years, has resigned his position with that institution to accept a similar one with the United States Clothing House, southeast corner of Madison and Halsted streets. It is hardly necessary to state that the Putnam Clothing House, under Mr. Furlong's efficient management, has grown to be one of the largest establishments of its kind in the city. The U. S. Clothing Co. should congratulate themselves upon securing the services of Mr. Furlong as their manager. There is no doubt that the trade of this house will be largely increased under his direction.

ST. CAROLINE'S COURT HOTEL.

This well-known West Side hotel, pleasantly located at the corner of Washington boulevard and Elizabeth street, within fifteen minutes' ride of the business centre by three street-car lines, has large, sunny rooms, with open fires, double glass windows, a passenger elevator, a cuisine equal to the best, and is not equaled in Chicago as a convenient winter residence for persons desiring hotel accommodations at moderate prices, outside of the cold lake winds and the noisy centre of the city.

"THE ALBION."

The elegant appointments and unequaled cuisine of the Albion Café, in the Pullman Building, make it a favorite resort for both ladies and gentlemen, who are always sure of the most courteous attention.

Several suites of beautiful rooms are reserved for private luncheon and dinner parties.

WM. E. HINCHLIFF & CO.

Have just contracted to furnish the red pressed-brick for the new school building corner of York and Laflin streets.

W. E. BAINE, ACCOUNTANT.

Partnership interests adjusted. Accounts that have been imperfectly kept examined and straightened. Individual instruction in bookkeeping. Large experience; excellent references. Address 290 Elm street.

The Most Attractive.

There are no paintings in Milwaukee, with the exception of those bought at the Seney sale in New York recently, that attract as much attention as do the Tojetti pictures in Chapman's store.

Cure of Pleurisy.

90 MAIN-ST, GLOUCESTER, MASS., April 16, 1885.

Allcock's Porous Plasters have been used in our family for the last three or four years with very beneficial results. Previous to that time I had been subjected to attacks of severe pain in my left side. Hot cloths and liniments afforded temporary relief, but after a while the pain always returned. In the fall of 1880, after a very severe attack, I was advised by a friend to try Allcock's Porous Plaster on my side, which greatly benefited me. After that I tried several kinds of plasters to see which was best, and finally decided that Allcock's suited my case the best. I have worn them constantly on my side ever since, and have never been troubled with the pain except when I left them off for a few days. We always keep a supply in the house, and whenever a pain seizes any of us in any part of the body we just apply an Allcock's Plaster, and can most heartily recommend them.

JAMES PETTIGREW.

Wirth & Dickie have admitted Mr. Nathan S. Gutman to the firm, which will hereafter be Wirth, Dickie & Co. They have added to Lorillard's tobaccos a full line of imported Key West and domestic cigars.

At the regular annual meeting of E. B. Millar & Co., spice importers and grinders, the old Board of Directors and officers were reelected unanimously, as follows: S. O. Blair, President; H. W. Dudley, Vice-President; G. H. Clark, Treasurer; and G. E. Fuller, Secretary.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

After a Prolonged Struggle.

In 1884 I contracted blood poison. Since that time I have suffered tortures from an affection of the skin, rheumatism, and ulcerating sores. During those long years of disease I underwent treatment at the hands of leading physicians in Norwich, Hartford, Providence, Boston, and Chicago. Failing to get relief at one place I would go to another, but met with the same treatment and effect everywhere. The quantities of mercury and potash I have taken have not only done me no good, but I believe it has done much harm. I have been taking S. S. S. six weeks, and it is hard to believe my own feelings, though the fact that it has done more for me in that short time than all other medicines have in twenty years is plain and undeniable. Six weeks ago I was a total wreck, without hope. Now that I have taken fourteen bottles of S. S. S. my rheumatism is among the things of the past, and the scars only show that I was diseased. When I began taking Swift's Specific there was a large eating ulcer over my right eye which alarmed me greatly, and no one who saw it thought I would ever get well. Like the other, it is gone, and I thank God for the creation of the Swift Specific Co. and their great remedy.

Prof. Leigh Hunt, Ames, Ia.; Baron E. J. Jezmanouki, New York; and F. A. Weiss, Geneva, Switzerland, are at the Palmer.

Mr. A. L. Belknap, for many years with the firm of Murry Nelson & Co., will leave Chicago this evening to take up his residence in Huron, Dak.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fergus celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Monday evening. They came to Chicago in July, 1836, and have lived here ever since.

IN GENERAL.

The boot and shoe store of W. Robertson at No. 433 West Madison street was burglarized Thursday night of goods amounting to $125. No arrests have been made in connection with the occurrence.

The temperature yesterday, as observed by Manasse, optician (TRIBUNE Building), was as follows: Thermometer, 8 a. m., 21° above zero; 9 a. m., 22°; 10 a. m., 24°; 11 a. m., 25°; 12 m., 26°; 1 p. m., 28°; 3 p. m., 29°; 6 p. m., 29°. Barometer, 8 a. m., 29.48; 6 p. m., 29.53.

At the last regular meeting of the Regents' Association, Royal Arcanum, the following officers were elected: President, H. S. Burkhardt; Vice-President, C. C. Wetherell; Secretary, Dr. H. B. Sanders; Treasurer, Dr. A. B. Clark; Sentry, Samuel E. Erickson.

At the meeting of the Philosophical Society last evening in Apollo Hall the Rev. J. Vila Blake, pastor of the Third Unitarian Church, read a paper on "Music as Language." Music he regarded as a peculiar possession of mankind, and to call the song of birds music was, in his opinion, to misuse words.

At a regular meeting of Chicago Division, No. 7, U. R. K. of P., John E. Stearns was unanimously reëlected Sir Kt. Com; Harry Baningan, First-Lieutenant; James H. Lambert, Second-Lieutenant; Samuel Sheffer and John F. Ryan, Treasurer and Recorder; Sir Knights Peter Odlin and Charles West, Guard and Sentinel, respectively.

Joseph Pahl was fined $25 by Justice Kersten yesterday for cruelty to his horse in leaving it tied to a post and unblanketed at the corner of Garfield avenue and Larrabee street while he was in a saloon drinking beer. The man was angry, but he paid his fine when the court told him that he had, according to the testimony of an officer of the Humane Society, violated Sec. 1,607 of the municipal code.

George Webber and William Williams, two of the men said to be implicated in the theft of paper from Rand, McNally & Co., who were out on $2,000 bail to appear before Justice Meech the 15th inst., were rearrested yesterday on a capias and the amount of their bonds raised to $10,000. The reason given is that their operations were found to be on a much larger scale than was at first suspected.

County Attorney William Law and Mrs. Law, County Commissioner George C. Klehm and daughter, William Harley and Mrs. Harley, ex-County Commissioner Adam Ochs and Mrs. Ochs, and Mrs. C. L. Frey, wife of Warden Frey of the infirmary, will leave tomorrow night for a pleasure trip to Jacksonville, Fla., and New Orleans. The party will be absent about two weeks.

A number of young attorneys with high political aspirations held a meeting yesterday at the Sherman to form a Senate, where a knowledge of the rules and practices of the American House of Lords are to be inculcated. A committee to arrange for its organization was appointed with the following members: Robert H. McMurdy, William A. Purcell, Richard A. Iwiss, Frederick S. Baker, and Frederick Arnd Jr.

The Clinical Society of the Hahnemann Hospital met at the Pacific last evening. The investigation and discussion of the homeopathic treatment of scarlet-fever was the topic of the evening, the papers being read by Dr. W. J. Howkes and Dr. A. A. Whipple of Quincy. The speakers took a hopeful view of the results of homeopathic treatment of the disease. In the discussion following the papers Drs. R. Ludlam, J. E. Gilliman, W. S. McGee, A. E. Small, and others took part.

A dispatch from San Francisco announces that Eli Frank, the Chicago liquor-dealer, arrested on a requisition from the Governor of Illinois charging him with the embezzlement of $10,000 from his brothers, has been released under habeas corpus proceedings by Judge Tooney. The Judge held that Frank was illegally arrested, basing his decision on the fact that the original indictment against Frank was forwarded to Gov. Stoneman instead of a copy as required by an act of Congress.

Mark Jadmann, the 12-year-old son of a German living at No. 691 West Twenty-first street, met with a strange death yesterday afternoon. Mark was playing in the back yard with a number of small children, who went away and left him. It is supposed that his playing had been so violent that when he fell head first into a snowbank in the yard he was too exhausted to extricate himself. His body was found by his mother half an hour later. Medical assistance was unavailing, death having been caused by smothering.

William F. Atkinson, who keeps a grocery store at No. 302 West Erie street, was driving his own delivery wagon yesterday afternoon. It was not this fact but the manner of his doing it that caused Officer Joyce to arrest him. Atkinson drove his rig up Randolph street at about 4 o'clock at a dead gallop. People on the street crossings scattered in every direction. As he crossed La Salle street Officer Joyce gave chase, and with the aid of an obstructing street-car checked Atkinson's mad career at Clark street and locked him up at the armory.

The Committee on Charities will recommend to the County Board tomorrow that the twenty-five milch cows at present at the Insane Asylum be slaughtered for beef, owing to the fact that they give but little milk, and that the same number of good milch cows be bought in their place. It will also be recommended that 600 young hogs be purchased and kept at the Insane Asylum until next fall, when they will be killed and the meat consumed by the inmates of the asylum and County Hospital. The refuse from the hospital and asylum, which is at present wasted, will be fed to the animals.

The directors of the Lake Bluff Hotel and Improvement Association held a meeting at the Sherman last night for the purpose of replatting the village grounds in the vicinity of the hotel, most of which are owned by Chicago men. It was decided to cut some new streets, open alleys, lay sidewalks, and plant a few trees where they were needed. The directors thought Lake Bluff would be more popular than ever the coming summer as a resort of pleasure-seekers. By the new plats some of the lots are made to front on other streets than those they now face. The drives will also be greatly improved.

A case of destitution and sickness was reported to the officers of the Humane Society today at No. 329 North May street. The officers on going there found a family named Piagens, the man a worthless drunkard. His wife, son, aged 15, and daughter, 10 years of age, were all sick in bed, and had been for three weeks. There was one other child, a boy 8 years of age, the only one of the family able to be about. There is no one to nurse the sick ones or to provide nourishment. The only articles of food found by the officers were two loaves of stale rye bread. A warrant was immediately procured for the arrest of the husband and father and placed in the hands of the police, and the County Physician sent for to look after the sick.

The Rev. Patrick Dunne has been appointed by Archbishop Feehan pastor of St. Patrick's Church at Joliet, to succeed the Rev. Walter Powers, deceased. Father Dunne is a nephew of the late Vicar-General Dunne of this diocese. He is a native of Chicago and received his academic education here. Since his ordination at St. Mary's, Emmetsburg, he has been located in St. Mary's, Joliet, as assistant to the Rev. Maurice Burke, the pastor of that parish. The new pastor is a young man of great ability, and, though not many years a priest, has already distinguished himself as a graceful pulpit orator and an able administrator. His appointment has been received with the keenest satisfaction at Joliet. His Chicago friends are much pleased at his promotion.

Mrs. A. M. Henry of No. 191 South Green street boarded a car yesterday and started down-town. Beside her in the car was a very old woman dressed in mourning. After paying her fare Mrs. Henry thought she felt a hand tugging at the pocket in which she had placed her purse, and drew her shawl more closely around her. The car stopped at a down-town crossing and the old woman got off. At the same time Mrs. Henry missed her purse. Jumping frantically from the car, she started down the street on a run. The old woman, seeing she was pursued, also ran. The race extended along State street to the "Fair," into which the old woman dodged and mingled with the throng. Mrs. Henry picked her out and took her to the station, where the prisoner gave her name as Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, aged 62. She claimed to have come from St. Louis a few hours previous, but afterwards contradicted herself. In her pocket was found the exact sum of money which Mrs. Henry claimed to have lost.

A large meeting of the property-owners of Warren avenue was held last evening in Van Buren's Hall, corner of California avenue and Madison street, to remonstrate against the paving of the avenue with asphalt from Rockwell street to the park. Ex-Ald. Baumgarten presided. Speeches were made advocating the repeal of the ordinance and the revocation of the assessment. At the conclusion of the addresses the chairman read from the Council proceedings of Monday night, in which it was stated that Ald. Campbell had secured a repeal of the ordinance providing for the paving with asphalt and an order directing the Commissioner of Public Works to cause to be prepared an ordinance providing for the filling and curbing of the avenue between the streets mentioned. Thereupon a motion was offered that Aldermen Campbell and Hull be requested to persevere in their work, and with an amendment suggested by Mr. Castle, that the ordinance also contain provisions for the laying of water-mains, gas-pipes, etc., was adopted and the meeting adjourned.

The committee in charge of the collections in this city in aid of the American Catholic University have made good progress this week. One of the members said yesterday that he felt sure now that $50,000 could be raised in this city for the project, perhaps $100,000. The books of the committee already show three subscriptions of $2,000 each, and four of subscriptions of $1,000. The contributors are by no means the wealthiest Catholics in the city. The total subscribed to date is over $15,000. The committee waited on Archbishop Feehan during the week and were received most cordially. The Archbishop encouraged them to persevere with their work, and handed them his own subscription, a generous sum, toward the new university. Bishop Ireland and Bishop Spalding will visit St. Louis Wednesday in aid of the project, and as soon as they have finished their work in connection with it there will revisit Chicago to assist the committee by their advice and personal efforts.

At the last regular meeting of Enterprise Lodge, No. 115, I. O. M. A., the following officers were duly installed by Grand President Alexander McLean, assisted by Deputy Grand President C. W. M. Arnold: President, J. H. Hubachek; Vice-President, G. A. Bennett; Financial Secretary, Nelson Frank; Treasurer, Thomas Hagen; Recording Secretary, R. A. Glasebrook; Conductor, Aug Stirmel; Chaplain, W. J. Wolfson; I. G., R. H. Newman; O. G., Gilbert Cook; Medical Examiner, A. J. Coey, M. D.; Past President, W. T. Jackson; Representative to Grand Lodge, Aug Stirmel. After installation ceremonies the lodge worked their new M. A. degree, in which four candidates were initiated. Grand President McLean, Grand Treasurer Irwin, and Grand Trustee Mathews were present and expressed themselves as well pleased with the work. Enterprise Lodge has over eighty members in good standing on the roll and more coming. It is without doubt the banner lodge of the State.

The Underwriters' Association has appointed a committee consisting of Messrs. Teall, Lyman, Kerr, Jones, and Waller to take charge of the inspection of all buildings in the business district of the city and manufacturing risks of all kinds. They will select a superintendent and half a dozen assistants, and have the work done systematically and thoroughly, so that the agents will have notice of the condition of certain buildings at a given date. This will do away with the haphazard inspection done by individual agencies, and result in an advance of rates or a cancellation of policies if risks are not kept in proper condition by the owners. There have been a good many fires in manufacturing establishments recently, most of them being due to carelessness, and the object of the inspection is to make owners and occupants more careful. In all buildings where ten or more people are engaged in manufacturing 50 cents has been added to the rate. This affects most of the down-town structures. In the business and manufacturing districts rates have been increased 25 to 40 per cent, but reductions are allowed for certain "improvements" which lessen the danger from fire.

William Fisher, a Swiss, aged 26 years, who has slept in the Chicago Avenue Station several times this winter as a charity lodger, committed a bold burglary at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the house of Mrs. Thomas Evans, No. 334 Huron street. The thief got into the house through the front door while dinner was in progress. He sneaked into the room of Frank Quinn, a boarder, and stole his gold watch and chain, valued at $75, his $25 overcoat, a pair of silk hose, a cigar-case, a spool of silk thread, some shaving soap, and a pair of mittens, besides several small articles belonging to Mrs. Evans. Quinn had $350 in currency under a book and $80 in his bed, which the burglar did not have the luck to find. Fisher was pursued down an alley by fifty or more women, boys, and policemen, and brought to bay. Among the pursuers was Quinn, who gave the thief-hunters the encouraging set-on that the flying man was robed in his coat. At the Chicago Avenue Station the captors, Officers Whalen and Lowenstein, found in the man's pocket a heavy gold pencil, on which were engraved the initials "J. L. F." The pencil was in a case. The prisoner had on a "brand new" blue vest, which the officers thought to be stolen property also.

AN ANECDOTE OF TURCHIN

"Vat ish you here doin', ehs" asked the General walking up to the man.

"I'm goin' to leave," said the man. "I have quit and I ain't goin' to work no more for you."

"Vas you, inteed," said the General; "and vy you don't work no more, eh?"

"Well," replied the man sheepishly, "I ain't goin' to be bossed by a woman. Your wife's got too much to say about the place, an' I ain't agoin' to stand it."

The General had been rather polite and inclined to be facetious up to this point, but any reflection on the energetic and unusually capable partner of his bosom made him furious in an instant. His whole bearing changed like lightning, and one got a very good idea of what he was at the head of his troop. Striding up to the shrinking man he towered above him and thundered out:

"Go! You ish one fool. There air some vimmens could command whole armies of such asses as you!" Then he turned on his heel and strode away without another word, leaving the woman-scorning servant scared and trembling and the spectators amused at his reply and somewhat awed at his fiery vehemence and withering scorn.

MEECH-KITTREDGE.

"No committee has been appointed to look after the defense," said one of Dr. Kittredge's friends yesterday. "He has been assured by several individuals that they will stand by him, and he will make a vigorous fight when the time comes, if there is a necessity for it. But, between you and me, I don't think the suit will amount to anything. No declaration was filed today by Justice Meech, and need not be, I understand, at this term of court. Dr. Kittredge doesn't know, therefore, what he is charged with saying. He will have thirty days in which to file an answer. My opinion is that Meech has gone off half-cocked. He believed a newspaper report of the sermon. It may turn out that the doctor was misrepresented—that he did not say what was attributed to him. When he speaks without looking at his manuscript he is apt to exaggerate a little. Sunday night he read all he said, and he has his remarks in black and white. Where is Meech to obtain his witnesses? He must get some one who heard the sermon, or the sermon itself. He will find that he has no case, and will be thrown out of court by a demurrer. Dr. Kittredge never "reiterated" anything, but stated to the reporter who interviewed him that he stood by what he had said. He is too smart to lay himself liable to slander suits. The question is whether he said anything that is actionable. People who heard the sermon say he did not state what was reported. From all I can learn this is a tempest in a teapot."

A MISSING STUDENT.

Henry D. Hipwell, son of W. O. Hipwell, assistant cashier of the Union National Bank, has been missing since last Tuesday, and his friends are greatly alarmed at his disappearance. The young man left his room at No. 601 Monroe street about half-past 7 in the evening, and has not been heard of since. He was a student of Rush Medical College, and had been working so hard for an examination that it is thought that perhaps his mind has become affected; but as he had good jewelry and a considerable sum of money he may have been foully dealt with. He is 21 years old, five feet ten inches in hight, light complexion, brown hair cut short, short side-whiskers, blue eyes, slight scar on right cheek, and on right eyebrow, and face slightly marked with gunpowder. He wore a dark suit of clothes, black chinchilla overcoat, and sealskin cap or Derby hat.

A BAD MAN ARRESTED.

About two years ago an atrocious crime was committed in the vicinity of Ashley and Lincoln streets, where, in a small cottage, lived two unmarried sisters, Hanore and Kate O'Connor. The younger of the two was approaching 60 years of age and the elder was blind. Two men burst into the house and seized the occupants. Only the younger was able to offer any resistance. The men, after assaulting the women, burglarized the house. Subsequently one of the criminals was arrested. He was Mike Sullivan, and is now serving a sentence of twenty years in Joliet for the crime. His supposed accomplice, "Slash," or Mike Maloney, escaped, though an indictment was found against him. He left the city and nothing was heard of him until last night, when Detectives Costello and Murnane met him on the street and placed him under arrest.

MINNIE HAUK.

MAPLESON'S PRINCIPAL PRIMA DONNA ARRIVES AHEAD OF THE COMPANY.

Mme. Minnie Hauk, Mapleson's leading prima donna, arrived in Chicago last night in advance of the company, and is stopping at the Palmer House, occupying the corner apartment of the second floor. A TRIBUNE reporter was introduced to the famous artist, whose appearance has not changed in the least since her last visit to Chicago three years ago. Minnie Hauk has spent most of the time since her last appearance here in Europe and her successes in Berlin, Vienna, and London have been recorded by THE TRIBUNE. "Every time I come to Chicago I try to bring you something new," said she to the reporter. "The first year of my engagement with Mr. Mapleson I brought you 'Carmen,' and I am glad it is announced again for the opening night. The second time we sung 'Lohengrin,' which had not been given here for a very long time, I believe. In 1883 I sang Selika in Meyerbeer's 'Africaine,' and this year it is an entirely new work, which we are going to sing Wednesday next—Massenet's 'Manon,' or, as some papers insist on calling it, 'Nanon.' I was very much amused at some clippings that were sent to me from America, announcing that I had made my appearance in operetta and sung 'Nanon,' whilst it was, indeed, the grand opera, 'Manon Lescaut,' the title rôle of which I was fortunate enough to create on the Continent outside of the French stage. We produced the opera in Boston, Philadelphia, and Baltimore last month, and as far as I have the pleasure of knowing the Chicago public they will take to it very much. It is a beautiful work musically. Mr. Massenet, the composer of 'Manon,' was so much pleased with my conception of the part that he invited me to sing the leading part in the new opera which he is now composing taken from Goethe's famous novel, 'Die Leiden des jungen Werther.' This work will be first produced at the Royal Opera-House at Brussels, where I first sung 'Carmen.' You wish to know where I met with the most success since my last appearance here? Well, I think in London and in Berlin. The old Emperor had expressed a desire to hear me again in my best Berlin parts and so I appeared there in the 'Daughter of the Regiment,' which he likes so much. Indeed, it was by his command that the Drum Major of the Guards taught me first how to drum the 'Grenadier's March.'

"I have many friends in Chicago, and I remember with much pride the splendid reception at the Calumet Club some years ago. But now you must excuse me. I am tired from my trip from Pittsburg here, and I must rest in order to be in good trim Monday night."

GOVERNMENT AFFAIRS.

NUMEROUS COMPLAINTS OF SWINDLING BY MEANS OF FALSE COINAGE—NO DECISION YET RECEIVED IN THE LAKE-FRONT CASE—ITEMS.

Detective Pat Tyrrell is in receipt of numerous letters from victims of counterfeit-money swindlers in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, and elsewhere. Marshal Oakley of Madison, Wis., writes of parties who have been "done" there, and C. E. Coombs, a real-estate dealer in Minnesota, gives particulars of a German near Red Wing who was hoodwinked out of $300. The "boodle frauds" have their headquarters in New York and, from all accounts, are doing a "land-office business" among the Grangers, who believe in the theory of obtaining something for nothing, the practical effects of which are damaging to them financially.

District-Attorney Tuthill expected the decision of the Supreme Court in the Lake-Front case yesterday, but it had not been received at 5 o'clock, when his office was closed for the day.

Adam Carey and A. P. Melby, the colored janitors attached to the United States Court rooms, whose transfer to the Custodian's department has been referred to, were appointed assistant janitors by Collector Stone yesterday and sworn into the service.

Postmaster Judd received his commission as Postmaster yesterday, to date from Jan. 13, 1886, for a term of four years. The document bore the signature of Grover Cleveland.

Residents of Lake View living west of Clark street and north of Belmont avenue have petitioned for the free-delivery system of mails. At present letters are only delivered free east of Clark street and north to Belmont avenue. It is not long since the people of Hyde Park and Englewood sent in a similar petition, but no response has as yet been received from Washington to an affirmative report sent there with regard to the matter.

The case of Thomas J. Gardner, publisher of the Chicago Farm Journal, who was arrested Friday by Inspector Adsit upon the charge of using the mails for the dissemination of lottery schemes, was again before Commissioner Hoyne yesterday morning. On the application of the prisoner's attorney a continuance was granted till Friday next at 10 a. m. Inspector Adsit believes the Orange Colony scheme to be a poor investment. It is not believed that Gardner ever had 60,000 subscribers to his scheme. No trace of the 2,000 original circulars which Gardner claims to have mailed can be found by Col. Boulton, and meanwhile the 60,000 copies of the Farm Journal containing the illusive "ad" of "The Great Manatee Orange Colony" repose, safe from the perusal of grangers, in the vaults of the Post-Office. Gardner is understood to be the same man who has been running the Farming World here and at Cincinnati.

THEY WILL NOT SUBMIT.

NORTH SIDE PROPERTY-OWNERS STILL AGITATING AGAINST THE ASSESSMENT ON THE PROPOSED IMPROVEMENT.

So far about 100 property-owners in the district bounded by Ohio street, North avenue, Dearborn avenue, and the lake have announced their determination to object to the assessment for the extension of the Lake-Shore drive from Oak to Pearson street. Two canvassers have not reported. The committee of the association will be at the lower Turner-Hall every night this week to receive the names and subscriptions of objectors. It costs only $1 to join, and thus insure representation in court. Unless the appearance of a property-owner is entered he will have to pay the assessment if the roll is confirmed, as only those who object have a right to appeal from the decision. Application will be made tomorrow for a rule to file objections by the 15th, so those who believe the assessment unjust must act this week or they will have to pay roundly for something which is of no benefit to them. A mass-meeting of those interested will probably be held during the week.

The question will be presented to the court whether the extension is a boulevard or a part of the park. If the former, it will be contended that the assessment should be made on the abutting property: if the latter, on the whole North Side. The case is said to turn on this point, and the impression is quite general that the assessment of a section of the North Side, five blocks wide by twelve long, for the improvement will not stand.

The more the deal which brought about the assessment is examined the more incensed it makes the property-owners who are called upon to pay a large sum in order that half a dozen men may make at least $500,000. It appears that the $75,000 mentioned in the deeds of Tobias Allmendinger to Charles Fitz-Simons and Malcolm McNeill, conveying Block 8 to them, does not represent cash. The agreement between them is understood to be that Fitz-Simons and McNeill are to fill in 220x800 in Blocks 8 and 13 and are to receive Block 8 for doing the work, Allmendinger now owning all of Block 13. While Fitz-Simons and McNeill will make at least $100,000 by the operation, putting the frontage they will acquire at a low figure and deducting the cost of the breakwater and filling, Tobias Allmendinger will make a great deal more. A value, it is said, had to be set upon the submerged lands in order that the frontage might be assessed. The award for 25x220 feet in Block 8 was $8,720 and in Block 13 $9.062; total, $17,782. Allmendinger's total assessment is $11,991. So, if the scheme goes through, he will get $5,791 in cash and a block of land 220x800 feet for a section of the lake of equal dimensions without taking a penny from his pocket. This 220x800 will give him a total frontage of 880 feet—220 on the drive, 440 on a street midway between it and the lake, and 220 overlooking the water. Estimating the first at $400 a foot, the second at $150, and the third at $100, the block will be worth $154,000. So his share will be about $160,000—certainly a very fair return for some water which Fitz-Simons and McNeill have to handle themselves.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

MR. GURNEY AND THE CONTROLLERSHIP OF THE CURRENCY—STREETS THAT WILL NOT BE REPAVED THIS YEAR—ITEMS.

"A leading business-man of Chicago," said Mayor Harrison yesterday, speaking of Mr. Gurney and the Controllership of the Currency, "went to Mr. Gurney and asked him if he would take the position if it were offered to him. Gurney would not even talk to him about it until he had seen me. The gentleman came to me and said he had been requested to look around for a good man. He had looked all over town; Gurney was at last suggested to him, and he wanted my opinion, and, if I concurred in it, my influence to get Gurney to accept. Gurney had never applied for the place. It had never entered his head. I told Gurney that I thought the first thing to do was to get the advice of Dr. De Wolf as to whether the climate of Washington would agree with him. He is at that age, you know, when going to certain localities might be injurious to him. De Wolf said he believed the change would be beneficial. We talked the matter over then, and Gurney notified the gentleman that if the President wanted to appoint him he would accept. He regards the inquiry as semi-official."

The Chicago Passenger Railway Company will accept the Washington street ordinance if amended, as suggested by the Mayor, so as to require the company to keep the tunnel roadway in repair and to hold the city from liability in case the tunnel should cave in.

The Committee on Streets and Alleys, West Division, will recommend that the assessment for the widening of Jefferson street, from Harrison to Twelfth, be set aside, and new Commissioners appointed to make another.

The Committee on Railroads will meet Monday to consider the Star Company's ordinance and that for the extension of the tracks on North Halsted street.

GRATZ'S CASE.

HELD TO THE GRAND JURY IN $2,500 BAIL.

The case of Joseph S. Gratz, the jeweler, charged with conspiring to defraud, was called before Justice Lyon yesterday morning. It will be remembered that he is the man who sold out his stock of jewelry at No. 175 East Madison street the 1st of January to the firm of Shackman & Lowenbach, jewelers at Nos. 210 and 212 East Madison street, on which there was a large indebtedness to Eastern manufacturers. As Gratz disappeared immediately after the sale the Jewelers' Associations at New York and Providence took active measures and contributed $10,000 for the expense of prosecuting him. The attorneys representing the New York board were the firm of Thompson & Flemming. Holzheimer, Eliel & Rosenthal appeared for the Providence board. Philip Stein was the attorney for the defense. The first witness of any importance called was Adolph Shackman of Shackman & Lowenbach. He was asked to produce Gratz's account-books, which were said to have been transferred with the stock. Witness refused to bring the books into court, because, he said, they might expose him to criminal prosecution. Gustavus Lementass, formerly in Gratz's employ, was in the store Jan. 1 and saw the stock packed up and an invoice taken by Shackman. William Glyckoff, Shackman's bookkeeper, who also posted Gratz's accounts, testified that he believed them to be worth 50 cents on the dollar and that his liabilities were about $25,000. He had paid $1,000 for Mr. Gratz to Herman Levi of Milwaukee and $600 to Herman Snaffner, banker. The balance on the books showed the stock to be worth $19,000. M. L. Strasberger, Alexander Penover, and William Smith, manufacturers of jewelry in New York, and N. P. Barton of Providence, stated that they had sold Gratz bills of goods varying from $450 to $1,200. The bills were still due. This finished the evidence for the prosecution, and Jacob Reese, an employé of Shackman & Lowenbach, took the stand. He said Gratz's stock was worth from $10.000 to $12,000. R. N. Heller, a traveling man for the same firm, corroborated Reese's statement. Shackman again took the stand. He had taken an inventory of the stock in question Jan. 1, but refused to answer the inquiry of Mr. Thompson as to its value, because he was afraid of making himself liable to both criminal and civil prosecution. He paid Gratz $8,000 for the stock, $3,000 cash and $5,000 in notes. The reason he gave for having bought Gratz out was because he saw a profit in so doing.

After a long argument by the attorney for the defense the court gave its decision, saying that there was no reason in its mind why the case should not go to the grand jury for investigation. Gratz was accordingly held in $2,500 bonds.

A NICE POINT OF LAW.

AN ALLEGED LEGAL LUMINARY TAUGHT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN CHICAGO AND MASSACHUSETTS.

He was a tall, lank individual with a tight-fitting Prince Albert coat, which at no distant day will be glossy enough to use for a mirror, and trousers several sizes to short for his long spindle shanks. He presented himself at the Armory Station Friday night and said he was a lawyer. "My name is Jackson, sir, Peter Jackson, from Massachusetts. In an evil hour I let myself be persuaded to go to the great West, and I bent my energies on getting to Chicago, sir, where I expected to reap a fortune by my profession. But, ah! It was not to be. Here I am without a cent to my name, and I humbly beg to be allowed to have a nice, clean bed, that I may get a good night's repose."

"O, that's an ould gag; you can't spring that here; we have no room for you tonight," said one of the officials in charge.

"An old gag, indeed; but you insult me, sir. I'm a respectable lawyer, sir, and I can prove it. I demand a bed, sir," and the self-styled member of the noble profession waxed very wroth and threatened to whip the entire police force. The result was that he lodged at the armory, but, instead of reposing on a "nice, clean bed," he was locked up in a cell with the ordinary prisoners. In the morning Jackson attempted to persuade Justice Meech that he was a lawyer himself, and that there was an extremely nice point in the law about his particular case, when the court interrupted him very suddenly, saying: "I don't care about your law. I've had enough to do with it myself during the last three days; and, as I have already retained counsel to prosecute Mr. Kittredge, you need not volunteer your services. But are you guilty or not?"

"Now in Massachusetts a man ——"

"Never mind Massachusetts. If you don't answer I'll send you to the bridewell," exclaimed the Justice, getting out of patience with the man.

"But it is not a criminal ——"

"You are fined $10; take that piece of jurisprudence away," groaned the magistrate, and Jackson was hurried out of the dock in a much livelier manner than he entered it, and which threatened sad havoc to his snug-fitting Prince Albert.

KITSON'S CASE.

JUDGE PRENDERGAST HOLDS THAT THE DRY-GOODS MAN NEED NOT TELL CERTAIN THINGS JUST NOW.

Mr. Flower of the attorneys for the New York creditors of Samuel Kitson, the North Clark street dry-goods dealer who went into business four months ago and is now in the hands of an assignee, appeared before the County Court yesterday. He moved before Judge Prendergast that Kitson be compelled to answer certain questions touching representations of his as to his resources at the time he embarked in business—questions he had refused to answer at the time of his arrest on capias proceedings Wednesday. Kitson claimed to have a stock on hand worth $25,000 and $500 in collectable claims against purchasers as his only assets, while his liabilities were $14,000 to his wife on confessed judgment and about $18,000 to various wholesale firms. This left a discrepancy of $7,000 in four months, to say nothing of the $12,000 cash with which he said he went into business. He said he had $12,000 at the start; either he did or he did not, but on that representation he managed to get $22,000 worth of credit, and so he must have had some assets. The judgment notes were entered up Saturday, the assignment made Monday, and the arrest on capias Wednesday. Thursday prior to the entering up of the notes he took $2,500 from the store and handed it to his wife.

Mr. Bisbee appeared for Kitson, who was not in court. He said his client ought not to be compelled to answer questions which related to a subject for which he was already under bail. In assignment proceedings a man might be asked how much he had in the way of assets, where it was, how much capital he had at the start, and who were his creditors; but to ask him if he made false representations in order to obtain credit could not be done at this stage. Everybody knew where this money was and where it came from, and there would have been no objection to answer the questions as to whether he represented the $12,000 as his own or his wife's if the capias proceedings had not been pushed.

Mr. Hoffheimer of counsel for A. Ellinger said the principal desire was to get at the actual assets. His clients did not want to know what Kitson had at the time he went into business, but what he said he had.

Judge Prendergast said: "The attorneys know whether he made representations and to whom he made them, and it will not add to your information should it now be wrung from his own lips. This is not an inquisition, and to answer the questions might be harmful in the capias proceedings."

A BANQUET.

W. D. ST. CLAIR ENTERTAINS FIFTY "SUN" STOCKHOLDERS.

Mr. W. D. St. Clair gave a banquet to the stockholders of the Chicago Sun at Kinsley's last night, at which about fifty of the stockowners were present. The menu was not elaborate, but by the aid of music and speech-making the event was made a pleasant one. The toasts were: "The Sun—It Awakens the World," response by W. D. St. Clair; "The Press," response by C. R. Dennett; "Advertising and Its Results," response by John M. Smyth; and "What Are We Here For," response by P. L. Garrity. The following is a list of stockholders, most of whom were present: Alexander A. Revell, Peterson & Bay, Isham & Prentice, Lord & Thomas, Greenebaum Sons, Cook & McLain, C. D. Peacock, John W. Macfarlane, Frank Harvey, John Kranz, R. W. Tansill, Louis Bowsky, C. H. Slack, Mandel Bros., C. K. Giles, J. W. Goetz, F. A. Bragg, H. G. Foreman, J. P. White, L. Manasse, Robert Law, H. Waller Jr., George M. Bogue, J. L. Gatzert, S. E. Gross, John M. Smyth, Griffin & Dwight, L. J. Swift, P. F. Ryan, E. Goodridge, Ulick Bourke, E. F. Hartley, J. C. Wirts, Joseph Spiegel, Davis & Morse, C. W. & H. C. Story, Hayden Bros., E. J. Lehmann, M. Morgenthau, A. H. Blackall, C. M. Hotchkin, W. Proby, James Armstrong, Schlesinger & Mayer, Frank Reed, S. SUBURBAN.

JEFFERSON.

The spelling match which took place at Temperance Hall last Wednesday evening for the benefit of Post 445, G. A. R., was a financial and social success. Miss Hattie Hopkins came out victorious. Other contests will follow.

There will be a mass-meeting at the Town Hall Feb. 11, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of forming plans for the division of the village territory into convenient townships.

The Literary and Social Union of Jefferson and Northwest Chicago gave a very successful entertainment Friday evening at the Northwest M. E. Church.

The explosion of a gasoline stove in Cragin Bro.'s tinshop at Cragin Friday caused a small blaze, which was quickly extinguished, but not until Otto Kleinsmith, a boy employed in the store, was severely burned. He was a mass of flames when some one threw him into a tank of water, thereby saving his life.

Wednesday evening a very quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. M. Ingalls at Irving Park. The contracting parties were Mr. J. T. Madison and Miss Edith M. Ingalls. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Phraner.

LAKE VIEW.

A meeting of the teachers of the seventh-grade pupils of Cook County was held Friday at the Evanston avenue school-house. Thirty teachers were present from various parts of the county, and the exercises were conducted by County-Superintendent Lane. In the morning Miss Clark, with her class, gave model recitations in arithmetic, reading, language, and history. Miss Holcomb gave an exercise in drawing, and Miss Morgan in geography. A general discussion in methods of teaching was had, a decided difference of opinion prevailing as to whether reading should be taught with a view to elocutionary attainments or for the purpose of acquiring knowledge. There was also a spirited discussion as to whether drawing should be taught by special teachers or those of the regular class.

The Gross Park Club held a meeting Friday night and discussed candidates for the spring election. It was unanimously agreed that Gross Park ought to have a representative on the Board of Trustees, and that George E. Beckwith would make a good Assessor.

A call is being circulated for a meeting of German citizens to form a club similar to the Lake View Association. It is expected to be a prominent factor in the spring election.

The building permit has been taken out for the new Turner-Hall on Diversey street. It is to be 75x125 feet and, with the gymnasium, will cost $21,000.

The report of the Village Treasurer showed a balance on hand Feb. 1 of $1,189. Financially the village is in a prosperous condition.

The physicians of the village have agreed upon advanced prices for visits and consultations.

The Young People's Missionary Association of the Universalist Church will give an entertainment next Thursday evening.

LAKE.

Politics in Lake had a little boom yesterday. Friday night a secret meeting was held in a private residence on Emerald avenue and Layton street. The meeting was engineered by Charles S. Thornton of Englewood, and was supposed to be in the interest of the oppositionists. Among those present were C. S. Thornton, A. C. Danforth, J. C. Bohart, T. R. Cornwell, and J. C. Dunne. G. F. Swift and J. J. McCarthy had been invited to be present, with a number of others. They had once before accepted Thornton as their leader, when he represented that Englewood to a man was opposed to the present administration, and under his leadership they were defeated by a majority of over 4,000. At Friday night's meeting the many expected failed to put in an appearance, signally showing their intention not to fight with or accept Thornton, and those in attendance, after conversing on affairs, adjourned. It is claimed that Harry B. Steck of the commission firm of Steck & Shearer, will be a candidate for the Supervisor's position.

A waiting-room owned by the Fort Wayne Road on Forty-ninth street and Stewart avenue was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The blaze was caused by a stove upsetting. The damage is estimated at $200.

John M. D. Roberts, living at No. 5520 Wentworth avenue, and employed by Jerome P. Bowes, real-estate agent, is missing. Roberts was employed by Bowes as a collector, and Thursday left the office to collect some money. He secured about $200 and failed to report at the office. It is feared that he has met with foul play.

The many railroads centering at the Stock Yards have issued a notice to the effect that from and after Monday, Feb. 15, the practice of allowing mixed shipments of hogs, sheep, horses, or cattle to Milwaukee or at the Union Stock-Yards, whether by partition or otherwise, will be discontinued. The agents have been notified under no circumstances to way-bill mixed car-loads of live-stock to these points.

The case of John Farrell, a foreman in one of Armour & Co.'s departments, who was arrested some days ago on complaint of Henry Meyers on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Meyers, came up before Justice Becker yesterday. One of the witnesses swore that Meyers wanted $200 to drop the case, and to this the defense refused to listen. The case was dismissed.

George W. Hoyt, a contractor living at No. 1083 West Jackson street, was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out before Justice Tearney by Thomas Doran on a charge of perjury in a garnishment case. Hoyt settled the case on being arrested, and was dismissed.

A SALE OF NECESSITY

AT SCHLESINGER & MAYER'S NOW IN PROGRESS, BROUGHT ABOUT BY A VARIETY OF CAUSES.

The sale now in progress at this great dry-goods house possesses peculiar features which have given rise to unlimited speculation. The firm calls this a "sale of necessity," and the cutting down of prices in all departments gives color to the truth of that assertion. The peculiar feature of the sale lies in the fact that it is not confined to certain lines of goods or stocks which they intend closing out, but includes every department in this great house. These stocks are large, complete—with merchandise constantly coming in. This cutting down of prices, ranging from 10 to 50 per cent, has not been brought about by a general decline, for values in all lines of goods have risen in value, making the present move of this house still more prominent. The store after 12 o'clock has daily been crowded to an extent that it has been difficult for the clerks to attend to the wants of purchasers, and especially has this been the case at the glove counter, gloves being sold virtually for a mere song, with one of the largest and finest stocks to select from. A similar rush was seen in the suit department, where spring suits were sold at such fabulously low prices as to incite the wonder of those present why such "cutting" was instituted. The same low prices ruled in the muslin, underwear, and corsets departments, while the toilet preparations seemed to have no bottom to the prices in this store. The carpet and upholstery department contains an exceedingly large and complete stock, and offers advantages to those who intend furnishing a home, and large numbers of people have been shrewd in making purchases now, which they well know they could not duplicate at a later day anywhere; at any rate, people will find it good advice to look around in this department who intend to furnish a home. From all appearances there seems to be some good cause why this establishment is forcing this sale; their stocks in every department are exceedingly large and fine, and the unprecedented reduction in prices is drawing all Chicago to their quarters, the people finding the most surprising difference in prices at this store and the prices asked for the same goods in establishments at not more than a square's distance, making the aggregate daily sales of this firm something enormous, and is certainly one of the most gigantic undertakings ever brought to the notice of the residents of Chicago. It may be well to add that ladies will find it greatly to their convenience and comfort to make their visits to this establishment during the sale in the morning, as after 12 o'clock the jostling, crowding, and elbowing become unavoidable.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE CHICAGO SAFE & LOCK COMPANY.

To correct statements made by certain parties who have more regard for the sale of a varnished safe than they have for the unvarnished truth, respectfully call attention to the following:

"AUSTIN, Ill., Nov. 22, 1885.—To Chicago Safe & Lock Company, Chicago, Ill.—GENTLEMEN: The burning of the Giles Block in our town recently subjected the small safe I bought of you to a very severe test. It, however, substantiated all you claimed for it, and although subjected to the hottest of fires for some ten hours it came out in good condition. The interior or contents had no signs whatever of damage from either heat, water, or smoke. The door opened upon the combination, without trouble.

I cheerfully recommend your safe to any person or persons wanting security against fire. Yours truly,

[Signed] "HENRY PILLINGER."

JUDGE CATON'S GENEROSITY.

OTTAWA, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Today Mayor Allen received from Judge Caton of Chicago a check for $200 to be paid the fire department on account of their energy and courage at the burning of his residence here. He also sent George Weiss, the injured fireman, a personal check for $100 as an evidence of sympathy in his suffering.

BUSINESS.

MONETARY.

Clearings at the principal cities of the United States for the last two Saturdays were:

	Feb. 6.	Jan. 30.
Boston	15,265,945	13,361,653
Chicago	7,096,806	6,685,422
Philadelphia	7,366,768	8,657,495
St. Louis	2,700,330	2,257,188
Baltimore	1,713,086	1,652,187
New Orleans	1,380,847	1,225,386

The monthly settlements swelled the Chicago bank clearings last week and they were considerably larger than for the preceding week, but there was nearly as much gained over the corresponding week of 1885. The exhibit is encouraging considering the fact that the conditions for business in the country tributary to Chicago are so unfavorable. There was no change in the state of affairs in this city yesterday. Some call funds were loaned as low as 4½ per cent, but the range for time loans is about as heretofore. The movement of currency both to and from the city was small. Foreign bills were strong at unchanged prices.

Securities were quiet. The sales at the Chicago Stock Exchange were 100 shares of Chamber of Commerce stock at 70, $20,000 City Railway 4½s at 101¼, $6,000 Board of Trade 5s at 105, $5,000 at 104⅞, $7,000 Chicago, Burlington & Northern 5s at 103¼, $5,000 West Shore 4s at 102⅞, $5,000 at 102⅞ seller 5, and 100 shares of East Tennessee stock at 3¾ seller 10.

There was no great activity among the stock speculators, but the transactions were more significant than usual. There was heavy selling of the Grangers, more particularly Northwest. It became more evident than ever that the sales of that stock by persons in this city Friday were very heavy, and the process was continued yesterday. It is believed that short sales were made by men who are not often found on that side of the market. It is clear that they had early information of matters which were not known to the crowd till yesterday, and then only very partially. The announcement of the cutting of passenger rates had a good deal of influence on the market, which was the weakest one we have had for many days. Still it is very evident that operators in this city sell short with considerable reluctance and only for a turn, as the best of them believe that the course of general business is toward better things and that by and by the list will sell much higher. They desire nothing so much as a reasonable decline that will put stocks in a stronger position. Brokers and others in this city who have heretofore received reports of the cutting of east-bound freight rates say there is no doubt of their correctness in spite of the denials of railroad officials. The information certainly comes from excellent sources.

The most conspicuous feature of the New York bank statement for last week is the decrease in the circulation. It is no doubt due to the calling by the Government of bonds which form the basis of the National-bank notes. Several million dollars of the bonds called are held by the banks. It will be seen that there is a quite important gain in the loan item. The following are the details of the statement:

Specie	99,1?7,200	Decrease	1,065,500
Legal tenders	33,507,600	Increase	75,200
Deposits	390,564,900	Increase	610,200
Circulation	8,844,300	Decrease	755,300
Reserve	132,654,800	Decrease	990,300
Surplus reserve	35,013,575	Decrease	1,142,850

Day.	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$8,358,845.76	$1,338,009.59
Tuesday	11,777,228.42	1,189,257.16
Wednesday	7,595,982.58	794,955.28

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Money on call easy at 1½@2 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4@5. Sterling exchange quiet but steady at 487 for 60 days and 489 for demand. Government bonds were very dull and firm. State bonds were active and strong. Railway bonds were more active, with sales of $2,538,000, but the increased activity was principally in the East Tennessee incomes, of which the sales were $1,266,000. The bonds opened at 21, sold early at 21½, with a net gain of ½. The remainder of the business was well distributed. Prices were generally strong, but the gains as a rule were for fractional amounts. Stocks were dull, the only activity being in the early dealings. The opening was somewhat irregular although for a majority of stocks from ⅛ to ⅝ lower, and the early dealings established still lower quotations for the active list. This was followed by a reaction, and in most cases the highest figures of the day were reached about the end of the first hour. The movement thereafter was within a narrow range until late in the day, when there was a decided decline, ranging from ⅛ to over ½, and the market closed heavy. The street was supplied early in the day with rumors of the cutting of passenger rates west of Chicago, which had a depressing effect on the Grangers, and sympathetically with the rest of the list. In point of activity St. Paul led the list and this evening is 1⅜ lower than yesterday's close. Northwestern is down 1⅞, Omaha common 1⅛ and the preferred 1. Other declines were 1⅜ in Lackawanna, 1 each in Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific preferred, and Fort Worth & Denver, 1⅛ in Western Union and Pacific Mail, and fractional amounts for the rest of the active list. Prices this evening, compared with those of a week ago, show advances ranging from small fractions to 8¾, the latter Lackawanna. The gains generally are for small amounts, excepting the coal stocks, Delaware & Hudson being up 4⅛, Lake Shore 2½. Reading is 2⅝ lower, New York & New England 4½, St. Paul ⅛, and Pacific Mail ⅜. The total sales for the week were 2,772,028 shares.

The exports of specie from this port during the last week were $610,995; to Europe, $185,934 silver and $125,362 gold; to Havana, $261,440 gold and $1,500 silver. The imports were $337,726.

MARKETS.

The leading produce markets were steadier Saturday, with not much besides a local trade. Except in wheat, there was very little doing. The weather was milder, and this favored an increase in the volume of receipts both of hogs and grain, the natural tendency of which was a lower range of prices, but the fact did not seem to have much influence, unless perhaps in hog products.

Provisions were slow and weaker in the absence of demand from outside. Hogs were easier, with a larger supply than is usual for Saturday, and this encouraged some local bears to oppress the market for product. Cudahy sold a little pork, and then Orr-Crittenden gave the crowd all they would take. Parties in the cash trade report that the Southern demand for side meats shows a slight improvement, but the pickled lots are very dull, and green hams in such poor demand that they are relatively low in price. Pork sold 2½c lower early, at $11.35 for May, and declined to $11.25 at the close, with March at a smaller discount of $17½c. Lard closed only 2½c lower, at $6.25 bid for May, being sustained by a reported rise of 3d in Liverpool. Ribs closed 7½c lower at $5.62½ bid for May, with little doing in other deliveries. The packing of this city since the beginning of the current season includes about 2,207,000 hogs, against 2,221,000 to the same time last year, and 1,882,000 to do in 1884. Some parties in the trade estimate that the falling off of 26 lbs in the average weight, with the smaller number packed, makes a reduction of not far from 25 per cent in the production of last month as compared with January of last year.

Flour was very dull at unchanged prices.

Wheat was really active, though without much sign of it, and averaged strong, with a slow Liverpool and a firm London. The export demand at the seaboard was early reported to be good, with sixteen boat-loads taken in New York before noon, which encouraged good buying for parties here or in Milwaukee, it being hard to say which. This absorbed a great deal of wheat offered by Schwartz-Dupee, McCormick-Kennett, and others, while Field-Lindley and Eldridge were buyers, the latter through Baxter. Local scalpers were more active than usual, with varying success, and some lines of shorts were put out on local account. Minneapolis was supposed to be buying early. May opened ⅛c lower, at 85c asked, sold at 85⅛c, receded to 84⅝c, and improved to 85⅝c, closing at 85⅛c bid, with February at 5⅛c discount and June at 1⅛c premium. The later news was to the effect that the next statement of visible supply will show a decrease of nearly 1,000,000 bu, that flour orders are more numerous, and that some wheat had been taken on the seaboard for Antwerp.

Corn was very dull in futures but firm on cash lots, the shipping demand being good for the lower grades. May sold early a shade lower, at 40⅝c, improved to 40⅝c, and closed at 40½c asked, with February at 3⅛c discount and March at about 3⅛c discount. Lots of No. 2 in store sold at 35⅛c for regular and 36⅛c for fresh receipts, with No. 3 stronger at 33⅛c in preferred location.

Oats were ⅛c lower for near futures and trading light. February was salable at 28⅛c. March sold at 28⅜@28⅛c and May at 31⅞@32c, closing at 31⅞c bid. No. 2 cash was quotably 28⅜@28⅝c for regular and 29⅜@30c for fresh receipts. Sample lots were ⅛c lower. Rye was steady. No. 2 in store nominally 58c, and No. 2, fresh receipts, salable at 58⅛c. May sold at 63c, closing at 63c bid and 63⅛c asked, with 58c bid for February and 58⅛c for March. Barley was slow and easy for samples, with No. 2 in store quotably 60c, No. 3 43c, and No. 4 35@36c. Timothy advanced 4c, prime spot seed selling early at $1.90 and later at $1.92. March delivery sold at $1.92, and $1.94½ was bid at the close. Clover was quotably firm at $5.90@5.95 for prime seed. March delivery sold at $6.00. Flax steady at $1.11½ for No. 1 regular, and $1.12 on track. Rejected sold at $1.08@1.10, and March delivery at $1.12¼@1.12⅛. Millstuffs firm, with sales of bran at $12.25@12.75, and middlings at $12.25@13.00. Hay was steady and in good demand, with a slight improvement in values, and the street markets quiet.

An order for 3,000 sacks of flour was filled here yesterday to go to Atlanta, Ga. This is what tells after all. In the language of Pope, "The rest is all but leather and prunella."

Oats were flattened yesterday by the expectation of big receipts for Monday. The arrivals were estimated to exceed 200 cars. The weakness told especially on white lots sold by sample.

The export demand for rye has been about nil in this city for several weeks past. Apparently the tariff on imports of rye by France and Germany acts as a prohibition, at least so far as the rye of the United States is concerned.

Somebody thought yesterday that the strength in wheat was akin to that at a euchre party, where a point over is allowed to apply on the count for the next game. In other words, it was supposed that the strength was mostly what remained over from the previous day.

One cable of yesterday said that the rumor of a large failure in the grain trade in Liverpool is confirmed. Another said there were several failures. The first version is probably the correct one.

Memberships in the Board of Trade of this city are now nominal at about $2,700 each.

It was reported in New York yesterday that the Lake Shore, Erie, and Chicago & Atlantic were offering to cut rates to the seaboard 2½c per 100 lbs.

NEW STYLES.

SUITS OF CLOTHES DISPLAYED IN A FIFTH AVENUE TAILOR SHOP WHICH IT, IS SAID, ARE TO CREATE A NEW FASHION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Several suits meant to be worn by men at fashionable balls in place of the conventional evening dress of black broadcloth are today on view in the store of a leading Fifth avenue tailor. They are modeled after the costumes of the time of Charles IX., with doublets of velvet, feathered hats, and colored hosiery. The maker gravely asserts that they belong to society beaus, who, as he understands it, are to wear them at a reception next week, preparatory to an effort to introduce them as a fashion. He will not give the names. Possibly they are really to be donned as a freak at a hunt club ball which is to take place at Rockaway, and wherein the red and buff suits of the huntsmen will be a feature. But a guess is that they are an advertising expedient preliminary to the advent of Whistler, the eccentric London painter, who is to make a lecture tour of this country. Color is given to this explanation by the fact that his manager is D'Oyley Carte, who brought out Oscar Wilde, and who is fertile and bold in devices to force public attention. Whistler is to discuss costuming in its artistic phases.

A SORROWING MOTHER.

SHE IS RELEASED FROM PRISON JUST IN TIME TO ATTEND THE FUNERAL OF HER HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A very distressing incident in connection with the pardon of Mrs. Margaret Cooley and Mrs. Rebecca Merritt, formerly of Baraboo, by Gov. Rusk last night came to notice today. The women were sentenced here to State Prison last May for two years for perjury committed in trying to clear a husband of one and a brother of the other woman of a charge of burglary. Mrs. Cooley left a baby and two small children and the separation was very touching. An effort was at once made to secure a pardon for the women. Their previous characters had been good. The pardon was issued last night, and today a telegram was received notifying the Governor that Mr. Cooley and the three children had been burned to death yesterday morning in their house near McGregor, Ia., and asking the Governor to hasten his signature to the pardons so that the women could be released to attend the funeral of their dead. The pardons had been signed but a short time before the telegram was received. The conviction of the women created much sympathy here, which the distressing circumstances of their release increase.

DUTIABLE GOODS.

RAILROADS.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Playing Havoc with the East-Bound Business—Figures.

In spite of the denials that the Chesapeake & Ohio is seriously disturbing east-bound freight rates and is taking away the bulk of the business from the regular pool lines, the fact is now established by undisputable proof that the Chesapeake & Ohio is playing havoc with the east-bound business. At a recent meeting of the St. Louis Committee of East-Bound Freight Traffic it was shown that the daily shipments by that line were largely in excess of any of the Eastern roads, and that it has been carrying fully 60 per cent of the entire business to the seaboard during the last two weeks. At the present time the shipments of corn averaged from fifteen to forty cars per day. The entire shipments of beer from St. Louis to Baltimore, Washington, New York, and other Eastern points, amounting to several cars daily, had been transferred from the all-rail lines; also a large proportion of the provisions, wool, and other miscellaneous business was being forwarded by this route. Within the last few days 5,500 tierces of lard had been contracted for export via New York. From reliable information there was no question of the fact that rates much lower than the regular tariff—less the agreed differentials—had been made in order to secure the business. It was the unanimous opinion of all those present at the meeting that unless measures could be adopted at once to correct this state of affairs serious trouble and a general demoralization of rates would be the natural result. The following resolution was adopted and telegraphed to Commissioner Fink:

Resolved, That the trunk lines be requested to make some definit arrangement with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway to govern business destined to Richmond, Newport News, Washington, Baltimore, New York, and other Eastern points that will effect a strict maintenance of the present or such other differential rates as may be agreed upon; also to arrange, if possible, that daily statistics be furnished the Joint Agent showing their shipments, routes, etc. If an absolute and satisfactory arrangement for the maintenance of rates and the agreed differentials cannot be consummated at once, the St. Louis lines are emphatic in their position that in justice to their interests they should be allowed to take such measures to protect themselves as in their judgment may seem proper.

This accounts for the secrecy with which the proceedings of the late meeting of the Eastern managers in this city were conducted, and also for the statement that the question of rates was not considered. It can be stated upon good authority that the question of rates was considered, but that many of the most prominent roads emphatically declined to enter into any agreement for their maintenance so long as the competition by the Chesapeake & Ohio as well as the cutting by some of the "affiliated" lines was allowed to exist. This accounts for the conferences held between the managers of the Vanderbilt lines and Commissioner Blanchard and the hasty departure of the latter for New York. He is to consult with Commissioner Fink and the trunk-line managers as to steps to be taken to prevent the diversion of traffic by the Chesapeake & Ohio and some other lines engaged in cutting rates. It is learned that if the trunk lines do not at once find ways and means to rectify the evils complained of the Vanderbilt roads mean to commence active hostilities without further delay.

The east-bound shipments from this city during the last week are no more satisfactory than for the previous weeks. While there is an increase in the shipments of flour, grain, and provisions of about 8,000 tons over the week previous, yet it is understood that it is due to cutting of rates by certain lines. As compared with the shipments for the corresponding week last year the showing is exceedingly bad; the total shipments then amounted to 81,375 tons, showing a decrease of 48,205 tons. The Baltimore and Philadelphia lines again carried the great bulk of the traffic.

The following statement shows the amount of flour, grain, and provisions shipped east from this city through to seaboard points for the week ending Feb. 6, 1886:

THE WESTERN AND NORTHWESTERN PASSENGER WAR.

The announcement in yesterday's TRIBUNE that the Milwaukee & St. Paul had inaugurated active hostilities on Council Bluffs and St. Paul passenger rates by reducing the second-class rate Chicago to St. Paul from $9 to $7, and making a second-class rate on Council Bluffs business of $7 also, while heretofore only first-class tickets at $12.50 were sold to the latter point, took the other roads completely by surprise. While they anticipated a cut on Council Bluffs rates by the Milwaukee & St. Paul they had no idea that it would also take the initiative in reducing the St. Paul rates, as it has a larger interest in this business than any of the other lines. So far the cut on Council Bluffs and St. Paul business has not been met by any of the other lines. They claim that there is but little second-class business to Council Bluffs, and they do not propose to reduce regular rates until they find that the action of the Milwaukee & St. Paul inflicts injury upon their interests. The Rock Island did not care to act hastily as regards St. Paul rates, and thought it could wait until next week before meeting the cut made by the St. Paul Road. It was found, however, that the cut on second-class rates to Council Bluffs of $5.50 did affect the emigrant rates to California and Colorado points which they could not allow to go by unnoticed, and consequently the Rock Island and Burlington Roads filed evidence with Arbitrator Wilson that there was a cut on emigrant rates to San Francisco to $47, the regular rate being $52.50, and also on Denver rates to $26, the regular rate being $31. Therefore, in accordance with the authority conferred upon him by the Missouri River agreement, Arbitrator Wilson yesterday afternoon issued a joint notice authorizing the sale of limited emigrant tickets to San Francisco at $47, and to Denver at $26. They say they will only meet the reductions made by the St. Paul when they find that it affects their business, as is the case with California and Denver rates. The Milwaukee & St. Paul people say they do not intend to take any notice of the reduction made by the other lines to San Francisco and Denver, and will take no further steps regarding Council Bluffs and St. Paul rates so long as the other roads do not reduce rates to those points. The St. Paul Company says it does not insist that the Missouri River agreement shall embrace the traffic to Northwestern points but only that it will not continue in the Missouri River agreement while the business to the Northwest is not also protected by an agreement which shall secure the maintenance of rates to the Northwest and be coexistent with the Missouri River agreement, although there is no objection to a separate agreement if the other lines prefer. That is all the company wants. It claims that this was promised when the Missouri River agreement was formed, and this promise should be fulfilled. It is quite likely that this enunciation of its position by the Milwaukee & St. Paul will bring about a conference between the Northwestern roads and a cessation of hostilities, as a prominent official of the Rock Island stated yesterday that there seems to be a misunderstanding regarding the position of his company. It does not object to meet with the other roads to consider the regulation of St. Paul business so long as it is done independently of the Missouri River agreement. It will not, however, attend a meeting which proposes to consider the application of the Missouri River agreement to the St. Paul business so long as the Milwaukee & St. Paul is not a party to that agreement. As both roads virtually take the same position regarding a meeting to consider St. Paul business there is no longer any reason for not holding such meeting without further squabble, and the indications are that a meeting will be held next week, none of the roads being desirous of carrying on a disastrous war which, after having once fairly started, may assume gigantic proportions and affect all passenger business West and Northwest from Chicago.

The Rock Island desires to deny the imputation made by the St. Paul Company that it has been cutting St. Paul rates. It claims that it has maintained the rates as well as any of the other lines.

THE NEW READING AND COAL COMBINATION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—It is said that Drexel, Morgan & Co. will issue their plan for the reorganization of the Reading and the forming of a great coal combination either today or early next week. The following is reported to be the true story of the combination: When Reading advanced 25 last fall stories were circulated that Pennsylvania interests had been the buyers and had acquired the Vanderbilt holdings of the stock. This was true. The syndicate had and has a great block of Reading stock and junior securities, and elected Mr. Gowen President. This will probably induce Mr. Gowen to coöperate with the syndicate. The syndicate is headed by Drexel, Morgan & Co., B. K. Jamison & Co., John Lowber Welsh, A. J. Cassett, and a number of prominent New York operators. This plan is said to be to issue $100,000,000 4 per cent Reading bonds, guaranteed by Pennsylvania, just as West Shore 4s were issued and guaranteed by the New York Central. These will be used to retire the bonds held in escrow, $33,000,000 general mortgage, $25,000,000; juniors, scaled to $22,000,000. Total, $80,000,000; balance on hand, $20,000,000. The stock is to be assessed $10 per half share, or $20 per full share, giving $7,000,000 cash, or, with the bonds, $27,000,000 to settle with creditors, etc. The rentals are to be cut down and creditors settled with just as North River construction, West-Shore terminals, West-Shore receivers' certificates, floating debt, etc., were settled. The fixed charges and rentals will be reduced to not more than $10,000,000. The coal combination part of the plan is: Lehigh Valley controls the Jersey Central. Lehigh Valley has been operated in the interest of the Pennsylvania, and will be. The production of coal last year was: Reading, 11,680,700 tons; Lehigh Valley, 6,167,400; Pennsylvania Railroad, 3,393,600; total, 21,241,700; Lackawanna, 4,987,800; grand total, 26,229,500. Lackawanna stock has been bought by the syndicate, and it is said that the syndicate will probably be represented in the directory to be elected Feb. 23. Lackawanna joins the combination, and 83 per cent of the anthracite production is controlled. Erie will make no trouble, and Delaware & Hudson and Pennsylvania coal, with 4,800,000 tons, can do no harm, and will probably wheel into line.

NOTES.

Mr. S. R. Ireland has been appointed agent of the Commercial Express (fast-freight line), with office at No. 77 Clark street, Chicago, vice Mr. J. D. Hays, resigned.

The gross earnings of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad for the month of January were $326,600, a decrease as compared with the same month last year of $5,000.

The gross earnings of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad for the month of January were $1,056,910, a decrease from the same month last year of $113,839.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company asks for bids for the construction of 300 flat cars to be used in the construction of its new Kansas City line. Active work on this line will be commenced shortly.

The office of General Manager of the Transcontinental Transportation Company has been abolished, Mr. M. S. Foote having retired from the service of the company. All communications pertaining to the general business of the company should be addressed to President William Fagan at New Orleans, La. Mr. John Robb has been appointed agent and car accountant, with office at No. 10 Pacific avenue, Chicago, Ill., to whom all reports of movements of cars should be sent.

THE GREAT DEBATE.

WHAT MR. GLADSTONE SAID RECENTLY IN THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

From Mr. Gladstone's Speech—SIR: I am under the deep and solemn conviction that nothing but a gentle and conciliatory handling of this matter by all persons concerned, be they who they may, can by any possibility neutralize the dangers or give a hope of attaining the benefits that may be in store for us in the prosecution of the questions of the condition and of the government of Ireland. And, therefore, from the first my highest ambition has been, it continues to be, and I rebuke myself by anticipation if I deviate by a hair's breadth from the principle, not to say one word of any man mingling in this question that can bring the elements of wrath and passion into a debate and a consideration which nothing but patience, nothing but self-restraint, nothing but the casting aside of much prejudice and prepossession, nothing but a determined disposition to look alone at what candor and justice demand, will afford us the smallest hope of solving. Sir, I wish to assure the House that since the declaration of the 17th September I have not said one word or done one act in extension of that declaration. What I have said and what I have done, little as it is, except as to private study—and I do not deny that the subject has been my daily and my nightly thought—what I have done has been, in the first place, to show where responsibility lay. Responsibility lies where the means of action lie. In my opinion there could be no greater public calamity than to bring this question within the lines of party conflict. . . .

I hope, and I feel sure, that there is no intention at all on the part of her Majesty's Government, or on the part of any person in this House, whatever their political opinions may be, to interpose any obstacle in the way of Parliamentary judgment, as a bar to the fullest exposure by Irish members of what they may think it right to urge on behalf of their country. It would be a sad error in point of prudence—as it would be, in my opinion, a violation of Parliamentary and of public decency—were we not, at any rate, to admit this fact, that although we know nothing of what is going to be asked, and certainly we know nothing that would justify us in saying that it could be easily conceded, yet whatever it is—if it be true that five-sixths of the Irish representatives—claiming, of course, the same liberty for the other sixth—have come here to make representations and pleas in the name of their country—armed with the authority that their constituencies have been legally empowered to give them—our duty is to accord to them freely a patient, and respectful, and candid hearing. . . .

A Queen's speech is a very formal document, and I do hold that the phrase fundamental is unknown in the British Constitution. I understand that law is of the greatest importance. I am not disparaging that law, but the imposition of the phrase "fundamental" for the first time is a matter upon which there might be a legal or another argument, and it is also open to remark that it is stated that there can be no change in that law, whereas what really is the case is that her Majesty's Government mean to make themselves a strong declaration of their determination to maintain that unity rather than that they wish to be judged by minute criticism. It is obvious that this fundamental law is not infrequently altered in minor points, and had been altered in the year 1869 with respect to the establishment of a Protestant church in Ireland, which the act of union declared to be essential and fundamental to the union. . . .

It is excellent to say that you will maintain the unity of the Empire; in Heaven's name do maintain it with all your might. But we have been maintaining it for eighty-five years [Irish cheers], and not only for eighty-five years, but for 600 years before. Something more than that is requisit. Whatever you think adequate to the case—be it for social order, be it for local government—let us know, and let us know promptly, what it is.

From Mr. Parnell's Reply: For the present I will only say that I can have little doubt that if the House at large, or if the majority of the House, approaches the question of the government of Ireland and the alterations to be made in that government in the same spirit and the same largeness of view as characterized the speech of the right honorable gentleman, the member for Midlothian, tonight, I have not the slightest doubt that a solution will be found so as to enable Ireland to be intrusted with the right of self-government. And so as to secure those guarantees regarding the integrity of the Empire, the supremacy of the Crown, and the protection of the minority—what is called the "loyal minority" in Ireland—which have been required by both the responsible leaders of the great political parties in this House, I have always believed that if we could come to the decision—if we could agree upon the principle that the Irish people are entitled to some self-government, that Parliament has to a large extent failed in its self-imposed mission of legislating for Ireland during the eighty-five years which have elapsed since the union—that we would not find the details so very formidable, or find such great difficulties in the way of securing the Empire against the chances of separation, as seem to oppress the public man in England at the present moment. My own candid opinion is, that so far from increasing the chances of separation the concession of autonomy would undoubtedly very largely diminish them. . . .

Mr. Speaker, this question is really a question of the amount of rent that the landlords of Ireland are to receive; and when honorable members representing the landowners of the country talk about the integrity of the Empire they are talking of the integrity of their breeches pockets. The land question is undoubtedly a very difficult question, and to my mind presents the real points of difficulty in arriving at a solution of the question of Irish autonomy, and the House would find, if that question were once settled on a basis satisfactory to the Irish landowners and the tenants of Ireland, if such a basis could be arrived at we would hear nothing more from Irish representatives on those (Ministerial) benches about the integrity of the Empire and the risk of separation. We have been spoken to tonight about the necessity of protecting the "loyal minority." Well, sir, I was myself born a Protestant, I have lived a Protestant, and I hope to die a Protestant, and if in the future, after the concession of Irish claims, any danger were to arise to my Protestant fellow-countrymen I should be the first to stand up for that liberty of speech and that liberty of conscience, and liberty to live and thrive of every section of the community, whether they were Protestants or whether they were Catholics, and perhaps I may be a more effectual aid to them in times of real danger than some of those gentlemen who talk so loudly and boast so much. But I have no such apprehension. I am convinced that the Catholics of Ireland would not attempt to oppress their Protestant fellow-countrymen, and that they would desire that it would be their object in view of the history of ages, the history of the past, that the Protestants of Ireland should have more than fair play, that they would endeavor to bring them to the front and give them the fullest share in the government of Ireland.

VANDERBILT GENEROSITY.

THE YOUNG MEN SHOW SOME REGARD FOR THEIR EMPLOYES ON THE FOURTH AVENUE STREET-CAR LINE—DEPEW OPPOSES THEM.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Cornelius Vanderbilt has personally taken hold of the management of the Fourth Avenue Horse Railroad, so far as the employés are concerned, and to him is due the voluntary reduction of the hours of labor for conductors and drivers from fourteen to twelve per day. This line is an adjunct of the Vanderbilt steam railroads, and the tracks are still used for freight traffic from the Grand Central Depot to the goods station down-town; but the horse-car service, the route being closer than any other to the fashionable centre of the town, has long been dominant. In former times the horses were notoriously unfit, and much of Bergh's earlier efforts were expended in their behalf; but one day William H. Vanderbilt, soon after coming into his inheritance, was struck by the cruelty to the brutes, and he peremptorily ordered the riddance of all the poor and lame ones. Since then the live stock has been first-rate. But the human beings at work were not the recipients of corresponding consideration. Since the death of William H. Vanderbilt his sons Cornelius and William K. have come into active rather than merely nominal management of the railroad interests. Cornelius had been permitted by his father to do what he liked for the moral and religious benefit of the employés, and the Railroad Young Men's Christian Association is one of the consequences; but on getting substantial control he began at once to plan their physical good. The men on the Fourth avenue line were laboring fourteen hours a day regularly, and longer whenever snow or anything else delayed the trips. This week the time is reduced to twelve hours, with the pay left at $2, and a proportionate allowance for accidental overtime.

That was done on the peremptory order of young Vanderbilt. But in the execution the new time-tables partially defeated his purpose, because the trips were so arranged that, though a man was employed only twelve hours, he was kept waiting enough to extend his day's work to nearly the old length. Therefore, when the other companies' employés struck Thursday the cars of the Fourth avenue line were also stopped.

Chauncey M. Depew, President of the Vanderbilt roads, is all out of sympathy with Cornelius Vanderbilt, and the conductors and drivers of the street-cars believe that to him was due the practical nullification of the order to reduce the hours to twelve. Depew declines to define his position, but he is outspoken against the labor unions. "This city contains enough social dynamite to blow the whole civilization of the world to pieces," he declares; "the dangerous elements of all the nations are sent here for us to deal with, and if once thoroughly organized the police and citizen soldiery could not begin to check them. We sleep in placidity over this volcano. Men who have been trampled upon by governments and individuals, and who therefore owe a grudge against humanity in general, are dumped in here to be incorporated with our populace. Labor organizes unions, but is an army without supplies or hospitals; and the benevolent wealth gives the only thing that stands between us and destruction—bounty to the extent of $7,000,000 a year for charitable enterprises."

The strike on the Fourth avenue road lasted longer than on the others because, while the Superintendent was ready to set the men to work on the schedule demanded, he was under orders not to give his answer to the committee of the Knights of Labor or any other trades-union body. This policy has caused much ill-feeling against the Vanderbilt interests among the labor unionists.

More Startling Talk About Civil War—England Ahead in the Balkan Difficulty.

Perilous Times for France—Nihilistic Activity in Russia—Politics in Germany.

SPECIAL CABLE LETTER.

GLADSTONE'S MANY DIFFICULTIES—CIVIL WAR TALK—A WILD REPORT OF A THREATENED FRENCH INVASION—ENTER THE NEW CABINET.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—[Copyrighted by The Chicago Tribune.]—The enemies of Mr. Gladstone are now looking for the fulfillment of the grim prediction of his Tory brother, Sir Thomas Gladstone, that "William will ruin England and die in a madhouse." The new Premier is hedged in by many militant elements. It would doubtless be improper to call the Queen an enemy to Mr. Gladstone, but that her Majesty regards his accession to the Premiership as a disaster is apparent from the effort made last week to interpose, with the help of Mr. Goschen, a combination Cabinet with Lords Hartington and Salisbury as Premier and Foreign Secretary, and by the Queen's firm declaration that she would prefer abdication to the signing of a bill to repeal the Union.

Will Gladstone confound his enemies by achieving a successful reconciliation of the Irish people to English dominion? Nothing less will suffice. His best friends admit that his actual Cabinet is a thing of shreds and patches, incoherent, rickety, and facing tremendous chances of shipwreck between the Scylla of agrarian revolution and the Charybdis of Irish independence. Gladstone alone is serenely confident that he can satisfy at once the Peers of Westminster and the peasants of Westmeath, harness Chamberlain with Davitt, make Catholic Connaught embrace the Calvinist Aberdeen, and Royalist Ulster take to her heart the Radical John Morley.

An important meeting of Irish Loyalists and their sympathizers was held at Hull last Friday night. The Duke of Abercorn presided and made a speech, which, though not encouraging to the Nationalists, was still so mildly phrased as to anger the Loyalists. The Ulster men present loudly resented his Grace's language and provoked angry demonstrations from the Yorkshiremen, which almost resulted in open hostilities. Earl Fitz William will preside at another Loyalist meeting at Sheffield next Wednesday evening. It is understood that the Ulster leaders have ordered 10,000 stand of arms in preparation for the civil war which they consider inevitable. A Loyalist leader affirms that Gen. Lord Wolseley, being asked whether the Queen's troops would fire upon Ulster Loyalists as skillfully threatened in a recent speech by Thomas Sexton, promptly replied: "Any royal officer would resign his commission first." All of which confirms my judgment that English passion will prove as dangerous in the future as Irish organization is now.

Both the old and new Cabinets went to Osborne today, where in the presence of the Queen, though not at the same moment, the seals of office were transferred. After this ceremony had been gone through with unsuccessful Conservatives and successful Liberals forgot their differences and dined together with all the apparent joviality of city Aldermen. Wednesday next they will meet again under the hospitable roof of the Prince of Wales, when today's festivities will be renewed.

The new Cabinet is as completely in the power of the Premier as the cabin passengers of an Atlantic steamer are in that of the commander. With a few notable exceptions Mr. Gladstone's colleagues are, as a matter of fact, Mr. Gladstone's clerks. He alone is held responsible by the Queen for the acts of the Ministry, and he determined beforehand, in the choice of his assistants, that there should be none among them not as wax in his hands.

In conversation yesterday one of the new Ministers actually said that though home rule in Ireland was capable of being tolerated by the English people, it would really only avert a greater peril. When asked what greater peril, he replied: "French invasion is possible any day as a desperate resort to uphold the tottering French Republic." Such fatuity as is exhibited by the Minister's remark is the result of an obstinate blindness to the progress of Irish agitation. An honest study of Irish discontent and distress by ten capable British statesmen ten years ago might have averted the crisis which is now escaping from the control, apparently, of British statesmanship.

Nothing in American politics was ever more personal or bitter than the comments which are made on the new Cabinet by members of the opposition or by the discontented followers of Lord Hartington.

A leading Whig today attributed the adhesion of Earl Spencer to the new Government to the failure of his Northamptonshire estates to pay their usual rents.

The appointment most applauded is that of Sir Farrer Herschell. On taking his seat in the Upper House as Lord High Chancellor, which dignity carries with it an elevation to the Peerage, Sir Farrer will retain his family name and become Lord Herschell, thus following the example set by Lords O'Hagen, Macaulay, and Brougham. Curiously, Sir Farrer Herschell, fifteen years ago, thought of abandoning the law in despair, but was persuaded to persevere, with the result of finding himself today at the head of his profession and a Peer of the realm.

The most criticised and derided of the new Ministers is Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer. When Sir William was a junior counsel on the Northern Circuit, over twenty years ago, and held the position of steward, it appears that he failed to render a proper account of his stewardship. When questioned closely on the subject of his expenditures by one of the seniors, it is reported that he replied: "The accounts be damned. The money is spent; the Lord only knows how!" It is suggested that this method applied to the Treasury would vastly simplify the procedure in that department.

The discontent in Parliament at the distribution of places ferments. The extraordinary proposition published in one of the Government journals today that Lord Rosebery keeps the Foreign Office warm only until Sir Charles Dilke, at present obscured by the Crawford scandal, had been whitewashed, and then put into the Colonial Office and that Lord Granville be then appointed Privy Seal, is equally polite to Lord Rosebery, Sir Charles Dilke, Lord Granville, and Mr. Gladstone. The approval at Berlin of Lord Rosebery's appointment to the Foreign Office exasperates Paris, but Dilke's appointment would be popular at Paris and equally exasperating at Berlin. Lord Rosebery's acquaintance with Bismarck is recent, but he has long been familiar with the leaders at Paris. He is a member of two French clubs, is an accomplished French scholar, and would never play a game on any foreign Power. He is especially friendly toward America. He knows and likes Mr. Bayard and sent him sympathetic messages in his recent cruel afflictions. He will surely handle the fishery question fairly, taking no advantage of American blunders.

DAVID NERO'S ESCAPADES.

The staid burg of Glasgow has been engrossed for a week by the escapades of David Nero, the negro preacher and adventurer who is in custody there. Nero, who hails from Kansas City, Mo., is astounded and disgusted by the discovery that his transactions have been published in America through the agency of the Cable News. He was first apprised of this fact by a cablegram which he received last Wednesday. The Glasgow police have accumulated a vast mass of evidence against the prisoner, and it is still coming. Many clergymen have voluntarily furnished details of Nero's preaching, and of his collections, and other transactions. Papers in the possession of the police show that Nero first arrived in Scotland last June. He forthwith started preaching, and publicly announced that he was the Principal of the Sumner College, Kansas City, Mo. The directors of that institution had, he said, sent him on a special mission to Europe to realize funds to equip an expedition to evangelize the natives of Southern Africa. He produced as credentials certificates from the Presbytery of Missouri and from Prof. Robertson, Secretary of the Sumner College. Nero began his crusade in Glasgow, enlisting the sympathies of many pastors of churches and chapels, who freely opened their pulpits to him. His preaching was fervid, flowery, and not without a rude eloquence which was very effective. He always inveighed against unholy cravings for filthy lucre, and pointed out the delight of giving to the Lord's servants for the spreading of His word. By the collections which invariably followed his sermons he realized several thousand pounds in Glasgow alone. Flushed with this success he widened his field of operations and appeared successively in Edinburg, Liverpool, Manchester, Sunderland, London, and Paris. His Glasgow success was repeated in all these places, and when he returned to America last October he must have been possessed of a small fortune.

Nero's trip to America was probably for the purpose of investing or secreting his booty. It was only a flying trip, and he was soon back in Glasgow, where he was welcomed with open arms by pious churchmen, matrons, and maidens. During the whole time of his stay in Glasgow he kept a succession of young and pretty white mistresses in snug private quarters in a suburb of Glasgow. The latest inmate of his harem fled when Nero was arrested and is now being sought by the police. Although thus living in secret profligacy Nero was admitted to excellent society circles in Glasgow, and positively became the rage among many dainty young women and blooming matrons, on whom he frequently called in the daytime. He thus became betrothed to three highly respected women and with the full consent of their relatives. Each of these deluded spinsters was solemnly promised that she would be married by Nero on the eve of his departure for Africa and would be taken there to aid in evangelizing the natives. Among the papers seized by the police at Nero's dovecote were reams of stationery, all bearing the imprint of Sumner College, and hundreds of amorous letters from girls and women in various towns.

THE BALKANS.

The Tory St. James' Gazette mischievously comments on the reappearance in London of Mme. de Novikoff, the Russian Egeria of Mr. Gladstone, which has already been mentioned in these dispatches. Her motions are not without diplomatic significance, and, as she is a notorious intriguante for Greece, it is assumed that her present mission is pro-Hellenic. The Greeks are staggered by the cold shoulder turned to them by Gladstone. There is a story today that Russia has instructed Baron de Staal, her Ambassador here, to propose an alliance between the Czar, Premier Gladstone, and the unspeakable Turk to quiet the whole Eastern uproar, including the complaints of Servia and Greece.

THE CZAR'S TURBULENT SUBJECTS.

Meanwhile the Nihilists in the Czar's dominions are awaking to an activity unparalleled in recent years and the police are spurred on to phenomenal vigor. Accounts have just reached London of the execution of four Nihilists in the citadel of Warsaw. A Polish student of noble blood was the first one hanged. He died shouting: "Long live the social revolution." Another of the condemned, a man named Bardowski, was taken with a fit on the scaffold and was strung up while writhing in convulsions. The last of the quartet was a stalwart shoemaker named Ossowoski, who suffered terribly and was choked to death after a long struggle.

TOTTERING FRANCE.

The remark of a new English Minister, already cited, about the tottering French Republic, is excused by the actual situation at Paris. The heavy vote in favor of the amnesty of criminals emphasizes the amazing proposition of Deputy Basly to legalize lynch law for murder. An ugly story comes from Saint Quentin—a town made historic as the scene of the tremendous defeat of the French by Philip of Spain in 1557—that starving workmen are in full revolt and have been filling the streets with barricades, and though torn down by the police they will probably be renewed, and across them blood will soon be shed. Threats are hinted against the Orleans Princes. Ex-Premier Brisson, the man of September, reappears in the Legislature proposing their expulsion. This step indicates a decay of the confidence of the Republican leaders in the popular support and correspondingly encourages the Royalists. There is reason to believe that a marriage has been arranged between Crown-Prince Charles of Portugal, now visiting France, and a daughter of the Comte de Paris, now in her 15th year. This fact, together with the recent marriage of Princess Marie to Prince Waldemar of Denmark, shows the confidence felt in royalist circles in the future of the Orleans dynasty.

A POLITICAL CRISIS IN ROME.

There are rumors of a political crisis in Rome. Crispi, the leader of the Opposition, is making a desperate attack upon the foreign policy of Di Robilant, as tending to make Italy subservient to the other Powers. Di Robilant, however, enjoys to the utmost the favor and confidence of the King. Humbert relies upon Di Robilant because he is a Piedmontese and loves the house of Savoy. He is only 42 years old. He is a gallant soldier and lost an arm in service under Victor Emmanuel. He is quick, resolute, and business-like, and was a great favorit at Vienna when Ambassador there. While occupying that position he married the Countess Aldringen, a member of the highest Catholic nobility. It was through his influence largely that the Austrian Court declined to receive Mr. Keiley as American Minister. The ground taken by him in that matter was that the rejection would be a vindication of Victor Emmanuel from the attacks made upon him in some of Mr. Keiley's speeches. Di Robilant took a firm attitude in support of Bismarck and Salisbury in their recent note demanding Greek disarmament, and he has the resolute qualities to make a good fight against his opponents in Parliament. If he wins it is likely that he will soon succeed Depretis as Premier.

BIMETALLISM.

The strength of the support of bimetallism will be shown to a certain extent Friday next, when Bismarck will ask the Landtag to pass the Alcohol Monopoly bill. He will need the help of the bimetallists to carry the measure and its failure to pass might be further proof of the bitterness of the struggle on this question.

The London Times this week gives a place to the program of the German bimetallists already cabled, indicating a remarkable change in the tactics of that paper on the silver controversy. An important meeting for the discussion of bimetallism will be held at Manchester Feb. 18.

THE GENERAL BUDGET FROM ABROAD.

CLOUDS GATHERING THICKLY AROUND THE NEW MINISTRY—THE UNSATISFACTORY NATURE OF THE APPOINTMENTS.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—[Via Mackay-Bennett Cable to The Tribune.]—Before the new Ministry has actually met Parliament clouds gather thickly over it. Neither by the Irish party nor by the country generally are the appointments deemed satisfactory. Earl Granville to the colonies is a wild piece of absurdity. The old woman did immense mischief at the Foreign Office, and is now turned loose to play havoc with the colonies. His mind is filled with traditions of forty years ago that the colonies are an incumbrance. He knows nothing about them. Natural indolence will prevent him from paying due attention to the official duties. By colonists here his appointment is regarded with consternation.

Kimberley, another of the old gang, who will not be shaken off, and who bitterly offended and estranged the colonies under Mr. Gladstone's last Administration, now has India to play fast and loose with. He is utterly incompetent for the post, and is obstinate, meddlesome, and stupid. A worse man could not be chosen.

Sir William Harcourt as Chancellor of the Exchequer is supremely ridiculous. He has unbounded assurance, but no knowledge of trade or national finances, and no sympathy with the commercial classes. He is arrogant in demeanor, keeping everybody at arm's length.

Mr. Morley has been much puffed up by the press ring, but is an entire stranger to public life, having been brought into Parliament by Chamberlain, whom he obsequiously follows. He has courted the Irish party, but his attacks upon religion give great offense to Archbishop Walsh and the priesthood.

The nation considers these men sorry substitutes for Lord Hartington, Sir Henry James, Mr. John Bright, and the Duke of Argyll, all of whom are excluded from the present Cabinet. The Irish party also are more and more suspicious. They recollect the compact of six years ago, and how they were betrayed. Sir William Harcourt, the author of the severest Coercion bill known in this century, is doubtless quite ready at any time to repeat the dose. Hitherto when the Liberals have recovered power they have soon turned round on their Irish allies. That was so in 1881 and 1882. The leaders now have only the security of [illegible] promises against such a recurrence.

ISSUES AND SIDE ISSUES.

A passage in Mr. Gladstone's address, which has not escaped attention, puts the preservation of social order first on his list of great Irish questions, the very thing done by the late Government. This looks like a vague threat of coercion. Another passage foreshadows an attempt to hang up the entire question of home rule for several months, and insists on preliminary examination and inquiry, but makes no allusion to specific measures. This confirms the conjecture that he intends to gain time enough to tide over the session with a royal commission which could spin yarns for weeks or months. Meantime an attempt will be made to settle the land agitation under the blief that, that disposed of, Mr. Parnell's power will be gone. It is thought that Irish laborers will withdraw from the Land League when they get all they want. This is the Gladstonian scheme; but his mistake is in supposing the Parnellites don't see through it. They are not so easily outwitted as were the poor and foolish Conservatives. Mr. Parnell will evidently insist on having the home-rule question taken up first. He declines any pledges of support until Mr. Gladstone opens his hand.

There is much private bickering going on. Sugary professions are made, but Messrs. Parnell, Sexton, McCarthy, Healy, and O'Kelly are now equal to Mr. Gladstone in parliamentary subtlety, and cannot be caught with blarney or salt. English Radical papers warn them that their demands will be resisted by the Liberals and Conservatives, but Mr. Parnell can afford to laugh at these menaces.

Another side issue, easily invented, is to let Mr. Parnell vote with the Conservatives on any financial, colonial, Indian, or other question, when over goes Mr. Gladstone's house of cards. The Radicals are already trembling in their shoes, with good reason. The Parnellites cannot be hoodwinked and will not allow themselves to be shelved. They take an attitude of vigilant watchfulness, not reposing entire confidence in either party. Mr. Gladstone will find his devices to outgeneral Mr. Parnell all useless. Then he must go on with home rule. Everything now depends on how far he can get his party to follow him. The Whigs are not formidable in numbers in the Lower House, and resistance of the Lords is of little consequence. Mr. Gladstone expects to lead the main Liberal body by degrees. When too far committed to retire they will find themselves in face of separation or a civil war. Lord Hartington, foreseeing this, for once kept his resolution to stand out. This will carry certain weight in the House, but not enough to materially interfere with Mr. Gladstone's plans.

DILKE'S FUTURE.

Never was a man's future trembling so doubtfully in the balance as Sir Charles Dilke's. But for the Crawford divorce suit he would receive the appointment of Foreign Secretary—the ambition of his life. Even now, if he comes out all right, he will get the prize. Earl Rosebery will be transferred to the colonies and the mischievous old Earl Granville will be shunted off with the Privy Seal. Sir Charles Dilke's friends profess confidence in favorable judgment, but very different rumors prevail in his own borough (Chelsea), which is decidedly against him, and it is doubtful if he could secure a reëlection. It has been observed in the House of Commons that Mr. Gladstone never speaks to Sir Charles Dilke, who sits in a far corner of the Treasury benches, silent and downcast. His friends contend that Mrs. Crawford made the charge when not in her right mind, and that she is now prepared to swear that it is all false. Her husband, however, declines to take this view. Mr. Gladstone has been persuaded to keep the Foreign Office in view for the accused, provided his innocence is established. Sir Charles Dilke waits with great anxiety the result of this week's proceedings to decide his fate.

GERMAN POLITICS.

Bismarck may soon have a chance of making an experiment in expropriation. Eighty thousand or 90,000 hectares of land known as the Lubrienski estate are in the market. As this district strikingly exemplifies what the Chancellor calls "Polonization of Prussia," he will hardly resist the temptation of asking the Government to buy the estate.

The members of the Austrian-German Club of Vienna threatened to secede from the National Club in consequence of the action of the latter club in signing a memorial to Prince Bismarck expressing sympathy with his Polish policy without obtaining mutual consent, as required by the articles of the association on all political action. The National Club has now decided not to send the address to Prince Bismarck. The Polish question is creating a great stir throughout the Austrian Empire. The Emperor and Empress paid marked attention to Polish guests at the recent court ball. The Poles contemplate making a demonstration on the occasion of the coming ball.

Hostility to the Spirit-Monopoly bill is as fierce as ever. This latest outcome of Bismarckian statesmanship has, however, found one admirer in a hysteric Hessian, who, writing to an obscure periodical, exclaims:

> Hold fast, your Highness! God reward you for every soul your Brandy bill shall snatch from the jaws of the brandy fiend!

The Cologne Gazette denounces that Hessian as "a reptile." It is rumored that the bill will be withdrawn from the Reichstag, the Government being unable to face the universal opposition to the measure. Over 400 petitions have been presented against the bill. It is thought, however, that Bismarck will persist in his attempt to carry the measure through the Landtag.

Herr von Schultz, the Prussian Minister of Finance, replying to Herr Wolff, Conservative, stated that the Government had abandoned its reform measures having for their object direct taxation owing to the opposition of a majority of the members of the Landtag. He added that, in consequence of this opposition, the Government would be forced to have recourse to indirect taxation.

Dr. Windthorst, leader of the Clericals, will raise a question as to the continued closing of the Catholic seminaries, the recent negotiations with the Vatican having failed to procure their reopening. The Catholic press, commenting upon this fact, declares that the Kulturkampf is not yet dead.

"From the Vistula to the Dnieper" is the title of an important work on the relative military strength of Germany and Russia, just published in Hanover. The author hides his identity, but evidently speaks with knowledge and authority. He thinks it will be many years before Russia will be able to stand against the German army. Long ere Russia could complete her mobilization the German army would have crossed the Vistula, and penetrated into the heart of the Russian territory. Warsaw would not be a serious obstacle, nor would it be possible to prevent the invader from entering Moscow—their proper objective point.

NIHILISM AND SOCIALISM.

The Nihilist scare continues. The police receive constant threats and are harassed day and night by reports of new conspiracies. Their vigilance was rewarded the other day by the capture of a dangerous Nihilist, Sergius Ivanoff, who is believed to be the head or second in command of the revolutionary "will of the people." The party of agents who effected the arrest have been munificently rewarded. It is also said they have arrested a man called Gauner who, assuming the name of Prince Imeritinsky of Caucasus, had the audacity to apply for a card of admission to the Emperor's private garden.

Since the adoption by the German Bundesrath of the bill prolonging the operation of the Anti-Socialist law five years the agitation in Reichstag circles in regard to the measure has increased. The Cologne Gazette says that the coalitions now being formed threaten the defeat of the bill in the Reichstag.

In the Austrian Reichsrath a new Anti-Socialist bill has been introduced. The chief purpose of this measure is the suppression of the sale of Socialist organs. The Zurich Social Democrat declares that, despite anti-Socialist laws, the minor state of siege inaugurated and the incessant persecution of its German comrades, the propaganda is most prosperous, and that all the papers which are suppressed by the Government soon reappear elsewhere. It says that the increasing depression in trade is chiefly felt by workingmen, and that this fact assists the spread of Socialistic doctrines. The smaller tradesmen, it adds, are also suffering, while the large manufacturing companies are paying dividends of 25 per cent.

A revolution is fomenting in Turkish Armenia. The jails in the City of Van are filled with political prisoners, and an extraordinary number of arrests are made every day.

FRANCE.

The Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 347 to 116, has rejected the proposition of the Radicals to extend amnesty to political offenders.

The military promptly destroyed the barricades erected by the strikers this afternoon in the streets of St. Quentin, and effectually suppressed the work of constructing them. Fifty-three of the strikers were arrested today.

THE EGYPTIAN BUDGET.

Moukhtar Pasha, the Turkish Commissioner to Egypt, has submitted the Egyptian budget. It calls for the sum of $84,000 on account of Egypt's share of the expense of maintaining the army of occupation and for $33,500 on account of the gendarmerie and police. Moukhtar Pasha, in submitting the budget, expresses the hope that England will relieve Egypt of the expense of the army of occupation.

ANOTHER REVIEW.

A CORRESPONDENT WHO PROFESSES CONSIDERABLE SATISFACTION WITH THE NEW MEN AT THE ENGLISH HELM.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Tribune.]—The reports of weakness in the new Cabinet are only to be found in the Tory papers. Signs of its popularity and strength are to be found everywhere else in the unprecedented enthusiasm of the crowds which greeted Mr. Gladstone at most stations on the way to Osborne, through a section of country which prior to the last election was bitterly Tory, while Lord Salisbury was suffered to pass in moody silence; in the bright promise that such Ministers as will be opposed at all will be returned at next week's elections with doubled and trebled majorities, and, most of all, in the private confessions which one everywhere hears that the new Ministry is a vast improvement on any which Mr. Gladstone has previously headed. Working masses in the Liberal party are in a tremor of nervous delight at the discovery how easy really it was to exercise the Whigs when once it was resolutely attempted, and how insignificant is the hole which their absence makes. Of the four Whigs who remain Lord Granville is tolerable to the party because he is indispensable as a polished leader in the Lords, and more so because it is tacitly understood that he will be slipped into the Privy Seal as soon as Sir Charles Dilke is ready to enter the Cabinet. The Earl of Kimberley's appointment provokes wry faces. Lord Spencer seems to have been transformed by his experience in Dublin, and the Radicals are more than half-disposed to claim him for their own. While as for the fourth Whig, Sir William Harcourt, he is now, as he always has been, the high priest of the "Cult of the Jumping Cat." Regarding the Whigs who have seceded or who stand aloof sulking, the temper of the party is that they may go hang themselves. The motto of the day is young men to the front.

The most striking figure in the new Cabinet is John Morley, who is not a juvenile in years, to be sure, but he is young in Parliament, and the fact that he jumped into a position of chief responsibility and trial without previous official experience has startled all English prejudices, which favor routine; but now that the English are getting accustomed to the idea they rather like it. Lord Rosebery climbed up by a more regular path, and the chorus of praise from Berlin, Paris, and Vienna with which his appointment is greeted is gratifying to the national pride, though there is an uneasy feeling among some Radicals, one of whose precepts is that an English Foreign Minister ought to be hated and feared in every Capital of Europe.

The third notable young man is the Earl of Aberdeen, the Irish Viceroy, who, although not in the Cabinet, is more discussed tonight than any of the fourteen. He is not well known in London, but he is said to be extremely able, weathy, and devout. He has democratic convictions.

Sir William Harcourt was pitchforked into the Exchequer Chancellorship because he was too much afraid of the dynamiters to return to the home office and the city refused point blank to have Mr. Chamberlain for Chancellor.

The legal appointments are immensely popular. Sir F. Herschell, who is of remote Jewish extraction, is the first of the race and likewise among the youngest men who ever sat on the woolsack.

THE QUEEN.

The Queen comes out of the crisis with less credit than ever. Not even the Tories have a good word for her meddling in the matter, and they privately ascribe their own inglorious stumble out of office to their misplaced confidence in her professed ability to get Lord Hartington to undertake the Premiership. Now it is generally known that she did not try to force him to do this, and said in wrath things about Mr. Gladstone even sharper than those I reported a fortnight ago. This might have been excusable in the eyes of the Tories if they had succeeded, but its ignominious failure mortifies and enrages them. There is a general disgust at the repetition of her tactics of last summer, when she compelled the Ministers of both sides to make the journey to Balmoral in order to see her. Now she has forced both Lord Salisbury and Mr. Gladstone to travel to Osborne, thus crossing water which is always unpleasant at this season, instead of coming herself to Windsor or Buckingham. In the present public temper she would, I fear, be roughly hooted in London if she were to appear again in state on the street.

DAVITT AND MORLEY.

Michael Davitt, speaking here last night, said that Gladstone alone of living English statesman, as Irishmen believed, was capable of bringing lasting peace between Ireland and England. If he now attempted to deal with the question on the lines recently laid down by Mr. Robert Giffen he believed, strange to say, that the result would be satisfactory both to the Irish people and the landlords.

The Pall Mall Gazette issues an extra today called "John Morley, the Irish Record of the New Chief Secretary for Ireland," giving all his speeches on the subject, and reprinting all the famous anti-Forster editorials that appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

After fluctuating curiously during the week, the situation in the Balkans seems again to be extremely threatening. It is at last permanently plain that Russia has been beaten and that England is victorious in the struggle for the control of the Bulgarian policy, which has been the real strife all along. Apparently the shifty Sultan was tied to a settlement bond of self-preservation too strongly to break away. He has affirmed the practical union of the two Bulgarias, and in turn has a guarantee that the whole Bulgarian army shall fight under Turkish officers whenever the Ottoman Empire is assailed. This shuts Russian officers absolutely out of Bulgaria and destroys the chance of Russia regaining even a modicum of her once paramount influence.

The cool and evasive reply of Servia to the joint note of the Powers requesting her to disarm, in which she simply acknowledges the receipt of the note and said she would think about it, is today explained by the statement that just before sending the reply Servia had received from Greece a confidential telegram of an important character. It is surmised that Greece offered to join Servia in resisting the demand to disarm, as it is known that previous to the receipt of the dispatch Servia had drafted a reply very different from the curt note subsequently sent.

THE SEQUEL TO A RIOT.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The sequel to the Polish riot that occurred last June, in which two persons were killed and five wounded, was reached today when Judge Lemmon sentenced the following prisoners, charged with manslaughter, to the Ohio Penitentiary at hard labor: Kiser Trapinski, three years; Lorenz Dulinski, fifteen years; Stanislaus Slavinski, fifteen years; Kiser Chimeryezolski, four years; Theodore Kamaroski, one year; Ignace Stefinski, six years.

THE REV. T. E. GREEN

Will This Morning Resign His Pulpit in the Eighth Presbyterian Church,

And Will Attach Himself to the Episcopalian Church—An Unexpected Move.

His Reasons for the Change as Explained by Himself—His Record Here and Elsewhere.

The Rev. Thomas E. Green will this morning resign the pastorate of the Eighth Presbyterian Church, situated at the corner of Washington boulevard and Robey street, to enter the Episcopalian Church. To the greater portion of the congregation worshiping at the Eighth Church Mr. Green's resignation will be a matter of great surprise, he having consulted but a few of its officials relative to his course. He has been considered one of the rising lights of Presbyterianism among the younger preachers of that denomination in the city, and his determination to leave their ranks will probably cause no less surprise than it will among the aged deacons and elders who are the pillars of Calvinism under his charge.

Speaking of his resignation last evening Mr. Green said: "For several years I have been very strongly led in the direction of what is known as the Episcopal Church. It is no new or sudden determination, and I do not think will be at all a surprise to my congregation or to my brethren of the Presbyterian ministry. It is not based either upon my liking for a ritualistic service, although the orderly and dignified character of the prayer-book service and the fact that the people have a part in both prayer and praise have always seemed very fitting and proper. My more cogent reason has arisen from what I have tried to make careful, historical, and Scriptural study. I dislike denominationalism, and can see but a single chance for single unity, and that in a return to the doctrinal symbols and the tergic observances of the apostolic church. I think I find these most fully developed, or at least attempted, in what is known as the Episcopal Church.

"My relations with the Eighth Church have been to me very pleasant, and I shall leave many warm personal friends among both officers and members, but feeling as I do I cannot but think that my duty is plain, and fear that unconscious tendency in my words or actions might give offense to the convictions of some whom I would not willingly offend."

It was much due to his reason, he afterwards remarked, that he had taken this step now instead of postponing it longer. Believing as he did he could not conscientiously occupy the pulpit of a denomination where he might be unconsciously led to preach his own views, and the manly course he believed for him was to cease his connection with it.

"I have no plans for the future," he continued. "The Bishop is out of the city and will not return for some time. I shall simply offer myself to him on his return and do as he directs."

Mr. Greene came to Chicago about three and a half years ago after a very successful pastorate of over two years at Sparta, over a large and thriving Scotch congregation in Southern Illinois. This was his first charge of any importance, although he was at Mount Carmel for two years after leaving the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1879. Prior to attending Princeton he graduated from McKendrick College. His call to the Eighth Church was unanimous, and to it his ministrations in this city have been confined. The work began at once to grow, especially the evening service and the work among the young people, who soon crowded the church to its utmost capacity, so that during last summer a gallery was built around the auditorium, and this, Sunday evenings, is fully occupied. The type of his preaching has been familiar and practical rather than theoretical and dogmatic. The membership of the church has largely increased, until it has reached about 700, 250 having come in during Mr. Greene's ministration.

THE FIRE RECORD.

A BLAZE IN A NEW YORK SYNAGOG—SMALL TOWNS INVADED—GENERAL LOSSES.

GREENE, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Fire was discovered in the Centennial Block at 5:30 this morning. The first story was occupied by M. J. Hershburg & Co., general stock; basement by Kessler & Yates, billiard hall; second story, Masonic, Knights of Pythias, and Grand Army organizations. Hershburg & Co.'s stock was totally destroyed by smoke and water; insurance on stock $8,000, as follows:

Northwestern Nat'l..	$1,000	German American...	$2,000
North British.........	2,000	Queen.................	2,000
Germania, New York.	1,000

Kessler & Yates' loss, $500; no insurance. Loss on block, $500; insurance, $3,000 in Continental, New York.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Calendar Building caught fire this morning from a forge on the top floor. The flames were extinguished after a short fight, during which the firemen suffered terribly from the cold, and many hands and ears were frostbitten. The loss among the occupants of the building fell on the American Tubing Company, $5,000; insurance, $3,000. The damage to the building, owned by the Slater Mill and Power Company, is about $400, fully covered by insurance.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 6.—The Sibley breaker, five miles from the city, was destroyed by fire today. Loss, $70,000; insurance, $20,000. Two hundred and fifty men and boys are thrown out of employment.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Fire about midnight at Stockwell, a small town fourteen miles from Lafayette, destroyed the grocery-store of J. A. Reobey; loss, $500; insured in Farmers' of York, Pa. I. W. Rayer & Co., general country store; loss, $1,500; insured, $1,000 each in Hartford of Connecticut and Springfield Fire & Marine. Mitchell & Jay, druggists; loss, $1,700; insured for $2,000 in Home, New York. Mrs. Hannah Cole loses $1,000 on building; no insurance. Three attempts were made to fire the Wells Block, but the flames were extinguished. The fire destroyed the best business portion of the town.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The new synagog of the Congregation B'nai Jeshuran, on Madison avenue near Sixty-fifth street, caught fire from an overheated furnace in the basement at 9 o'clock this morning, at the hour when the doors were opened to admit the congregation for the Sabbath service. The rabbi, Dr. Henry S. Jacobs, while putting on his robes discovered the fire, and so quick was its progress that the sacred scrolls and ark had to be abandoned to their fate. A general alarm call summoned the entire available force of firemen and the fire was quickly extinguished. It did $5,000 damage to the building and furniture. Some of the valuable records of the congregation, which is the second oldest in New York, and only last month moved up-town from its old temple on West Thirty-first street, were lost. Had the fire occurred half an hour later disastrous loss of life must have resulted, as the church was filled with smoke in an instant.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 6.—The fire at the Grand Rapids & Indiana car-shops was confined to the buildings mentioned last night. The loss to the railroad company is estimated at $22,400, with an insurance of $11,000. A Woodruff sleeper was burned, valued at $13,000. The work of rebuilding the shops will begin immediately. Twenty-five men are thrown out of work temporarily.

IN CHICAGO.

A two-story frame building at No. 3850 Dearborn street, occupied by C. L. Ruckheim as a saloon and cigar factory, was damaged about $200 by fire yesterday morning.

An overheated stove set fire to some bales of hay in J. O. Harsh's flour and feed store, No. 104 La Salle avenue, damaging the stock about $300 and the building, owned by John Olmsted, about $400. Insured.

A LONG SEARCH FOR CORPSES.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 6.—It is now seven weeks since the occurrence of the terrible disaster in Slope No. 1 of the Susquehanna Coal Company, at Nanticoke, by which twenty-six men lost their lives. The men working in the gangways are of the opinion that it will be weeks, and possibly months, before they can reach the spot where the bodies are supposed to be. It is thought that when the fourth counter, which is now 500 feet away, is reached the work will be dangerous to life. The drilling of the hole is progressing. Up to 8 o'clock last evening 122 feet of pipe had been put down, and there yet remained about 175 feet to be drilled. The officials say that beyond all doubt the men are dead, and that the drilling of the hole is done only to satisfy the relatives of the unfortunate men.

NATIONAL NOTES.

A Bill Forfeiting the Southern Pacific Land Grant—The Tehuantepec Scheme in Great Luck.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—The House Committee on Public Lands today agreed to report favorably a bill to forfeit the Southern Pacific land grant, except the right of way through the public lands, and all necessary land for station buildings, depots, machine-shops, side-tracks, all lands included within the limits of any village, town, or city site, and any lands sold by the railroad company and in the possession of actual settlers to an amount exceeding 160 acres. The question of forfeiting the Northern Pacific land grant was considered, but no action was taken.

The committee has decided to hear no further argument in land grant forfeiture cases, and all who desire to communicate with the committee on land grant matters must do so by brief filed with the clerk of the committee. Next Wednesday morning counsel for the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads will have a hearing before Assistant Secretary Jenks of the Interior Department with reference to the payment to the Government of the percentage fixed by the Thurman act. Contracts on file with the Commissioner of Railroads go to show that certain contracts are in force between the Union Pacific Railway Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, and the Pacific Steamship Company, during the currency of which the railroad companies have paid to the steamship company something over $3,200,000 as a consideration for the diversion of freight and passenger business over these roads. Under the acts of 1862 and 1878 the Government is entitled to 25 per cent of the net earnings of these roads. The question which the Government seeks to settle is whether the railroads should not have included the $3,200,000 in their statement of net receipts. If this be so, the railroad companies owe the Government on this account about $828,000.

The Viticultural Association of California held the second of its series of meetings this afternoon, at which samples of the various native wines were exhibited by Commissioner Wetmore. Messrs. George E. Demey, C. C. Fresh, and F. N. Curtis of W. T. Coleman & Co., the committee appointed at the recent meeting of wine-growers held in New York City, were present, and advocated the general views of the association. At the evening session an address was delivered by Mr. Wetmore on the present and possible future influence of National laws upon the viticultural industries of the country. Mr. Wetmore called upon President Cleveland today, who expressed pleasure at meeting a representative of the wine-growers, and remarked that he wished to know more about the industry, as he was of the opinion that if the people had more pure wine to drink and its use became popular it would be better for them than using some other things, which he did not specify. He expressed also his desire to take an interest in the proposed convention of wine-growers to be held here in May. Mr. Wetmore presented some samples of raisins of California production, which the President considered very fine, and remarked that he had not realized how much success had been achieved in this direction.

The operation of paracentesis thoracis—an exceedingly delicate operation in surgery—was successfully performed on Senator Miller of California last evening. A large quantity of fluid was drawn from the cavity of the pleura, giving the Senator great relief, and his condition is much improved today.

Secretary Whitney will go to New York Monday to examine the United States steamship Juniata before ordering repairs to be made on her. The survey recently had on the Juniata calls for an expenditure of about $25,000, and the Secretary wishes to make a personal investigation of the vessel before authorizing so large an expenditure.

The sub-committee of the House Commerce Committee to which was referred the bills providing for the construction of the Tehuantepec Ship Railway have agreed to report favorably to the full committee a bill similar in its main features to the Vest bill.

TOOK THEIR OWN LIVES.

SUICIDE OF A TEMPERANCE WORKER WHILE TEMPORARILY INSANE—JUMPED FROM THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Leonard Wood of the firm of Hallet & Wood, wholesale dealers in Chicago dressed beef, hanged himself in the barn adjoining his residence in this city this morning. He was about town during the early morning completing arrangements for a temperance lecture to be delivered by ex-Gov. St. John at the opera-house this evening. He had been assigned the duty of introducing the speaker. The deceased was an ardent temperance worker and devoted churchman, and held the position of deacon in the South Congregational Church. He was 55 years of age and leaves a widow and daughter. He was formerly a resident of Leominster, Mass. Temporary insanity was the cause.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A woman, pale-faced and nervous, went out to the centre of the high bridge this noon. Upon reaching the middle pier she leaned over the iron railing and looked down upon the river. Its frozen surface lay 126 feet beneath her. The woman looked hurriedly across the bridge east and west. She was the only occupant. She quietly divested herself of a tightly-fitting cloak of black cloth trimmed with imitation fur. She folded it up and laid it on the bridge floor. On it she placed a muff. Then looking out, but without glancing at the river, she firmly grasped the top of the iron railing and partly jumped, partly threw herself over it. The body fell in a straight line about a foot from the face of the southern side of the pier until, striking an abutment that jutted out from the smooth surface of the masonry at a distance of ten yards from high-water mark, it was shunted outward and struck the ice a couple of yards from the pier. The crash made by the falling body was heard by several persons, but only one, a boy named John Kelly, saw the body as it struck and instantly disappeared beneath the ice. An alarm was given and search made, the body being found. Almost every bone was broken. It was ascertained that the woman's name was Branchu, that she lived with her husband at No. 40 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, that reverses had brought the family from competency to poverty, and that Mrs. Branchu was brooding over the family's misfortunes.

CRASHING AND SMASHING.

THE WAY A BIG VESSEL BUMPED ALONG THE NEW ORLEANS WHARVES AND DID $65,000 DAMAGE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A dense fog prevailed on the river early this morning, just about break of day, and hung over the surface of the river for some time. The British steamship Castle Crag, Capt. Gaylord commanding, was lying near the Jackson street ferry wharf, ready for departure for Liverpool. The departure was delayed for some time on account of the fog, but, the cloud lifting somewhat, it was deemed safe to proceed and the lines were cast off. When the steamer swung out from the wharf the pilot discovered that she would not obey her rudder, and gave orders to reverse the engine. The vessel was under full headway, however, and before the order could be obeyed she ran into the British ship Erin's Gem, lying at her wharf, tearing away planks, straining her joints, and causing the seams of her deck to open.

Sheering off from the Erin's Gem the Castle Crag struck the British ship Equator, smashing her bowsprit, knocking a hole in her side, and crushing the port and starboard sides.

The Equator parted her lines, and the Castle Crag ran between her and the wharf, doing considerable other damage, and finally got into clear water. The officers thought the damage was now over, but the next instant she crashed into the British ship Asiana, leaving her a total wreck, and also badly damaged the Austrian vessel, the Miriam.

Sheering off again, she encountered the Equator for the second time, demolishing timbers right and left.

The Asiana got another severe shaking up, and the Castle Crag turned her attention to the Norwegian bark Ophir, staving in her bulwarks. She then steamed out into the river and was anchored.

There was intense excitement during the accidents, but the vessels being at wharves no lives were lost. The total damage will foot up to about $65,000, divided as follows:

Erin's Gem....................................	$ 7,500
Equator..	25,000
Asiana..	25,000
Ophir..	2,000
Wharf..	1,000

The Castle Crag's damage to her upper works, bow, etc., amounts to $7,000. The Castle Crag had cleared for Bremen with 3,779 bales cotton, 60,000 bushels bulk corn, 8,880 sacks cotton-seed meal, and 5,000 staves. Her agents immediately called a survey and bonded the ship. She will be temporarily repaired in this port and complete her voyage.

Hypnotism Is the Latest St. Petersburg Craze—A Laughable Mistake.

The Dual Life Led by Comte de Tredernes—He Is Undoubtedly Crazy.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—[Via Mackay-Bennett Cable to The Tribune.]—Gatschina hypnotism, the latest fashionable craze in St. Petersburg, is at the bottom of an amusing case which will shortly be tried here. A charming widow, a firm believer in hypnotism, gave a séance the other day to which were invited several St. Petersburg dudes, one of whom had dined so heavily before he got to the séance that he fell off his chair in the widow's drawing-room and went to sleep. The hostess, taking it for granted that he was in a trance, began making mystic passes before his face. This woke him, but, not understanding the situation, he rose, half-stupefied, and boxed the lady's ears. She refused to accept his apologies. The séance was interrupted and the aggressor will shortly be prosecuted for assault.

A CRAZY MAN'S DUAL LIFE.

Baron Haussmann identifies the soi disant Comte de Tredernes, the attempted murderer of Mme. Montauban, as his nephew, Arland. He attributes the crime to insanity. Arland has had a strange career. He became a religious enthusiast, and after a mysterious marriage he became a Roman Catholic and obtained from the Pope a dissolution of his marriage. Then he turned priest, and was next a Bishop "in partibus" and Chamberlain of the Vatican. He became, also, the agent of the Patriarch of Jerusalem in Paris. Subsequently he renounced his vow of celibacy and tried to establish relations with Mme. Montauban. He kept up two residences in Paris, in one of which he lived as a married man with a wife, and in the other acted as priest.

M. BARREME'S MURDERER ARRESTED.

The supposed murderer of M. Barremé, the Prefect of the Department of Eure, who was killed in a railway carriage compartment while returning to Evreux from Paris, with $4,000 in his pockets, Jan. 14, has been arrested. It will be remembered that when the train started from Paris a man asked the guard if M. Barreme was aboard, and, when answered in the affirmative, purchased a ticket and went on the same train. A man answering this person's description left the train at Mantes-sur-Seine before the murder was discovered. The person taken into custody has been identified by the employés of the railway as the man who alighted at Mantes.

The suspected murderer of M. Barreme is named Dubois. He is a member of a firm of manure merchants at Evreux. It is stated that he menaced M. Barreme a short time before the murder.

THE STAGE, LITERATURE, AND ART.

Nine dramas by Silvio Pellico, the noted Italian dramatist who died in 1854 near Turin, have been found in an old drawer in a house in that city and are about to be published. Pellico wrote the first play on Francesca da Rimini.

Sir Arthur Sullivan has avoided the aid of Mr. W. S. Gilbert in his new work, and has chosen Mr. Joseph Bennett to write the libretto for the cantata founded on Longfellow's Golden Legend. He will conduct the first performance of this at the Leeds Musical Festival in October. Mr. Gilbert's "Martyr of Antioch," written to the score of Dr. Sullivan's work, is a poor specimen of a religious libretto, and Sullivan had quite enough of him with that experiment. Mr. Bennett will also write the libretto for Mackenzie's new work, the story of which is based on Mr. Edwin Arnold's poem.

Oscar Blumenthal's new comedy, "Summit and Seide," will hardly live long. It is a scrappy and feeble effort, with all the faults and none of the merits of De Beauplan's play, "Les Pieges Dorces," from which it is partly adapted.

The new play by Barrett and Jones, which will succeed "Hoodman Blind" the 18th at the Princess, is in reality a light comedy, though full of strong dramatic situations. The sensational scenes deal with historical facts in the Cromwellian period, but the Protector himself does not appear as the hero.

M. Penry Houssaye has out a new book called "Les Hommes et Les Idees." It portrays with great boldness the characters of a number of noted men, including Victor Hugo, Alphonse Daudet, Ernest Renan, and Emile Zola.

The "Queer Stories," from Truth, many of which are by Grenville Murray and Hugh Conway, are about to be published in series of one shilling volumes by Swan Sonnenchein.

Mr. James Gordon Bennett has bought in Paris two pictures of Millet for 117,000 francs.

Mme. Clovis-Hugues has completed a bust of her advocate, M. Gataneau.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Mr. Thomson, the Consul at Southampton, has recovered sufficiently to resume his duties.

Capt. Clarke, the hero of the tragic mutiny, is given a hard name by English sailors, who report that he was imprisoned in San Francisco in 1879 for cruelty to the crew of the Lord Harry.

Mr. Gladstone is rusticating at Tentmore, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery.

The report that the aeronauts Girod and Renaud had been rescued turns out to be untrue. They are still missing. The Hovas News Agency is endeavoring to obtain information as to their whereabouts.

[The men ascended in a baloon from Brest Jan. 27 and were blown out to sea.]

Another grand ball, for which 1,800 invitations were issued, was given at the Imperial Palace in Berlin Thursday night. The Empress was, unhappily, too ill to brave the heat and crush of the ball-room, but watched from a gallery, while the Kaiser and the Crown Princess chatted with the guests. The Kaiser was in grand "form," and did not retire till 11 o'clock, when he sat down to a hearty supper. He got to bed and was up again fresh as paint next morning at 7.

The amount which Prince Bismarck has offered the Duke of Edinburg to induce him to sell his rights to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha is £100,000.

M. Lockroy, the French Minister, has settled all the plans for the exhibition in 1889. The State will carry them out. A capital of 40,000,000 francs is guaranteed for the purpose. Two hundred members have been selected from the Senate and Chambers of Commerce, and societies of workingmen, artists, and the press to form an Executive Committee. The exhibition, it has been decided, will be a universal one. The site selected is the Champs de Mars.

THE WHIPPING-POST.

IT WAS SET UP IN SECRETARY BAYARD'S STATE YESTERDAY AND FOUR NEGROES LASHED.

NEWCASTLE, Del., Feb. 6.—Harrison and William Rothwell, John Peachars, and George Norris, all colored, and Frank Playford, convicted of larceny at the present term of court, were publicly whipped on their bare backs in the jail-yard today, receiving from five to twenty lashes each. Edwin J. Hollingsworth was confined an hour in the pillory for forgery. The thermometer was near zero and added materially to the legal punishment and greatly aggravated the process of torture. The first man whipped, although but 23 years of age, has been an inmate of the jail twenty times for terms varying from three to twelve months, and has been whipped nearly every time. His brother William is younger, but is treading the same infamous path.

COCHRANE IS MISSING WITH $17,000.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Feb. 6.—Roderick Cochrane, general agent of the Cochrane Manufacturing Company of this city, is missing with $17,000. In settling the accounts of the season's business Cochrane presented a contra account, part of which was objected to by the company. Their account against him was $7,000, and he offered to pay $3,500 of this if they would consent to adjudicate upon the remainder. The company refused. Cochrane left this week for Detroit, where he is now. Two members of the company went to Detroit endeavoring to get Cochrane to come to some agreement, but in vain.

NEW YORK.

A Filibustering Expedition Said to Have Started from Gotham for Honduras.

Stories as to Bartley Campbell's Mental and Financial Condition—His Statement.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—When the steamship San Domingo of the Clyde Line sailed for South America at 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon she carried a queer set of passengers, about whom there hangs an interesting odor of romance. It is averred that there were in the cargo arms shipped as lard or other merchandise, and the queer passengers were twenty-five rather tough-looking citizens of this land who had been engaged to do a little filibustering in the South American Republics. Some of them knew what they were going down there for, but more of them did not. This is the story: Three weeks ago Stephen Brodie, a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee, was accosted by an individual who gave his name as James Halliday. With him was a friend, and Mr. Brodie was told by them that they had discovered a rubber field in South America. "There's millions in it," said Mr. Halliday's friend, "and we want men to go down there and pull the rubber. You are just the man to find the men for us. We will give them their board and $30 a month. We want men out of jail, men who do not care what they do, men whose lives are of no value to them." It was explained to Brodie that the country to be visited was full of Indians and bad men who wanted to keep all the rubber to themselves and who would fight.

Brodie considered the offer and the next morning he met Halliday and his friend, who said his name was Smith. With Brodie were William Doran, 22 years old, of No. 456 Pearl street, James Brogan, Johnny Connors, Tom Brodie, Stephen's brother, "Dutchy" Gibson, and "Sandy Dick." Matters were arranged and Wednesday last, the day before the San Domingo sailed, Brodie got a note from Smith telling him to meet him with the men at No. 147 Cherry street. Smith didn't turn up, but sent a note for them to be on hand Thursday morning at the office of Jones & Williams, shipping agents, at No. 23 Old Slip. Brodie and his gang went there and met another gang brought together by Mr. Halliday. All the men were induced to sign their names to certain papers and were then marched down to Mr. Williams' home at No. 147 Cherry street. They were then ordered to Pier 36, East River, where the San Domingo lay. At the ship things were very queer. Ten of the men were booked as cabin passengers and fifteen as steerage passengers. Down in the cabin they all had wine, and one of the gang—Loftus—who seemed to be in the confidence of Halliday and Smith, turned to a fellow-tough named William Broche and gave him a big revolver and said: "Here, take this. There is only one man to kill." This aroused the suspicion of the Brodies, and no satisfactory explanation being given they left the ship. At last the ship sailed with twenty-five of the party on board. It is said that the rendezvous of the filibusters, for such it is believed they are, is at Turk's Island or in the West Indies. It is said that no less than 250 men have now been shipped in small detachments to the rendezvous. The party is believed to be ultimately bound to the coast of Central America, where it will be joined by friends of Marco Amelio Soto, President of Honduras, the plot being either to reinstate him or set him up in Guatemala. The agents of the Clyde Line say they did not know of the San Domingo's queer cargo and passengers.

The expedition, Mr. Smith afterward said, was really not to pick rubber. It was sent out in the interest of Mr. Marco Amelio Soto, a very rich and very good South American gentleman, who had been President of Honduras and had been greatly wronged.

IS BARTLEY CAMPBELL SANE?

It was reported in theatrical circles today that application was to be made for the appointment of a receiver for the affairs of Bartley Campbell, the author and theatrical manager. The rumor was freely discussed on the Rialto by the few actors who ventured out in the cold. One who has known Bartley Campbell for many years said to a reporter: "I think that it is another case like poor John McCullough's, and that Bartley is insane. Stories have been floating about for some time regarding his pecuniary and domestic troubles. When Campbell had plenty of money, after he had achieved success with his plays on the road, he placed his money in his wife's hands. Things went well until he became infatuated with a certain actress, and then trouble began at home. He wanted to live luxuriously and spent his money like a lord. His wife would not consent to his having money for such purposes. The money was all in her name. Then came his losses in New York, and I guess they have turned his head. Why, he used to be such a bright fellow; now he is absent-minded and very dull." Mr. W. W. Tillotson is the manager of Bartley Campbell's Fourteenth Street Theatre. He said: "There is not a word of truth in it. I have had entire charge of Bartley Campbell's affairs for some time and know all about them. He is perfectly solvent, and no receiver is to be appointed. That story has arisen from one or two judgments that were entered against him by creditors who, when he was losing money in the beginning of the season—and at the same time his money was tied up—would not wait, but took action against him. He is as sane as any man living, and has had no domestic trouble of any kind. The only insane thing he ever did was aspiring to be a New York manager when he had some good companies on the road that were paying well. Business on the road now is worse than it has ever been, but he is doing fairly well. The only thing paying well seems to be the "Mikado," and that is a second "Pinafore." Mr. Campbell left yesterday for Cleveland. He was in very good health.

Bartley Campbell was seen at the Sherman House last evening in company with Mr. Frank C. Cooper, his business manager. When spoken to in regard to the New York dispatch he said: "So some people think I am going insane, do they? Well, anyhow, I am as sane as the man who wrote that dispatch. As to the statement that an application has been made for the appointment of a receiver for my affairs, let me say that the application was made by myself. The facts are that T. B. McDonough and myself made a contract whereby I was to receive two-thirds of the profits of the "Siberia" company, and he was to have the remaining one-third. McDonough was to make a weekly settlement of the accounts. He failed in this and several other particulars, thereby violating his contract; consequently, before leaving New York last Thursday I made application through my counsel, Judge Dittenhoeffer, for the appointment of a receiver to look after my interests in the case of the "Siberia" company. Losses in New York have certainly not turned my head, for the simple reason that I have had no losses. My profits from the Fourteenth Street Theatre, where "Evangeline" is being played at present, amount to $2,400 monthly. Out of an indebtedness of $17,000 to Manager Colville, contracted in New York last year, I will have but $2,500 in May next should "Evangeline" remain at the Fourteenth Street Theatre until that time, which is the present intention. None of my plays have been a failure since "My Partner." From the "White Slave" alone I have cleared $18,000 in four years. Besides that I am today worth $65,000 in real estate, and my affairs were never in better condition than they are at this time. I expect abuse from envious persons, but they might as well try to fight an adamant man as to defeat me."

THE SOROSIS CLUB DEBATE.

The Sorosis Club tonight discussed the following subject:

WHEREAS, It is universally conceded that the cares and duties appertaining to the home are the natural employments of women; therefore,

Resolved, That these occupations should be among the compensated industries of civilized nations.

Among those present were Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Miss Ada Sweet, both of whom took part in the animated discussion. Half a dozen ladies were on the floor at once. They thought it preposterous that ladies should talk of compensation for their household duties. They denied indignantly that husbands were in the habit of doling out money in exasperating pittances to their wives as had been asserted. For husbands to pay their wives wages would be to reduce the wives to the condition of servants; it would deprive marriage of all sacredness and make love a mockery. Mrs. Foote thought love would stand a much better chance of being permanent if the wife was not reduced to the necessity of surreptitiously searching her husband's trousers pockets for car fare. Mrs. Erminie Smith thought the word "compensation" dreadful. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe thought the happiest families she had ever seen were those in which the equal right to the income and the results of labor were most fully acknowledged. Miss Ada Sweet, the ex-Pension Agent at Chicago, agreed with the President that compensation was a beautiful word. She said the happiest moments of her life were those at the close of the week when she received a check for services performed and thought of it as the means to provide for a younger brother and sister.

THE BROOKLYN WAR MONUMENT.

The model for the great monument ordered by the City of Brooklyn to commemorate the wars of the United States has just been completed by J. Q. A. Ward, the sculptor, at his studio in this city, and will be placed on exhibition in Brooklyn next Monday. It is to be the most elaborate and expensive soldiers' monument erected in this country. It consists of a centre circular shaft, crowned with a group of three figures representing the Angel of Peace separating the combatants—two soldiers. This is spirited and full of life. The upper drum of the shaft is encircled with bassi relievi, typical of the arts, sciences, education, history, agriculture, commerce, etc. At the base of the shaft there are four abutting pedestals crowned with equestrian statues of Washington, Jackson, Scott, and Grant, the great Generals of the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, and the Rebellion. The lower drum of the shaft, back of the Generals, contains the names of the famous battles. The base of the shaft between the pedestals will consist of a bas relief five feet high, telling the story of the Civil War, with scenes showing the rally to arms, departure of volunteers, woman's hospital work, the sanitary service, emancipation, and the battle of the Merrimac and Monitor. At the bottom of the upper bas relief and the front of the shaft above the figure of Grant, and facing the west and the city of Brooklyn, are the words in colossal size: "Let Us Have Peace." Beneath the statue of Washington are the words, "To Those Who Founded;" beneath Jackson, "To Those Who Defended;" beneath Scott, "To Those Who Extended," and beneath Grant, "To Those Who Preserved." A circular platform 120 feet in diameter is at the foot of the shaft. This is reached from the ground by four flights of steps, one for each quarter. Between the steps are pedestals, four in all, with life-size bronze figures representing infantry, artillery, cavalry, and marine men. There are outposts or pickets for the main monument. The monument will be of granit and bronze and will be placed on the plaza at Prospect Park, and so located that the steps to the platform will face Ninth, Flatbush, and Lafayette avenues, and the entrance to the park. Jackson faces the park, and Washington and Scott are on either side of Grant. The whole structure will be eighty feet high, and will cost from a quarter to a half million of dollars.

GEORGE LORILLARD'S WILL.

The will of George L. Lorillard, the famous turfman, who died at Nice, France, several days ago, was filed for probate today in the Surrogate's Court. By its provisions James Kennedy of Islip, L. I., a former employé of the deceased, is left $5,000. All the residue of his estate is given to his widow. In case of her death before the testator, the residue was to have gone to her two daughters, Marie Louise Wright and Caroline Frances Wright, in the proportion of two-thirds to the former and one-third to the latter. The will is dated New York, Nov. 24, 1885.

Mr. Lorillard's estate was valued at about $2,000,000.

AN UNUSAL CHURCH SERVICE.

There was the unusual spectacle for a Protestant Episcopal Church of the high celebration of a requiem mass in the little Church of St. Mary the Virgin, on West Twenty-fourth street, early this morning—the rector, the Rev. T. McKee Brown, officiating. The occasion was the memorial service of the former assistant rector, the Rev. McWalter Bernard Noyes, who died at Rome, Italy, Dec. 6, 1885. The requiem was in many respects the same as that used in the Roman Catholic Church. Incense was offered and the bells were rung as in the Roman manner, and at the communion Father Brown alone received the bread and the wine, and afterward took the absolutions or water with which the chalice had been cleansed by the sub-deacon. The office ended Father Brown, in cassock, surplice, and stole, entered the pulpit and delivered the oration. He earnestly prayed that God would give to the soul of the deceased eternal rest. The sermon concluded, Father Brown was vested in a cope of black velvet, richly ornamented with silver fringe, and, attended by the sub-deacon, who bore the processional cross, and the deacon carrying the book, went to the catafalque in the middle of the choir and on each side of which were three tall wax tapers lighted. Father Brown sang: "The Lord Have Mercy Upon Us," which was repeated by the choir, after which he intoned the words, "Our Father," and then incensed the catafalque in the same manner as in the Roman Catholic Church, with the exception that the blessed water was not used. The prayers were then sung by Father Brown and bore a striking resemblance to the prayers found in any Catholic prayer-book. At various parts of the service many of the congregation crossed themselves.

INVESTIGATING ALLEGED CORRUPTION.

The Railroad Committee of the State Senate, consisting of Chairman Henry R. Low, Edward F. Reilly, Charles L. Knapp, Edward C. Walker, Jacob W. Hoysodt, Henry C. Nelson, and James F. Pierce, began its sessions today to investigate the charges of corruption in connection with the granting of the Broadway Surface Railroad franchise by the Common Council. Roscoe Conkling and Clarence A. Seward are the counsel to the committee. R. E. Newcombe represents the Board of Aldermen, and Col. Bliss the Broadway Railroad. Clerk F. J. Twomley of the Common Council was the first witness. While he was being examined Jacob Sharp, the Surface Railroad king, entered. Clerk Twomley was examined with special reference to the meeting held by the Board of Aldermen, Aug. 30, 1884. He knew nothing of the meeting until he received the call fifteen minutes before it. Alderman Waite acted as Chairman in the absence of Kirk and read the injunction papers. William H. Hays, President of the Eighth and Ninth Avenue Railroads, told the Senators about the circumstances under which he signed 1,500 first-mortgage bonds of the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Railroad. It was in July, 1884, that he sat in his office and signed the bonds at the request of his counsel, John W. Scribner. He had signed 1,500 of them when he left the room for a moment, and on his return the bonds were gone. He could not find them and didn't know what became of them. Witness was a director of the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Railroad. He gave away his signature to these bonds as he would give it to Mr. Seward, his questioner, if he should ask for it. Mr. Hays was examined at some length in regard to twenty shares of stock in the Broadway Surface Railroad Company which he held. He said that Thursday he had taken his stock to Mr. Scribner's office to be divided into two parts. He left fifteen shares with Mr. Scribner and carried five home with him. Mr. Scribner sent for him. Mr. Foshay, President of the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Company, was present. Witness expected to sell the fifteen shares that Scribner held. He could not tell anything to the committee about the affairs of the road of which he was a director, and gave as an excuse for this that he had neglected his duty as a director. Jacob Sharp was called as a witness, but before his examination was begun the investigation was adjourned to Monday.

President Hays of the Eighth and Ninth Avenue Railroads signed the bonds as a director of the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Railroad.

A MURDEROUS MANIAC.

Charles Hyser of Jersey City became insane this morning and made a murderous attack on his mother. His sister went to the assistance of her mother and was also horribly beaten. Hyser then rushed into the street, where he met Andrew Lemmon, whom he knocked down and kicked and accused of being the villain who had alienated the affections of his wife. Hyser then went into a drug-store and upset a stove and smashed things generally. The police were then summoned and the maniac, after a hard struggle, was overpowered and taken to the station-house. Mrs. Hyser is thought to be fatally injured.

THE WINANS-O'KEEFE DIVORCE CASE.

Additional evidence for the plaintiff in the suit of Mrs. Alice O'Keefe against Ross R. Winans, the millionaire, for absolute divorce was taken today. A registry-book of the Hoffman House was produced of June 9, 1883. It had the entry "Ross R. Winans and wife," also a copy of the New York Times of May 30, 1871, which had the list of arrivals from Liverpool on the steamer Scotia. Among them were those of "Ross R. Winans and lady." It is conceded that the lady was Mrs. O'Keefe. Mrs. Sarah A. Thorn testified that June 21, 1871, Ross R. Winans came to her house in this city and asked to look at some rooms she had to let. He said he would go to a hotel and bring his wife around. He then returned with the plaintiff and introduced her as his wife. He requested the witness to speak of her as Mrs. Williams, because if his father heard that he was married he might disinherit him. The hearing was then adjourned.

GOTHAM GLEANINGS.

The fund started by Eugene Kelly and other rich Irish-Americans about ten weeks ago is still growing in a prosperous way. The Tammany contingent which promised organized assistance a few weeks ago, has decided to close its fund a fortnight from now, thinking that by that time $15,000 will be raised.

A metallic burial-case company of Winfield Junction, L. I., has completed a casket intended for the final disposition of the remains of the late King Alfonso of Spain. The casket is made of bronze plates one-fourth of an inch thick, relieved by twelve panels, the corners of which are decorated with tiles, each one a leaf in the genealogical tree of the royal family. On the four corners, indicative of strength, are lions rampant, cast in heavy bronze. The cover is topped with four massive crowns. The lifts and other decorations are emblematical of the history of the Spanish monarchy.

For the fourth time the examination of Miss Caroline Metcalf of Chicago, charged with defrauding Mrs. Eads of East Orange out of $2,100, was today postponed until the 18th inst. by Justice Munn of Jersey City, in whose house she is still a prisoner. This afternoon Charles H. Reed of Chicago appeared at the Justice's house in response to a message from Miss Metcalf and volunteered to act as her counsel. Miss Metcalf declines to say anything about her case.

Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, was asked this morning if it were true that he had in his possession a letter written by Mr. Elisha Gray conceding the superiority of the Bell telephone. "No," replied Dr. Green. "I believe there was some letter to that effect written, which, I think, was produced in court in a suit tried in Boston some time in 1879, but I never saw it."

The steamer William Burbitt, which arrived here yesterday from Rio Janeiro, reports: Feb. 1, latitude 32°, 30', longitude 75°, 50', picked up a ship's boat containing the crew of the American brig Annie L. White from Rio Janeiro for New York, which had foundered the preceding day. The rescued men consisted of Capt. White, Mr. Walsh, a passenger, two officers, and seven seamen—eleven in all.

Deputy Controller of the Treasury, R. R. McMahon, began today the taking of testimony at the General Appraiser's office in the matter of the charges preferred by S. D. Phelps against General Appraiser Brower. The inquiry was conducted privately.

The jury that had been occupied for several days in hearing the case of Nellie Gahan, who sued the Roebling estate for $50,000, brought in a verdict today which rated her services to Mrs. Roebling as a servant at $5,000.

TO THE NORTH AND SOUTH.

THE DOMINION'S WHITE ELEPHANT OF THE NORTHWEST—DOUTRE'S FUNERAL—POLITICS IN MEXICO.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—From all that can be learned there is every probability that Sir John Macdonald will refuse to grant a royal commission to investigate the recent troubles and their origin in the Northwest. The evidence against the Government as to its responsibility for the recent rebellion is daily strengthening, and, fearing the result of an investigation on the eve of a general election, the Government will, it is said, exercise its power in preventing it if possible.

In view of the destitute condition of the Gaspe fishermen the Dominion Government has decided to advance as a loan $2,000, which the Provincial Government of Quebec has agreed to supplement with a similar amount to be distributed among 600 families, 200 of whom are on the verge of starvation owing to the failure of the fisheries. This amount, however, will have to be further supplemented, as it is entirely inadequate to meet the wants of those who are asking for help.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 6.—Joseph Doutre, Q. C., counsel in the great Guibord case, was laid to rest today. Following his bier were the leading liberals of all the learned professions, freethinkers, and his own immediate relatives and friends. There was no religious ceremony, and neither priest nor pastor was seen in the cortége. He had fought the grim enemy with as great persistency as he fought the church in its refusal to bury his client in consecrated ground, and when at last he saw his dissolution approaching neither by persuasion nor by entreaties could he be prevailed upon to seek the consolation of a spiritual adviser. "I have lived a freethinker and a freethinker I will die," he said, and he did so.

WINNIPEG, N. W. T., Feb. 6.—Baptiste and Pierre Vandale, two of the prisoners sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary for being participants in the Riel insurrection, are now in the city, having been released yesterday from confinement by order of the Governor-General. This is believed to be the precursor to a general amnesty to all prisoners now at Stony Mountain. The released convicts leave for Batouche tomorrow to join their families. There are twenty-five more half-breeds in the penitentiary. It is doubtful if Poundmaker and Big-Bear, with other Indians, will be released just now, pending the result of the present Indian scare out West.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 6.—The political demonstration planned for yesterday by the minority members of Congress was postponed on account of the cold weather. The minority urge more popular interest in the coming Congressional elections in the interest of tariff and taxation reforms.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS.

TWO CONVICTS PARDONED BY THE GOVERNOR—JUDGE EDWARDS' FUNERAL—SPRINGFIELD NOTES.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Governor this afternoon pardoned Henry Beede. Beede was convicted of larceny at the May term of the Circuit Court of Alexander County in 1884, and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. His term would have expired in three weeks, but he was pardoned because he is dying of consumption. Pardon was granted today by the Governor to Carl Allison, sent from the County Court of Vermilion County in the June term, 1883, for three years to the Reform School at Pontiac for the larceny of two quarts of ice-cream.

The funeral of Judge B. S. Edwards, which took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the First Presbyterian Church, was largely attended by the citizens of Springfield and by the Springfield bar in a body. Dr. J. A. Reed, pastor of the church, preached the service. The remains were interred at Oak Ridge Cemetery. At a meeting of the Springfield bar this forenoon a committee was appointed to draft a set of resolutions to be acted on at a meeting to be had next Tuesday night.

George Frick of Monroe County was today appointed by the Governor Public Administrator for that county, to be his own successor.

The United Citizens' Building & Loan Association of Cook County, at Chicago; capital stock, $5,000,000; incorporators, Joseph Klicka, Amariah G. Fox, H. J. Deifuhl, John Danielson, Christian Kemming, and Nels H. Anderson.

The United States Literary & Scientific Association, at Chicago; capital stock, $100,000; to furnish books to its patrons at wholesale prices, etc.; incorporators, C. A. Gaskell, Fred W. Cook, and Joseph Gaskell.

A. E. Davis & Co., at Chicago; capital stock, $20,000; to carry on a general publishing and manufacturing business; incorporators, Frank D. Willis, Willis R. Whipple, and C. S. Cutting.

The Dundas Milling Company, at Dundas, Richland County; capital stock, $11,000; to manufacture flour, meal, and lumber; incorporators, I. McWilliams, John Flemming, M. J. Wheeler, and others.

The Chicago Photogravure Company, at Chicago; capital stock, $10,000; to do a general fine-art publishing business; incorporators, Charles M. Hobart, Ludwig Winkler, and Charles G. Beers.

The Maple Grove Creamery Company of Boone County; capital stock, $2,500; incorporators, W. H. Wait, John Brooks, George Meyers, H. C. Witt, and R. J. Kimmey.

THE ICE CARNIVAL.

ANOTHER GAY TIME AT ST. PAUL YESTERDAY—GRAND PREPARATIONS IN PROGRESS.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 6.—The exercises of the carnival today consisted of various games between snowshoe clubs, including base-ball on snowshoes. The Sioux Indians in full paint and feathers gave a war-dance after the parade with Esquimaux dogs and Arctic sledges. Relics of the Greely exploring expedition will be on exhibition next week. Great preparations are being made for Friday night, when the Grand Army will finally storm and take the castle. The exercises of today are concluding tonight by a concert from Winnipeg clubs.

BOUND TO BE BAD.

GALVESTON, Tex., Feb. 6.—In June, 1883, two notorious hoodlums of this city, Robert Owens and George Dodds, in a spirit of deviltry attacked a hearse bearing a pauper's corpse and dumped the body into the street. They were sentenced to two years in the county jail, but on the petition of a number of citizens Gov. Ireland granted a pardon conditional upon their good behavior. Recently the same men were convicted of petty thieving. This fact coming to the Governor's knowledge he yesterday issued a proclamation revoking the pardon and directing the Sheriff to carry out the judgment of the court. This is the first revocation of a pardon in the history of the State.

WORK AND MEALS.

San Francisco Chronicle: A man living in Los Angeles County, who was bothered by tramps, decided to have the beggars dig a cellar for him, and accordingly to every applicant for victuals he proposed to charge an hour's work for a square meal. At the end of a week he found that he had had ninety-seven applications and had secured three hours' work.

Ten People Fatally Frozen in Georgia—A Blizzard from Canada to Mexico.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The schooner Maud M. Story, engaged in Grand Bank halibut fishing, sailed from this port Dec. 12 and was spoken before the great gale of Christmas. Since that time nothing has been heard from her, and her owners have given up all hopes of ever seeing her again. She carried a crew of fourteen men. She was built at Bath, Me., in 1882, and was of seventy-five tons burden, owned by T. Langsford & Son, and insured in the Gloucester Mutual Fishing Insurance Company for $5,328 on the vessel and $1,000 on the outfits.

A total of fifty men engaged in the fisheries have been lost from this port since Christmas. The British schooner Neskleetra of Lockport, N. S., Capt. Cornelius Thornborn of Shelburne, N. S., sailed from this port Nov. 9 on a halibut voyage to Grand Banks, and refitted at Halifax. She was spoken just before the great gale of December, and since then nothing has been heard from her, and fears are entertained for her safety. She carried a crew of fourteen men, shipped at this port. She was built in 1885, and is owned by the Messrs. Locks of Lockport, N. S. She is of 100 tons measurement, and is insured in provincial offices.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., Feb. 6.—The brig George W. Whitford, Capt. Brown, from St. Andrews, W. I., Jan. 6, with cocoanuts, for New York, picked up in the gulf stream fifteen men of the Norwegian bark Catharina, Capt. Jacob. The Whitford entered Long Island Sound the night of Feb. 3, during a heavy snow-storm, and had her jibboom and forward rigging carried away. She anchored off Eaton's Neck and drifted about seventeen miles, and is now frozen in the ice on the sound off Smithtown harbor.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 6.—The Dominion Government steamer Lansdowne left here for Sable Island seven days ago to see if any shipwrecked crews were there. The trip is usually made in forty-eight hours, but the Lansdowne has not since been heard of, and considerable anxiety is felt for her safety, as it is known she was ill prepared to meet the storms that have swept the coast during the last few days.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The schooner Empress of India, from Liverpool for San Francisco, foundered at sea Jan. 27. Her pumps were choked. The crew are at Madeira.

THE CAPITAL THREATENED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—A delegation of citizens of the District called on the House Appropriations Committee today with a petition signed by 116 of the leading merchants of Washington and Georgetown asking that some action be taken to protect the city from a flood consequent upon the heavy freeze and snow-fall. The petition sets forth the fact that the river is blocked with ice to an extent never before known, and that it threatens, when the snow and ice melt, to inundate the city, causing immense loss to property. It also states that the merchants have already spent $600 on the work of opening up the river, but that the amount has not been nearly sufficient to protect the city, and asks that the District Commissioners be authorized to expend a sufficient sum from the emergency fund to clear the river. Accompanying the petition is a resolution authorizing the expenditure. The men bearing the petition declared that the river was in a worse condition than they had ever seen it, and that something must be done at once or the loss of property would be immense. Near Fort Washington and just below Alexandria there is an ice-block, and the river all the way up is choked with ice and snow. The last snowfall, coming on top of the gorge, has made the situation critical and rendered entirely ineffectual the work thus far done by the citizens. At the aqueduct there are places where the weight of ice and snow has piled up until the gorge extends to the bottom of the river. The damage that would be done to Government property by the flood would far exceed the cost of preventing it. The machinery and all the work on the flats would be greatly damaged and there would be scarcely a merchant in the commercial portion of the city who would not individually lose more than it would cost to clear the river of ice now.

THE FLOOD IN CANADA.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Further disasters from the flood occurred this morning. Before daylight the water began to rise, its hight increasing as much as fifteen inches in some localities, flowing into many houses and causing their evacuation. The water advanced to the north side of the market square on Front street and flooded the Ontario office to such an extent that it had to be abandoned. The water, which reached its highest point about 11 o'clock, was but three inches below the floor of the Intelligencer office. On Pinnacle street the water reached half way up the block between Dundas street and the Market square and entered several more houses, some of which have been vacated by their inmates. On Bridge and Everett streets several more houses were flooded, and communication by the lower bridge was cut off. The foot-bridge was raised six inches at its west end by the ice. Pringle's sash factory was flooded by water and work had to be stopped. The ice is now within two feet of the lower bridge, and fears are entertained for its safety.

CASUALTIES IN GEORGIA.

GENEVA, Ga., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—It is estimated that the recent cold weather in this State, which is again being experienced, has caused at least ten deaths from freezing, which is unparalleled in the annals of the State. At this place today Gustav McCrary died. Jan. 8 his feet were frozen. The doctors had been in constant attendance, but mortification set in and amputation was impracticable on account of physical weakness.

FROM OTHER POINTS.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Feb. 6.—A man, apparently a tramp, who gave his name as John Boyen, and having no home, was found yesterday in a barn on the premises of John Holman, near this village, with his hands and feet badly frozen. He was committed to the almshouse. Several bank-books were found in his clothing, which showed that he had on deposit in various banks nearly $10,000. Some cash was also found on his person, but he refused to allow any of it to be spent for food or drink for him.

PENELOPE'S VENGEANCE.

Court had adjourned at the Desplaines Street Station yesterday, and only the Judge and three reporters remained. The youngest of the trio of scribblers broke the silence by remarking, "I didn't get an item, did you?" The Judge saw an opening for a moral lecture, and said: "I don't know how it is that you complain because there was no case of importance; for my part I get so tired of hearing these interminable disorderly cases that I am glad when the day comes that there are none."

"Yes, but how about us? We have nothing to write——" began the youthful enthusiast, when his remarks were cut short by the banging of the swing-doors and the entrance of a curious-looking object that appeared to be a woman by the dress and should have been a man by the heavy walk with which it marched into the room. "Here's a case," cried the juvenile journalist, as he began to sharpen his pencil. The object came to a halt in front of the railing that marks the place where justice tempers the fine to the enormity of the offense, and faced the Judge. It was noticed then that the cause of the doubt regarding sex was a fur-lined circular which enveloped the object. It was closely tied about the throat and fell in sack-like form over the person of the visitor. A small gray mustache showed that it was a man who had thus wrapped himself up in the habiliments of a woman, and the Judge was so surprised at the odd sight that he mixed himself up on the sex and said: "If you want to see me, madame, just step forward, sir."

"Be you the Jedge as gives out warrants?" asked the person in the circular.

"I do, just, and I want one quick, before she gets away. I'm obliged to wear this cloak, Jedge, for I ain't got nothing on but me flannels. See," and the man threw open the circular and showed a suit of red flannel, his appearance as he spread his arms reminding one forcibly of Mephistopheles in "Faust," or the Demon King in "Fantasma." "My name is Andrew Tyndal," he continued, "and I live at No. 16 Austin avenue. I'm English, you know. My wife is Welsh. She is six feet one, Jedge, and look at me. I am five feet two, and only weigh 130 pounds when well. I married her because I—well, I had to, that's all, and now, since she got me over here, I can't call me life me own. Why, a year ago——."

"Never mind going over the history of your married life," interrupted the court. "What did she do to you?"

"I'm coming to that, Jedge. Yesterday her mother arrived from Wales. She's just as big as my wife, only older, and I found that Penelope, that's my wife, had given up our best room to her, and we had to squeeze into a little room over the entry. I came home late, or, I should say, early this morning, Jedge, and by mistake I got into the room where I was accustomed to go, and did not discover my error before I was in me underclothes. I woke her up trying to leave the room, and, Jedge, would you believe it, but those two women refused to accept me apologies? Penelope grasped me in her arms and threw me down-stairs, and I slept on a sofa in the parlor, but, Jedge, she won't give me my clothes. She says I'm a wretch, and I must stay at home for a week for daring to enter the room of her mother. I stole her cloak, Jedge, and want a warrant for her to make her let me have me clothes. I can't go about looking like a acrobat, and I won't go to bed for a week for anybody, wife or no wife."

"I don't think I'll give you a warrant now, Mr. Tyndal," said the Justice, as he coughed in order to hide a laugh, "but if you don't get your clothes by Monday come and see me again. It's a dangerous thing, this matter of husband and wife coming into court against each other. You think it over, and I guess you can get your wife to return the clothes."

"I can't get a warrant, eh? All right. If there is trouble you can't blame me." And the small Englishman with two Welshwomen on his hands went out with a bounce.

RANKIN'S SEAT.

JOSEPH VILAS AND T. R. HUDD IN A RACE TO SUCCEED THE LATE WISCONSIN CONGRESSMAN.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A late special from Green Bay this evening announces that the delegation of Brown County to the Fifth Congressional District Convention, to be held at Chilton Tuesday next to nominate a successor to the late Congressman Rankin, is solid for T. R. Hudd of Green Bay. Well-posted Democrats of this city believe that this will be the extent of Hudd's support in the convention. The prevailing opinion is that Joseph Vilas of Manitowoc County will be the nominee. Should Hudd develop a greater strength than is anticipated, however, and a deadlock ensue, S. H. Seamans of Sheboygan may be brought forward as a compromise candidate.

Private dispatches received by a prominent Democrat of this city tonight from different parts of the Fifth Congressional District show the several candidates for the vacancy to have the following support: Hudd of Green Bay, 6; Vilas of Manitowoc, 8; Elwell of Sheboygan, 4; Kersten of Chilton, 3; Horn of Cedarburg, 3; Timlin of Kewaunee, 3; unknown, 2.

PLYMOUTH, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Democratic convention held in this city today elected M. C. Mead and John Dennis as delegates to the Congressional convention to nominate a successor to the late Congressman Rankin. The delegates are favorable to Thomas R. Hudd of Green Bay. The delegates from the Sheboygan district are Carl Ziller and Simon Gillen, who are also favorable to Hudd. The county will give Hudd a solid delegation.

KEWAUNEE, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—At the Democratic County Convention held here this afternoon to elect delegates to the Congressional Convention to be held at Chilton the delegates were instructed for W. H. Timlin.

MANITOWOC, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Eight delegates from this county to the Democratic Congressional Convention were elected today. They are all in favor of the nomination of Joseph Vilas of this county.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Early this morning a company of United States soldiers came in from the East en route for Fort Concho, Tex. They are fifty in number and are from the barracks at Columbus, O., where they had been recruited. Several of the soldiers stated that recruiting officers had been instructed to enlist all the available men at once, and that it was currently reported in Ohio that trouble with Mexico on the border of the Rio Grande was a possibility at no distant day. Lieut. Leete was in charge of the company, which left this evening via the Texas & Pacific Railway for their destination.

OHIO AND HER WARS.

But the Latter Refuses, and at Last Accounts Was Holding the Fort.

The Supreme Court Will Have to Settle the Matter—The Senatorial Mess.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Affairs in police circles appear quiet on the surface, but there is a strong undercurrent of feeling that causes considerable uneasiness. Mayor Smith today addressed the following communication to Superintendent Edwin Hudson:

You failed to report to this office in accordance with my instructions of yesterday, which read as follows: "I hereby direct you, as Superintendent of Police, to report to me at my office by 2 o'clock today for instructions." I deem such failure to report as an act of insubordination and disobedience, and a willful determination on your part to refuse to recognize my power and authority. I hereby suspend you from further acting as Superintendent of Police until further orders from me.

Col. Hudson, on receipt of the document, handed it to Commissioners Hawkins and Reis, and after reading it, Reis started for their lawyer's opinion. In the meantime, in the Mayor's office, Arthur G. Moore was handed a formidable-looking document bearing the great seal of the city and reading thus:

By virtue of power vested in me as the Mayor of the City of Cincinnati, I hereby appoint Arthur G. Moore as Superintendent of Police of said city. In witness hereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the city this 6th day of February, 1886. AMOR SMITH JR., Mayor.

Col. Hudson sat quietly in his office attending to routine duties, and to a question by a reporter answered that he did not intend to surrender his authority until the matter had been settled by the Supreme Court.

About 3 p. m. Mayor Smith, after consulting with Mr. Moore and Solicitor Coppock, grew tired of Col. Hudson's delay in replying to his communication and entered the office of the Chief of Police, where he found Col. Hawkins, Col. Hudson, and others.

"Do you recognize my authority?" asked the Mayor.

"No, sir," replied Col. Hudson.

"I expected that answer," remarked the Mayor.

Col. Hawkins then informed him that as soon as they heard from their attorneys an answer would be returned in writing, whereupon the Mayor withdrew. A few minutes later Mr. Reis arrived with a letter of advice from Hoadly, Johnston & Colston. The Commissioners held a short executive meeting and drew up the following communication, which was handed to the Mayor:

THE HON. AMOR SMITH, MAYOR OF CINCINNATI—Dear Sir: We are exceedingly anxious to avoid any unseemly course, or to do anything which in anywise will create a disturbance of the peace. We are advised by our counsel that we are still Police Commissioners of Cincinnati and are legally entitled to exercise all functions conferred by law upon such officers. We are officially informed that you have attempted to appoint a Superintendent of Police and to suspend the Superintendent appointed by the board. We shall maintain in the fullest sense of the term our rights, and shall maintain the authority vested in us by law until a competent court has decided that we have been lawfully removed. Our counsel inform us that the Attorney-General of the State of Ohio can apply and will do so forthwith to the Supreme Court of Ohio for a writ of quo warranto, and that our answer can be filed at once by us, the matter argued and submitted to the court of last resort, and finally disposed of within ten days. Whatever may be the decision of the tribunal we shall cheerfully submit to its mandate; and we suggest that you make application to the Attorney-General to institute such proceedings. The Attorney-General is and a majority of the Supreme Court will be after the 9th inst. members of the political party with which you affiliate, and certainly you cannot object to that tribunal finally deciding as between us in the premises. The course which we suggest will avoid all disturbance and give a peaceful and lawful solution of the controversy now pending between us. M. L. HAWKINS, JULIUS REIS.

Mayor Smith has concluded to appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Moore was Superintendent of the Water-Works Department from 1880 to 1884, when he was removed by the Democratic Board of Public Works. Mayor Smith says his appointment is not the result of political pressure, but because he is fitted by nature and experience for the position.

The Mayor replied to the note from the Commissioners by stating that he shares their desire to have the differences speedily adjusted, and that after consultation with the City Solicitor he has decided to request the State Attorney-General Monday to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of quo warranto as a means of deciding the legality of the present Police Commission. It is expected that action will be had. In the meantime the Commissioners hold the fort, and Mr. Moore is making no effort to exercise authority over the police force.

THE SENATORIAL FRAUDS.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Senatorial ghost still stalks. It was supposed last night that the membership of the Republican sub-committee to investigate the Senatorial frauds at Cincinnati was settled by the selection of Senator Rannells as the third member to act with Senators Pringle and Coulter. It now turns out that the telegram sent by Senator Ford to Lieut.-Gov. Kennedy resigning his place on the Committee on Privileges and Elections never reached him, while a similar telegram from Senator Gregg announcing a like action on his part was promptly delivered, thus leaving Senator Gregg out of the field that he had so warmly contested with Ford. Tonight Gregg received the following telegram from the Lieutenant-Governor:

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Feb. 6, 1886.—Senator John W. Gregg: I do not understand that I have anything to do with your resignation. If Ford notifies me of his declination I will appoint Rannells in his stead. Otherwise I will not act further. The committee must settle it. ROBERT P. KENNEDY.

The above was in answer to the telegram from Mr. Gregg tendering his resignation, and from which it will be seen that Mr. Ford's declination had not reached the Lieutenant-Governor up to the hour of writing the reply. Messrs. Pringle, Coulter, and Ford are now in Cincinnati. The two former are members of the Non-Partisan Committee, while the latter, according to his own written declaration, is out of the contest. There is a suspicion that, inasmuch as he is in Cincinnati, Messrs. Pringle and Coulter will select him as the third member.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Senators William A. Lawrence, A. R. Van Cleaf, and E. S. Dodd, Democratic members of the Senate sub-committee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections appointed to investigate the alleged frauds in this city bearing on the election of the four Hamilton County Senators, arrived last night. Senators T. J. Pringle and T. B. Coulter, Republican members of the committee, are also here, but owing to a misunderstanding between Senators Ford and Gregg as to the right to the third place, both have offered their resignations, and Lieut.-Gov. Kennedy is expected to fill the vacancy by appointing Senator Rannells. The committee met at 2 o'clock, and after effecting a temporary organization adjourned until Monday at 9 o'clock, when the difficulty on the Republican side is expected to be settled. The investigation is expected to be very thorough, and some startling developments are promised.

OBITUARY.

MARTIN O'MALLEY DANGEROUSLY ILL.

A JEWISH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—In every pew of every Jewish synagog in New York at today's Sabbath services the occupants found a fervent appeal for money with which to found a Jewish Theological Seminary. This is an outcome of the recent convention of strictly orthodox Hebrews, and is part of the movement to dam the current that has been sweeping young Jews into unbelief. The plan is to train rabbis who will keep conscientiously to the old faith and oppose the tendency to let go of traditional usages and doctrines. Only 20 per cent of New York's Jews attend Jewish worship at all, and the rest do not become Christians, but infidels. The orthodox Jews expect to raise the desired fund without difficulty.

LOCAL POLITICS.

EMPLOYES OF THE ELECTION COMMISSION HAVING TROUBLE IN GETTING THEIR MONEY.

The employés of the Election Commission received vouchers for their pay Friday. But there the matter ended. City Treasurer Devine refused to pay anything but orders signed by the Controller. Even brokers refused to buy the warrants signed by the County Judge. The chief clerk and Commissioner Hoffman went to the City Treasurer, the Controller, and the Corporation Counsel, but got no satisfaction. So yesterday morning they sought Judge Prendergast in chambers and obtained an order authorizing the warrants to be signed by the Controller and to be issued as regular city orders, but expressly providing that nothing in the action of the court should be interpreted as an admission that the Election law required such signature, or that the Treasurer might not be required to pay such warrants drawn by the court alone. The question is a nice one. The law provides that "all expenses incurred by said Board of Election Commissioners shall be paid by such city . . . and such expenditures shall be paid by the City Treasurer upon the warrant of such County Judge out of any money in the City Treasury not otherwise appropriated. It shall also be the duty of the governing authority of such city to make provision for the prompt payment of such expenses." The County Judge is made the auditor of the bills, and upon his warrant the City Treasurer has to pay them. At the same time the governing authority shall make provision for the prompt payment of the bills. This has not been done. The City Council has not made any appropriation for the purpose. It is the opinion of the County Judge, as well as the Corporation Counsel, however, that the City Treasurer is legally bound to honor the warrants of the County Judge even where no appropriation has been made by the Council. At the time when the quo warranto case was made up to test the constitutionality of the new Election law an injunction was obtained against the City Treasurer to prevent him from paying any expenses the Election Commissioners might incur. The validity of the section providing for the payment of the expenses out of the City Treasury was attacked, but when the law was declared constitutional by the Supreme Court this section was included. The City Treasurer is, therefore, bound to pay all warrants drawn by the County Judge under this law. Controller Gurney said yesterday he would not pay anything without an order from the Council until the annual appropriation bill was passed containing $50,000 for the Election Commission. In view of the distress of some of the clerks who have worked for the commission a resolution was adopted by the Commissioners yesterday that unless something was done Monday to pay the employés they would each put up $500 to relieve them. This action was made unnecessary by an agreement subsequently made by Corporation-Counsel Winston and Frank Barrett, the Controller's chief clerk, that the latter should send in an order to the Council Monday night for the payment of 75 per cent of the money due the clerks until the appropriation bill is passed, placing the employés of the Election Board on an equal footing with city employés.

Work has been commenced on the offices of the Election Board in the City-Hall. The present arrangements will be only temporary. A rough partition wall is being drawn across the room and desks of rough boards erected for the clerks. Permanent improvements will be made as soon as the appropriation has passed the Council.

POLLING-PLACES, JUDGES, AND CLERKS.

Complaints about polling-places are becoming more numerous. It appears that some of the canvassers sent out to locate them have been either very careless or something worse. The Republican City Committeeman from the Sixth Ward complained yesterday that in his ward the polling-places had been located in the interest of Cullerton, and that in direct violation of the spirit of the law the vicinity of saloons had been sought rather than avoided. Of another canvasser it is known that he went around the ward he was working in with one of the Aldermen, and in the Alderman's buggy, and the result shows the Alderman's influence. Greater care should be taken in the appointment of clerks to see that only independent men are selected. The work of districting was done under the supervision of the deputies and Commissioners, and the result was good work. In locating the polling-places the clerks were left more to their own discretion, and the Commissioners are far from being satisfied with the result. They are having a world of trouble over the polling-places.

The work of appointing judges and clerks of election is progressing slowly. Not a single ward has been completed yet, but the first five will probably be Monday. After the judges and clerks have been selected and have agreed to serve, then a report of the selections must be made to the County Court, and the court will enter an order that cause be shown, if any exist, against the confirmation of the list. The Commissioners must give notice of such order, and the names of all judges and clerks so reported must be published in one or more newspapers. If objections are made the court will hear them on a day appointed for that purpose, and will confirm and reject as the case may require. All this must be done at least thirty-five days prior to the election—that is, before the end of this month.

The fact that everything has to be done in a hurry, owing to the dispute about the validity of the Election law, is having the effect, among other things, of preventing the commission from keeping accurate and complete records of their proceedings for future commissions. This is all the more important because, this being the first commission, it will establish precedents for future commissions, and, the proceedings of the commission being secret, very exhaustive records cannot be kept by the daily papers except of such things as the Commissioners choose to give out.

ALL SMOOTHED OVER.

It will be remembered that a few weeks ago there were surface indications of a falling-out between George R. Davis and Jack Stephens, Clerk of the Criminal Court. The opinion then was that Davis wished to be County Treasurer this coming fall and that a ticket had been made up on which he was to occupy that position, while Canute Matson, who has long had aspirations, was to be on the same ticket as Sheriff. Stephens, however, was reported to have aspirations to succeed Hanchett and was working hard to that end. This it was, according to the report, which led to the disagreement between Col. Davis and Stephens. Any such difficulty, however, if it existed, is now reported to be healed. According to present statements, Stephens has given up his desire to be Sheriff, and will be satisfied with a reëlection to the place he now holds, thus leaving the field clear for Davis for Treasurer and Matson for Sheriff. This arrangement, however, if it exists, is said to be quite unsatisfactory to Tom Sennott, the Clerk of the Probate Court. His term expires this year, and he wants to be reëlected. He has fears, however, that if Stephens, who is from the Eighth Ward, continues Clerk of the Criminal Court it will be apt to interfere with his (Sennott's) chances, being also from the same ward. He fears that a Republican convention would not select two candidates for important positions from the same ward, and that not a Republican one, and it would not be unreasonable, therefore, for him to look with disfavor on any arrangement which made Stephens' chances for a nomination good, and thereby made his own very poor.

The Young Democracy, who generally take pride in being reported as affiliating with the Young Republicans wherever such clubs exist, are keeping remarkably quiet in relation to the Election law. They have not discussed it in their clubs, and submitted no lists of judges and clerks to the commission. Even the machine Democrats have shown more interest in the matter. The Young Democrats are still adopting their new constitution. Twelve wards have adopted it. Fifteen were required for its adoption by the entire organization.

NINTH WARD REPUBLICANS.

The Ninth Ward Republican Club met last night at the corner of Twelfth and Waller streets. Kirk Eastman was elected President and William Phelps Secretary, to fill vacancies. At the spring election the Republicans are entitled to two judges in the precincts having odd numbers and one in the even, and one clerk in each precinct. A list of members to fill these positions was prepared last night, and will be submitted by the Central Committeeman for confirmation. Miles Kehoe read an interesting abstract of the new Election law, explaining the duties of judges, clerks, and voters, which was highly appreciated by his auditors, and at its conclusion the abstract was adopted by the club and placed on file.

THE LOUISIANA TELEPHONE SUITS.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 6.—In the United States Circuit Court today the case of the Bell Telephone Company against the National Company was postponed until the 23d inst., after the conclusion of Mr. Storer's argument for the Bell Company, to enable Judge Pardee to make his circuit.

BUCKLING ON ITS ARMOR.

Judge Thurman Engaged—Thorough Preparation of the Case—Justice to Be Done to All.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Prof. Elisha Gray is again in Washington looking after the interests of his new telephone company. He says it will be in working order in about a week, and will have attorneys present at the suit to be instituted against the Bell Company by the Government. Prof. Gray expressed himself as well pleased with the progress being made towards fighting the Bell Company, and thought the choice of attorneys by Solicitor Goode was a good one.

It is understood this afternoon that ex-Senator Allen G. Thurman has been added to the list of counsel for the Government. The other special counsel engaged to assist in prosecuting the suit are Grosvenor Lowery of New York, who is a specialist in electrical matters; Messrs. Eppa Hunton and Jeff Chandler of Washington, D. C.; and Mr. C. S. Whitman, a patent attorney of Washington. The preparation of the case is very thorough, and the attorneys are still hard at work. Judge Goode says the case will be promptly and vigorously prosecuted, and with fairness to all parties concerned. The bill of complaint is now in the hands of Solicitor-General Goode.

The Bell people are beginning to find that the Pan-Electric bombshell has dropped many pieces in their own camp. The interview with Gen. B. F. Butler, in which he deals the monopoly some staggering blows, is exciting much comment. Less has been heard today of the talk about Attorney-General Garland's resignation than for a week past.

HOW J. W. ROGERS COAXED MR. GARLAND.

PARTHENON HIGHTS LABORATORY, BLADENSBURG, Md., Sept. 29, 1885.—To the Editor of New York Tribune—SIR: My attention having been called to your criticism of Mr. Garland's conduct in bringing suit in the name of the United States for the Pan-Electric Company against the Bell Company, I wish, in justification of a faithful public servant, to give you a complete history of the proceedings, and I believe that you will at least see the matter in a new light and give the salient points of my defense to your readers. I have been for several years attorney for my son, J. Harris Rogers, the inventor of "The National Secret Telephone" and of the "Pan-Electric Telephone" systems, and had been for a long time anxious to have a suit brought by the Government against the Bell Company to cancel their patent, which claimed "the art of telephony," known to have been invented by Philip Reiss of Germany. Three years ago I donated to Mr. Garland $500,000 stock in the original Pan-Electric Company, which carries with it $500,000 in the Pan-Electric Telegraph and $500,000 in the Pan-Electric Telephone, making in all $1,500,000 (one million five hundred thousand dollars) stock in the company. This donation was made with the understanding that he and other prominent persons associated with us should assist in monetizing some twenty-five patents belonging to my son. All the parties incurred considerable expense in experimental work, renting of telegraph lines between New York and Washington, manufacturing, etc., but were soon reimbursed about $10 or $11 from sales of State rights (still retaining all their stock). Mr. Garland and Senator Harris had both given their written opinions that our patents did not infringe the Bell patent—a copy of which I send herewith.

Soon after Mr. Garland's promotion to the office of Attorney-General I applied to him to move against the Bell Company, but he declined doing so. I then by letter requested Senator Harris, Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, the Hon. Casey Young, and other members of the company to urge him further, but he still declined; Mr. Young reporting to me by letter that the Attorney-General felt a delicacy in the matter on account of his ownership of stock in the company. I had always appreciated his high sense of honor, but could not see how his private feelings of delicacy should deprive me and my associates of our right as citizens if we had a right to try the validity of our patent in the manner proposed. Furthermore, Mr. Garland being indebted to me not only for his $1,500,000 stock, but for my efforts in getting him appointed Attorney-General, I began to feel that he was not inclined to reciprocate the favors I had done him; but, to relieve him in a measure of the delicacy referred to, I prevailed (through my agents) on "The National Telephone Company"—a small corporation founded on several of my son's earlier patents—to press once more upon Mr. Garland my favorit plan for canceling the Bell patents; and he, having no stock in this company, consented; but said (so the Hon. Casey Young reported to me and my son) that he would leave the matter with Mr. Goode, Assistant Attorney-General, and so he did; and accordingly the suit was commenced by the United States in behalf of a company in which Mr. Garland held no stock, and in behalf of citizens of the United States who had made out a prima-facie case against the Bell Company to the satisfaction of Mr. Goode. How Mr. Garland or Mr. Goode could have acted otherwise as faithful public servants passes my comprehension. Respectfully, J. W. ROGERS, Attorney for J. Harris Rogers, inventor of the "Pan-Electric" and "National Telephone" systems.

GEN. JOHNSTON'S FIRST LETTER.

The first letter of Gen. Johnston upon the subject of selling the stock is very significant:

"IF THE ENTERPRISE SHOULD NOT SUCCEED, ALL CONCERNED IN THEM WOULD BE CONSIDERED AS SWINDLERS."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23, 1883.—Dr. J. W. Rogers—DEAR SIR: Your note of the 21st was received yesterday afternoon, and I saw Mr. J. Harris Rogers immediately in regard to its contents, as officially I can communicate with no one but him in regard to the stock which is borne on the company's records as his.

I reminded him that the sale of stock is not permitted by the company, and also that such sales, even if not prohibited, would be very dangerous. For if the enterprise should not succeed all concerned in them would be considered by the public as swindlers. I mean all concerned, all of us. Most respectfully, yours truly, J. E. JOHNSTON.

A LUNCH PARTY.

HOW TO INVITE THE GUESTS AND WHAT TO SET BEFORE THEM.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For the benefit of some of your lady readers, who on account of ill-health are unable to go out in society but little if at all, but who can occasionally entertain a few friends, yet do not feel themselves thoroughly "posted" in all the little details required for such occasions, will you kindly publish in your Sunday paper something about a ladies' lunch party? Tell us the style of the invitation, the way the table should be laid, the most stylish bill of fare, manner in which it should be served, seating of the guests, etc. I am certain many a lady will bless you for such information, especially CONSTANT READER.

[For a lunch party intended as a daylight assembly for the friends of the hostess, the hours as a rule extend from half-past 1 to 5 or from 2 to 6 o'clock p. m. In accordance with the rules set down by New York and Boston society, these luncheons should be devoid of all elaborateness in costume and all undue formality. Invitations should be issued from three to four days before the date set, or if the assemblage is a large one a week before. The form should be as follows:

MRS. JAMES SMITH
AT LUNCH,
R. S. V. P. No. 5300 Michigan avenue.

Or, if the hostess is to be assisted by some young woman, both names may be given, as:

MRS. JOSEPH A. BROWN,
LUNCHEON.
At home Feb. 22, from 4 to 6.
No. 5000 Michigan avenue.

Such lunches should be served upon small tables. For instance, fifty guests would lunch off of ten small tables in the dining-room and extension. The dishes should be served from the kitchen or side tables, whichever is convenient, and the menu should be as follows: Bouillon, oyster-patties, cutlets with minced sweetbreads and green peas, chicken-salad, glacés, cake, coffee.

THE TALK IN NEW YORK.

Shrewd politicians declare that they already detect the hand of Peter B. Sweeny manipulating local politics. They predict that his influence will be plainly shown next fall in the State and County Conventions. His reported interviews about the city and county debt have attracted much political attention. No man is more familiar with the subject and no man could use his knowledge with more political effect. Mr. Sweeny has all the shrewdness and power of effecting combinations that Thurlow Weed possessed, with far greater skill in concealing his identity. Indeed, Mr. Weed and Mr. Sweeny thoroughly understood each other and were on the best of terms. Weed had perfect confidence in Mr. Sweeny, and they invariably worked together regardless of politics where the interests of mutual personal friends were at stake. It was Mr. Sweeny who really secured the appointment and confirmation of Rufus F. Andrews as Surveyor of the Port of New York under President Lincoln. Two days before the appointment he visited Weed at the Astor House, and together the two crafty leaders manipulated the wires that proved so effective in Washington. One of the oldest and most experienced men in Tammany Hall assures me that John Kelly during his long leadership of that faction was more or less under the influence of Mr. Sweeny, although the latter was an exile in Paris. As evidence of this he points to the fact that Kelly was originally a political protégé of Mr. Sweeny. It was through the influence of Mr. Sweeny and John Clancy that Mr. Kelly was first nominated for Alderman. It is said that he was really defeated, but, with the readiness characterizing political engineering at that time, he was counted in by order of the leaders. My informant tells me he was present when the vote was changed in the old "Ivy Green" in Elm street. The same influence afterwards elected Mr. Kelly to Congress. While there he secured control of appointments in the navy-yard and custom-house, and turned them over to his sponsors. It gave them immense political power and materially aided Mr. Sweeny in securing the control of the party in the city and county. It was through Mr. Sweeny's influence that Mr. Kelly was afterwards nominated for Sheriff, and it was Mr. Sweeny who controlled the patronage of the office after Mr. Kelly was elected.

Tweed rushed to his downfall, despite the protestations of his astute political associates. Flushed with his success in defeating the bolt of the Young Democracy of the city, he took the bit in his mouth, and, disregarding the advice of Mr. Sweeny, went over the precipice. A year later he was in jail and Mr. Sweeny was in exile. At that time Mr. Kelly was in Europe. He frequently visited his old friend, and undoubtedly absorbed much advice. Certain it is that he returned to New York and seized the reins of power in Tammany Hall. Reposing the utmost confidence in his honesty, Tilden and other Democrats prominent in breaking the Tweed ring gave him their hearty support. His first move was to punish Sweeny's enemies. Morrissey, Fox, O'Brien, Norton, Murphy, Creamer, and others were bundled out of Tammany Hall, one after the other. Genet was run down and sent to the penitentiary. Mr. Sweeny's personal friends were befriended by the organization, and finally the great fight against Samuel J. Tilden was opened. Gov. Robinson was sent to his political grave and drew after him the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Meantime Mr. Sweeny returned to New York. The civil suits against him were withdrawn, it is averred, at the instance of his old friend. Sweeny returned to Europe a year or more afterwards, where he is said to have still acted as the confidential adviser of Mr. Kelly. When Cleveland was nominated, as is well known, Mr. Kelly left the convention and hesitated a long time before deciding to support the ticket. His mind was not made up until he had more than ample time to hear from Mr. Sweeny. By his following Peter's advice to the letter a Democratic National Administration was secured. It was secured only by Tammany's standing solid in line. A treachery in a single Assembly district would have made Blaine President. What has followed is well known. Physical ailments disabled Mr. Kelly as a leader. He was no longer susceptible to the influence of Mr. Sweeny and could no longer carry out Sweeny's plans in political campaigns. The time seemed to be ripe for the old leader's return, and he is again on his native heath, as sapient and silent as ever. Whether he will mount to real power again and become the invisible monarch behind the throne time may determine. He remains at the house of his brother-in-law and apparently takes no interest in political matters. Indeed, he is rarely, if ever, seen upon the streets. Some of the shrewdest political veterans, however, frequently dine with him, and speak in hushed tones of his marvelous abilities.

AMOS J. CUMMINGS.

Mr. Barrett's revival of Victor Hugo's "Hernani" resulted in critical disappointment. I am more than ever convinced that dramas and operas with only a historical interest ought to remain in history. "Hernani" is a strong melodramatic and romantic play, but with all respect for Hugo it is not abreast of current taste and current dramatic methods. The resuscitation of these things serves to show how we have got away from the high-falutin of fifty years ago. The play of today must deal with men and women to interest men and women, not with gods and goddesses. As for Mr. Barrett, his Hernani is to me the dryest, hardest piece of abstract declamation that I have ever seen him attempt. Could Hernani have come with the Spanish swing of the cavaliers, plumed and poetical; with the airs of Saragossa and the scents of Seville; could he have awakened the romance of Provence and lit the character with that moonlight that still shimmers in song on the Guadalquivir; could he have been a lover with the tropic passion of the South, and flung the spell of a light, melodious knighthood over the incidents—we would have accepted him, play and all, for we take the past if it only brings us the life of the past. But the husk of the past—bah! It reminds me of those phosphates that are brought home from the crematory and put up for remembrance, as if lime were love.

While we are giving our sincerest sympathy to "Hernani," we are not unmindful of the prodigious strides Mr. Barrett is making along the path of managerial success. He is at this moment the Napoleon of actor-managers. He has swallowed up Mr. Edwin Booth, for he is to manage him. And if ever a worthy representative American actor wanted management it was Mr. Booth. He has been piling up money so continuously that he has forgotten all about his fame. There he is playing the same "Hamlet," in the same way, with the same sticks, at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. On the opening night the house was half full. I don't believe there were five people in the theatre who went to see "Hamlet." They all went to see Edwin Booth. And on that perfidious weakness Mr. Booth, the starriest barn-stormer of them all, represents himself. When you get Barrett and Booth side by side, as we have them now, you have a live man and a live actor in sharp contrast. One stands in the current that drifts towards him, picking up the floating wealth; the other is fighting his way up stream and making things lively on shore.

I am very glad to be able to report that Miss Maud Miller, the young woman who abused her father in the newspapers and got an engagement with Mr. John A. Stevens, ceased to interest the town the moment she stopped writing about her father and went to acting. I watched her act for ten minutes, and now I understand why she was so much more successful in portraying her domestic affairs than in picturing other people's. Of course you know that we have had Morosini-Schilling at the Casino for weeks drawing money because she married a coachman—not because of her still, small voice and ankles. It's awful discouraging to men with daughters—and coachmen.

Sophie Eyre comes back in Belasco's new piece at Wallack's the 15th. By the way, it turns out that this new piece is "Fernande" salted. Can you imagine anything newer than that? I wonder if Belasco ever did anything new? A pretty little war of turtle-doves has been raging in this theatre between Eyre and Rohe. I believe all the establishment take sides. There are Rohe days and Eyre days, and Belasco, after three or four rehearsals, went off somewhere and called upon the rocks to fall and cover him.

Margaret Mather is winding up her astonishing New York season with a week of comedy. The most astonishing thing about this season has been the fact that not a single newspaper man in the city has been able to get a word out of her or even to see her anywhere but on the stage. Even Jo Howard acknowledged himself baffled. I saw this woman five years ago, poor, unknown, friendless. She is worth $60,000 today. The stage has its victories, but it has to have its managers first.

The latest Wagner blast is called "Rienzi." The hosts are marshaling for Friday night at the Metropolitan. This is the opera that makes the trumpeters lead the orchestra with bloody lips. It is to be the last wild fanfare of an unprecedented season of noise, and will bring us up to Lent, which Heaven send may heal the blows of sound.

NYM CRINKLE.

Addison Cammack is always quick to run when he doesn't feel sure of his ground, and in one day this week he covered 50,000 shares of various stocks. He is usually interested on the same side of the market as Baron Woerishoffer, but the Baron changed front late last week and closed most of his shorts. Two great bear traders have therefore taken water and gone into winter quarters. The story in Wall street was that Baron Woerishoffer applied the "milking" process to his usual ally, Mr. Cammack, buying freely himself and selling to "Old Cam" at an advance of several points each time. This didn't last long, however, if it ever occurred. Bluff Prince Cammack hastened to get on the sunny side of the barn to bask in the genial rays of "bull" prosperity. Addison Cammack, by the way, is one of the shrewdest operators in Wall street. He is a natural pessimist, however, and rather too apt to take the bear side. He has at times lost heavily in what he calls "testing the market"—as much as a million in one year, I have heard—but today he is worth $7,000,000 and is a recognized power in Wall street. Gray-eyed, heavy-featured, broad-shouldered, tall, and massively built, with a resolute jaw, often abrupt to crustiness in his manners, he is a favorit topic of conversation among Wall street men as they puff their Reina Victorias or clink their champagne glasses in Delmonico's or rattle up-town in coupés of black-and-tan or more elegant pure black after an unsuccessful day in the board-room. He is often seen at the Windsor Hotel, the nightly resort of Wall street brokers. There it is seen that he dresses expensively but plainly, as becomes his 58 years. He usually carries a stout walking-stick, and passes up and down the lobby as upon a quarter-deck and he a pirate of Penzance. It is fair to say of him, however, that such a title could never be in any sense more than a humorous one in recognition of his sailor-like bluffness of speech. The report that he was once in the slave trade is a mistake, though he was once, it is understood, part owner in a blockade-runner. He sold his interest in it, went to London, came back to this country, was pardoned by President Johnson, then engaged in the liquor business, later was associated with "Charlie" Osborn as a stock-broker, made a fortune, and then, severing his connection with Mr. Osborn, became a successful operator on his own account. He is a member of the Stock Exchange, but is seldom seen there. Many persons unfamiliar with the ways of financiers suppose that such men as Jay Gould, Russell Sage, Sidney Dillon, C. P. Huntington, and William H. Vanderbilt, when he was alive, might be seen at any time on the Stock Exchange. Of course, others know that they are never seen there, though of the persons named Russell Sage and Collis P. Huntington, the terror of Jay Gould, are both members.

But, to return to Addison Cammack. As he paces up and down the marble floor of the Windsor lobby between the bronze pillars he talks rapidly and constantly about the developments of the day in Wall street. He has a confirmed habit of reiteration; he will often repeat a remark two or three times, adding almost invariably the Sioux-like interrogation, "Huh?" He is often gruff in the extreme, but his friends consider him a Kohinoor in an unpolished state. One of them once said to him:

"I see, Mr. Cammack, that you are called the Mephistopheles of Wall street."

"Why so?" growled the financial veteran.

"Because you raise Hades down there," was the reply, which I here soften a little.

"Well," said the speculative chieftain, "if they mean by that title that I do as I please, they're right, and I don't care a tinker's cuss what they call me."

He used to stop at the Windsor, but now he is at the Langham, a few blocks further up Fifth avenue. The Langham, by the way, is the old Restell mansion renovated. It was there, it will be remembered, that the notorious Mme. Restell committed suicide by cutting her throat, after the law had fastened its clutch upon her. While Mr. Cammack stopped at the Windsor he was regularly shaved by a certain barber there, who was as attentive as an Oriental slave in his tonsorial ministrations. When the barber had a chance to buy a shop and start in business on his own account Mr. Cammack, such is the liberality of the man, let him have $2,500. This was generous, but it is not surprising in a man who, it is well known, once lent Jay Gould $2,000,000 without so much as a scrap of paper as security. He is sometimes a bear at the wrong time, as he was recently, but in the panic of 1873 he made $1,500,000 on the short side, and the great decline of later years brought $2,000,000 more to his coffers.

The barber story about Mr. Cammack recalls a somewhat similar one about that plumed knight of Wall street whom I hope to see again enter the lists for a victorious tourney—James R. Keene. One day, when in the zenith of his financial power, he hurriedly hailed a rickety-looking coupé, more intent on getting up-town quick than on going in style. The man was shrewd and attentive and pleased the large-hearted speculator. Mr. Keene became a steady patron, and one day dumfounded the cabman by presenting him with a handsome new coupé and a fine, strong horse. The act was characteristic of Mr. Keene.

There is nothing more said about sales of stocks for the estate of the late D. P. Morgan. One who knew him well said to me the other day: "I don't know exactly how much Northwest Mr. Morgan left, but it has been placed as high as 30,000 shares. He also owned some Oregon Transcontinental at the time of his death. I think that the value of his estate has since his decease increased $200,000.

The obituary notices of D. P. Morgan were meagre, and yet he was one of Wall street's interesting characters. In one respect he was exactly the opposit of Mr. Cammack; that is, he was always inclined to be on the bull side. He jumped quickly, however, from one side of the market to the other; he ran like a deer when he found he was on the wrong side of the fence. He had a wonderfully tenacious memory; he could remember stock figures as Henry J. Raymond could election statistics. He would at times deal in from 50,000 to 60,000 shares of various stocks in a day, backing and filling, and never make the smallest memorandum. He never used tobacco or liquor, and at one time he weighed 195 pounds, though a short time before his death. When in London or Paris his mind was always on the stock exchange, and he often speculated by cable in from 15,000 to 25,000 shares of stock in a single day.

As to stocks, Henry Clews is decidedly bullish. The bull sentiment has latterly become the dominant one. Plenty of money obtainable at low rates, the probability that there will be no important exports of gold, the peaceful outlook among the trunk lines, the prospects of a coal combination, a better dry-goods trade, and a large and steady demand for railroad bonds and, to some extent, for stocks, greatly encourage the bovine brethren. One of the keenest men in Wall street said to me the other day: "I believe the Drexel-Morgan syndicate that took such a large amount of stocks last summer is still heavily interested and will protect the market if necessary."

OSCAR W. RIGGS.

The hours of New York balls having gotten so late that those who arrived at 11 frequently found themselves first, the hostesses are making a combination in favor of early hours—and Mrs. George S. Bowdoin is to be credited with the admirable beginning. At her beautiful little ball given last Thursday evening the invitations were from "9 to 1," and the cotillon began at half-past 10. Mrs. Bowdoin is a daughter of the late Moses H. Grinnell and a grand niece of Washington Irving. Mr. Bowdoin is a great-grandson of Alexander Hamilton and Gen. Philip Schuyler. His father was a nephew of Robert C. Winthrop of Boston, so if anybody in America can be called aristocratic, this family, although totally unpretentious in manners, have a claim to this distinction. This excellent plan has been followed by a number of young men who intend to give two early dances at the Hotel Brunswick before Lent. They will also exclude wine. The subscription will be only $8, the patronesses will be the mothers of débutantes, and all fashionable society women. The Hotel Brunswick has heretofore, except for the coaching dinner, been left out in the cold and Delmonico has had the giving of all the balls. However, people are getting tired of the stuffy, badly-ventilated ball-room at Delmonico's, where all the dancers are overheated and the matrons frozen to death, and therefore the last Patriarchs' ball, given at the Metropolitan Opera-House Assembly-Rooms, was a great success. The windows were hung with tulips and smilax and the white and gold decorations of the walls and ceiling presented a Versailles-like effect. The leader was Frederick Tams of yachting fame. By far the prettiest private ball given during the week was that of Mrs. Ogden Goelet, who was Miss Wilson of the South. Mr. Goelet inherited millions from his father. Their house in Fifth avenue is a dream of beauty and magnificence. Five large rooms open into a baronial hall in which is a wood fire, and all sorts of graceful little nooks are made by curtains, and chairs, and screens, and tête-à-têtes. The dressing was splendid, many ladies appearing in red, and also in the deep yellow now so fashionable, and diamond tiaras and pearl necklaces were not at all uncommon. Very low-necked dresses were worn and sleeveless gowns with gloves to the shoulder.

Now the dinners are all made to assume a color. Those for belles who have been out one winter are called pink dinners; those for débutantes are called rose-bud dinners; those for young girls who are to come out next winter are called green dinners. At a dinner given to her very young daughter by Mrs. William B. Dinsmore the favors were all light green, while the table decorations were of that color. Our one nobleman, Sir Roderick Cameron, is entertaining beautifully at No. 1 University place. He had always kept up the fine baronial style at his beautiful place on Staten Island. The married belles of this winter are Mrs. Maude Ramsey, a granddaughter of Commodore Garrison, Mrs. Adolph Seidenberg, Mrs. J. D. F. Lanier, and Mrs. John Elliot Cowdin. The reception at the Union League Club was crowded and fashionable, and the new President, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, gained untold honors and compliments. The Amateur Dramatic Club, containing as it does two of the prettiest and most gifted of the débutantes of the season, Miss Cornelia Van Auken and Mrs. May Brady, who is an Irish beauty and wit, are bound to succeed, and their Saturday evening plays at the University Club Theatre are among the best things of the season. With three public balls a week and several private dances, with private theatricals and readings, brilliant musicales at Mrs. Musgrave's and Mrs. Del Monte's, the season is still considered a dull one! What next? Mrs. James Brown Potter will play "A Russian Honeymoon" while at Washington for the Mount Vernon fund.

MRS. JOHN SHERWOOD.

SPORTING NEWS.

THIS WEEK TO DETERMINE THE EIGHTH CLUB QUESTION.

About the only remaining question of any great importance in league affairs will be determined at the Tremont House next Tuesday when Messrs. Spalding, Marsh, and Lucas, as the committee appointed to select the eighth club in the National League for the present season, will assemble for that purpose. The applicants for admission are the Milwaukee, Indianapolis, and Kansas City, with the chances of success, so far as is known, about equal. President Schawabacker of the Indianapolis Club and Messrs. Heim, McKirn, and Whitfield of the Kansas City Club have signified their intention of being present to press the claims of their respective cities, while it goes without saying that Milwaukee will leave nothing undone which may result in the league honors coming her way. There has been a great deal of talk about Cincinnati as a probably successful applicant, but from all that can be learned that city has as yet in no way signified its wish to enter the league fold.

Mr. Spalding anticipates that the committee will be in session until nightfall, as it is their intention to carefully listen to and then as carefully consider all that the representatives of each club may have to offer.

MILWAUKEE AND THE LEAGUE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—It is now believed that Milwaukee will constitute one of the eight cities in the National Base-Ball League circuit for the coming season. A delegate from here will attend the league meeting to be held at Chicago Tuesday, and, from Milwaukee's advantage over the other applicants in point of location and public interest in the game, it is expected that the place will be given her. Supporters of Milwaukee's cause call attention to the fact that during the last ball season the attendance given games at Kansas City was less than one-sixth as great as that accorded by Milwaukeeans at contests here.

THIS WEEK'S MEETING OF THE NATIONAL TROTTING ASSOCIATION.

By far the most important turf meeting that has been held in Chicago for some time will be that of the National Trotting Association, which convenes at the Grand Pacific Hotel next Wednesday afternoon. In the association are embraced 248 trotting associations, located in thirty-four States of the Union, and these will be represented either in person or by proxy. There has been much dissatisfaction with the administration of the National Association's affairs of late and it seems not unlikely that a strong opposition will appear in the field against Mr. Thomas J. Vail, the present Secretary and virtually chief of the organization. The headquarters of the association are now situated at Hartford, Conn., and there is a growing feeling that Chicago should be the future headquarters from which the affairs of the National organization should be administered. This will form one of the chief issues of the meeting. Another will be the unjust rule that enables the National organization to make racing associations its agents without making them responsible. For instance, should claimed entrance money be paid to any racing association for the purpose of raising the penalty of expulsion that may have been imposed by the officers of the National Association, and the racing association should fail to notify the National Secretary, or afterwards dispute the payment of the money, the penalty of expulsion still remains in force until the money is paid again. The owner of a trotter may have his receipt for money paid, but that will make no difference with the National Secretary. He does not hold the racing association responsible to a sufficient extent to even ask them for an explanation, but, on the contrary, says to the owner of the horse: "I only know that I have not received any notification from the association of your having paid the claim, and that the National Association's commissions have not been remitted to me. Until that is done your horse cannot enter." Should the man show his receipt from the racing association, the matter is then investigated, and meanwhile, during weeks perhaps, the penalty of expulsion remains in force, unless the owner is willing to deposit with Secretary Vail a sum of money as an indemnity bond, and this, it is claimed by horsemen, is virtually paying money into the National treasury, for they do not see it again for years.

Delegates will begin to arrive today and tomorrow, and the meeting will probably last through daily sessions until Saturday next,

THE GALLAGHER-CARTER MATCHES.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—George Slosson, backing Tom Gallagher, has opened negotiations for two matches between Gallagher and Eugene Carter to be played at Chicago for $250 each a side; one game at fourteen-inch balk line and one at cushion carroms. Carter will leave with his backer, George Forbes, on the midnight train for Chicago. He will accept the matches, but prefers to make them for $500 a side each and will agree to play in a public hall in Chicago.

Tom Gallagher yesterday sent a challenge to Eugene Carter of Cleveland for a match game at billiards, to take place in this city, for stakes of $500 a side. Gallagher gives Carter the privilege of playing one game at fourteen-inch balk line, or two games, one at balk line and the other at cushion carroms. This challenge is the result of Carter's proposition made two weeks ago.

Slosson yesterday offered to contribute $100 to a cushion carrom handicap tournament, to be played commencing Feb. 17 next. Anson, Hoa, Thatcher, Mathews, Hatley, and Gallagher will be the contestants, each paying $25 entrance fee, and Gallagher playing 150 points against each of the others' 110. All except Gallagher will play even up, 150 points.

PADDY RYAN STILL TALKING FIGHT WITH SULLIVAN.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Paddy Ryan informed your correspondent tonight that the stake-money for a fight with Sullivan was now being raised in this city. Ryan has placed in the hands of S. M. Hickey a challenge to Sullivan, to fight according to London prize-ring rules or Marquis of Queensberry rules, eight rounds, for $2,500 a side. Ryan claims that Sullivan squirms out of making a match with him on the score of Paddy not being able to raise a sufficient amount of money to make it an object for Sullivan to go into training. The $500 forfeit will be forwarded to the Clipper the moment that Sullivan signifies his readiness to fight. There is no doubt whatever that the match will be arranged within a few days.

INSTRUCTION.

ALTHOUGH THE METROPOLITAN BUSIness College on Madison-st., opposite McVicker's Theatre, has an attendance of over 400 students, its greatness does not consist alone in its attendance. It is great in its faculty of experienced teachers; great in its course of study and its drills; great in the system and fidelity with which it serves its students, and in everything that will conduce to their substantial benefit. Persons who desire to receive the most for their time and money should call at the college and talk with Mr. Powers, the Principal, before making other arrangements. Students received whenever there are vacant desks.

ANGULAR HANDWRITING—MRS. THOMAS JONES, of Queen's College, London, England, gives private tuition in this fashionable style; proficiency attained in twelve lessons. Hours, 2 to 4; Saturdays, 10 to 12. Room 58 Nee Ban Building.

A FEW MORE STUDENTS ONLY CAN BE received at Souder's Business College. Those desiring the best instruction at the best college at low rates of tuition should make early application. The teacher in shorthand department is a practical reporter, and students are thoroughly prepared for the duties of stenographic work. More than 350 situations open to the students in the past year.

CHICAGO OPERA-HOUSE CONSERVATORY—A school of dramatic art, music (vocal, instrumental), elocution, fencing, dancing, literature, languages, stage "business," and rehearsals, etc. Indorsed by Modjeska and Barrett.

Oct. 22, 1885.—In this country, where the combination system affords so little opportunity for beginners your school must prove of great benefit to young people of talent who aim to adopt the stage. In observing the work I was pleased to find such good results. Yours sincerely, HELENA MODJESKA.

Nov. 1, 1885.—I beg to thank you for the service rendered during my engagement here by the pupils of the Conservatory. I also desire to express the sense of satisfaction I feel in noting the practical working of your institution, which cannot fail to aid directly in the better equipment of our companies. Yours truly, LAWRENCE BARRETT.

THE RACE MURDER.

A brief dispatch appeared in THE TRIBUNE a few days ago to the effect that George Freeman, alias "Sheeny George," who was supposed to have been implicated in the murder of Officer Race in this city a few years ago, had been arrested in Kansas City for vagrancy and fined $100, and that he was working out his fine breaking stones on the streets. The Race murder mystery has never been cleared up to the satisfaction of the public, but most of those who were connected with the investigation of the case are now convinced that Freeman was the actual murderer, and that he was only saved from the gallows by the mistake of the authorities in attempting to fasten the crime on another man. Barring the actual murderer and his companion, there is probably only one man living who witnessed the murder and can positively identify the murderer. That man is Lesser Friedberg, the notorious "fence" at whose place the murder was committed, and who has since served a term in the penitentiary for his connection with that particular crime, the conviction being for receiving stolen property. Friedberg, at the time of the investigation, refused to give the officers any information as to the murderer, and according to his own confession helped for a time to shield the actual criminal and fasten the crime on a different man. At last, after these many years, Friedberg professes a willingness to tell everything. His highest claim at present is that of a reformed crook, and his statements are worth very little except where corroborated by other testimony. He spent two hours last evening telling a TRIBUNE reporter the story of his life and the details of his connection with and knowledge of the Race murder. His story is interesting, and there is little doubt but that it is substantially true, especially in the main point of the identification of the murderer. His story is corroborated by various incidents and developments of the investigation which were inexplicable at the time to the police and the reporters.

Friedberg is now living in a little room in the rear of No. 1238 State street and supporting himself by his trade as a tailor, which he learned in Germany and practiced in Joliet. He has $7,000 locked up in the safety vaults, but cannot get a cent of it, his wife having placed legal restraints in the way pending of the result of certain divorce proceedings. When he gets this money he proposes to start in some legitimate business and live square the rest of his life. He is 42 years old, but does not look over 35, the Joliet service notwithstanding. He is a German Jew, and though twenty years in this country still speaks the English language very imperfectly. He has got very little of the typical characteristics of his race; he is a youngish-looking man of medium build, wears a heavy, dark mustache, and looks much more like an artisan or a store clerk than a Hebrew pawnbroker and proprietor of a thieves' "fence."

HE TELLS HIS STORY.

"I came to Chicago in February, 1877," Friedberg began, "with $13,000 in my possession. These letters will show you where I had it and how I made it." The letters exhibited included one from Steinway & Sons, New York, to Lyon & Healy, Chicago, dated May 25, 1877, inclosing a check for $8,093, with instructions to pay that amount over to Lesser Friedberg, "a German Israelite residing at No. 86 State street, Chicago." The letter set forth that the firm had, as a favor to Friedberg, taken $8,000 from him temporarily on deposit, but would not keep the money any longer. Under the same date William Steinway wrote to Friedberg saying he would not keep the money any longer, and had sent it to Lyon & Healy with three months' interest added. A letter from Steinway & Sons, dated Nov. 9, 1875, to Edwin B. King, Chicago, set forth that the firm had known Friedberg for several years prior to his removal from New York to Chicago; that he kept a picture store and took care of windows and skylights for that and other firms; that "he had the reputation of being a hard-working, reliable man"; that there was "a fierce run" on the savings banks in the fall of '76, and that the firm, as a personal favor to Friedberg, had accepted his deposit of $8,000, which he drew out of various savings banks.

"I had lived about ten years in New York City," continued Friedberg, "and me and my wife had worked hard and lived cheap and made a tidy bit of money. We had about agreed to go back to the old country and live on the interest of our savings, but decided to pay a visit to my brother-in-law first—Harvey, the plumber, at No. 473 State street, who is married to my wife's sister. So we came here in February. We had a little over $5,000 in cash with us, besides the $8,000 left with Mr. Steinway. I lived with Harvey about six months, doing nothing particular. This was about the time of the panic, and times were about as bad as they could be, and several of my friends and acquaintances here urged me to go into the pawnbroker's business—bad times is the pawnbroker's harvest, you know.

HE BEGINS PAWNBROKING.

When the building No. 474 State street was finished I leased the store and basement and started the pawnbroking business there in August, 1877. So you see, though they tried to make out that I was an old pawnbroking crook, I was only about a year in the business when Race was killed.

"I never met 'Sheeny George' until about three weeks before the murder. He drove up to my door one morning about 6 o'clock and wakened me out of bed. He said he was acquainted with a man I knew and that that man had sent him to me with some goods. He carried three big satchels of cutlery into the store and asked me to buy the stuff. I said I wanted to see the man first and be guaranteed against danger, knowing, of course, that the stuff was stolen, and 'Sheeny George' said, 'All right; we'll drive down to his house.' So we drove there and found he had gone down-town. We then drove back to my place. My wife was still unwilling to touch the stuff, there was so much of it, so she said she would go down and see this man at his office. He was not in, but a partner of his told her 'Sheeny George's' stuff was all right; that there would be no danger. But we were still afraid, and wanted to see the man himself before buying, and then 'Sheeny George' got mad and took the stuff away. I had a talk with him once or twice after that. He said I missed a rare bargain, and I said I was afraid of cutlery stuff—so easy to trace and identify, you see—but told him if he brought the right kind of goods I would buy them."

"Well, silks and the like, such as I was accustomed to handle. I did not see him again until a few nights later—the night of the murder. It was Friday evening, Oct. 4, 1878. It was a Jewish holiday, and I had been to the synagog in the afternoon. The store was not lighted up. I was sitting at supper in the room in rear of the store about 9 o'clock. My wife and Harvey and his wife were also there. The Harveys had just dropped in for a friendly call. A wagon drove up to the door and 'Sheeny George' came in and says, 'I have some stuff here.' I said I would look at it, and he brought an armful of rolls of silk in—just as much as he could carry—and dumped it on the floor. I thought he should have been more careful than carry this stuff in publicly at this hour of the evening, and I started from the supper-table to stop him bringing in any more. He had a young fellow named Dennis holding the lines, and there was none but the two of them in charge of the wagon. My wife also rushed out to warn him or make him take the stuff back.

THE MURDER.

"As I reached the door I saw Officer Race step up to the wagon. Dennis jumped up in front and started to drive off, and George jumped in on top of the goods; Race made a grab at George and George pulled a revolver and shot him through the head. Race fell dead and the wagon dashed off. My head was in a whirl, but the sight of my wife as she fell in a faint at the door brought me a little to my senses. 'Sheeny George' and Dennis jumped off the wagon half a block off and cut across lots and escaped. The wagon-load of goods was taken to the Central Station, and three or four hours after the police came to my place and found the stuff that 'Sheeny George' had brought in lying on the floor just where he dumped it. Then they arrested me and my wife and Harvey and his wife. The stuff consisted of silks and silk velvets, and some silk handkerchiefs, and was worth about $2,500. It was the proceeds of a burglary at Jaffray's wholesale dry-goods store on Fifth avenue the same evening.

"I was advised by a man in whom I had confidence to keep my mouth shut and not say a word to anybody. He said I could get out in a few days if I kept quiet, and that that would be the end of it, but that if I squealed I could not be saved. I was booked as accessory to murder and for receiving stolen property, and bail was refused. My wife got out on $5,000 bail, Harvey on $3,000, and his wife on $2,000, each of them being charged with receiving stolen property.

"There was terrific excitement, the police arresting people on suspicion every day. The police were at me every day urging me to tell who the murderer was, for of course they knew, and everybody else knew, that I could name the murderer if I wanted to. But the story I told, as advised, was that two men, whom I had never seen before and did not know, came in and asked me to buy the stuff. The police showed me 'Sheeny George's' picture in the 'Rogues' Galley,' and, of course, I said I didn't know him—never had seen him before. The second Sunday after the murder Capt. O'Donnell and Mr. Jaffray had a long talk with me. They pleaded with me to tell all I knew. Jaffray said he had got his goods back and would not prosecute me if I only told the truth and helped the police catch the murderer. They talked so fair and reasonable that I had about decided to make a clean breast of it, when I was stiffened up and said nothing. Then I got out on a habeas corpus, Judge McAllister quashing the charge of accessory to murder and letting me out on the other charge in bonds of $8,000.

JOHNNY LAMB.

"And now about Jack Lamb, who was tried twice and convicted once for the Race murder. While I was still locked up a man told me one day that Mr. Dixon—he was Lieutenant then, I think—would show me a man, like he had showed me dozens before. 'When Dixon asks you, Is this the man?' said my informant, 'you say nothing—just refuse to speak a word.' So Dixon showed me Lamb, and asked me if he was the man, and I refused to reply. Lamb was confident when he saw me, but when I refused to speak I saw he turned the color of a corpse. I was badly broke up over it, and when Lamb left the room I said to Dixon: 'That's not the man—God knows that man wasn't near my house that night.' At the Coroner's inquest a colored woman swore she was at my door when Race was shot, and that Lamb was the man who did it; and on this evidence Lamb was held for the murder. Meantime 'Sheeny George' had been arrested for a burglary in St. Paul, and the police got pointers that 'Sheeny George' had a hand in the murder of Race. 'Sheeny George' was brought here on a requisition, and, acting, I judge, on advice, turned State's evidence, and swore that he and Lamb brought the wagon of goods to my house, and that Lamb shot Officer Race. I told my attorney, Van Buren, and State's-Attorney Mills that 'Sheeny George' was the murderer, and I also told the police, but because I kept my mouth shut before, and because also, I suppose, the case looked worse for Lamb, they refused my evidence. Remember, I was out on bail all the time from about three weeks after the murder, when the habeas corpus was granted, until my conviction was confirmed by the Supreme Court over four years later. Well, Lamb was tried and convicted for the murder. The only evidence against him was that of 'Sheeny George' and the colored woman; but what killed his defense was the fact that he couldn't account for his time the evening of the murder. The truth in the matter was that Lamb was one of the gang of burglars who robbed Jaffray's store that evening: but he and the rest of the gang lay low while 'Sheeny George' and Dennis delivered the stuff at my place. For the defense Mrs. Friedberg swore that 'Sheeny George' was the man who brought the stuff to the house and who shot the officer. The defense wanted to put me on the stand, but Mr. Mills prevented me on the ground that I had been in court and heard the evidence of the other witnesses.

"The Supreme Court gave Lamb a new trial, and at the second trial 'Sheeny George' and the colored woman swore the same as before. But a woman who had been distributing books or tracts in the jail testified that 'Sheeny George' had confessed to her that he was the murderer, and on this evidence Lamb was acquitted. 'Sheeny George' was let out some time later, after being about three years in jail. Lamb is now peddling cigars on the West Side and leading a decent life.

"The police force was terribly down on me because of my silence after the murder, and I deserved it all. If I had told the truth I would have got off free and 'Sheeny George' would have been hanged, but there wouldn't have been much money in the case for the attorneys. At my first trial—for receiving stolen property—the jury did not agree; at the second trial they gave me four years. I got out on a supersedeas on $5,500 bailbonds and could have skipped the country then if I wished. I was out until the Supreme Court finally ruled against me by a vote of 5 to 2, and in January, 1882, I went to the penitentiary. March, 1885, I was liberated, my sentence having been reduced by ten months, the full limit, for good conduct, and Gov. Oglesby restored my rights of citizenship.

REMINISCENCES.

"When I went to Joliet I left about $12,000 with my wife. She carried on a little private business while I was in, and had about $14,000 when I was liberated—about $8,000 of it in cash, and the rest in goods, such as gold watches, plate, etc. I guess she did a little private pawning business—without a license, you understand. I went to live with her again, and we quarreled—I was jealous about a man that hung around there. We lived at No. 427 State street—that is where she is still living. One day, about a month after I got out of prison, I was jealous and angry and she gave me some 'sass' and I slapped her face. Then we agreed to divide the property equally, and I got my share of $7,000 in cash and put it in a safety vault. She got a lawyer to sue for a divorce for cruelty, and first thing I knew there was an injunction out preventing me touching that $7,000, and I am left out in the cold with no money until this divorce business is settled."

"What were you doing the four years you were under bonds, between the time of the murder and the time you went to Joliet?"

"O, doing a little private business—not much of anything."

"You speculated some in gold bricks during this period, didn't you?"

"Well, now, that was a good joke. A few people, including a lawyer and a boss gambler, put up that job on me. I have no positive evidence of it, but I know it just the same. They knew I was a fool with money, and would bite at a trick of that kind. A kind of relative of Andrews, who went to the penitentiary a few days ago, told me of some Californians who had a gold brick worth $4,000. I met this man and a couple of fellows with wide-brimmed hats in a room in a hotel, and the gold brick was produced. We bored holes in it and put the shavings up in a little parcel, and I tested them and found it was 24-carat gold. I bought the brick for $2,800, spot cash, and a few days later found it was brass. They had used a sleight-of-hand trick to change the paper of brass shavings for a paper of genuine gold shavings. I compromised the case for $1,500.

"I hardly think Andrews will live to serve out his eight years in the penitentiary. It was easy there for me, for I have always been accustomed to hard work and plain food and a regular life; but Andrews was used to a fine life, and the change will be awful hard on him. After the first few months I got used to the work, and the food, and the silence, and the time did not seem long nor the life hard, and I came out with as good health as I ever had in my life. But Andrews—he's done!"

"What are you going to do when you get your money?"

"I'm not going to do any pawnbroking—you bet your life on that. I believe I'll start a custom-tailor shop; I have a friend in the business who wants a partner. Of one thing you may be sure—I'm going to live straight in the future. Crookedness doesn't pay."

MRS. FRIEDBERG'S STORY.

Mrs. Friedberg was seen last evening by a TRIBUNE reporter. Her version of the murder was substantially the same as Mr. Friedberg's, differing only in a few details. Mrs. Friedberg is a remarkably handsome woman. Her dark complexion and black hair and eyebrows give her the appearance of a Frenchwoman. She said that that memorable night of Oct. 4 about 9 o'clock the quartet were seated—it was after supper—when "Sheeny" George brought in the goods. She and her husband got up to remonstrate with him and he turned around and went out. "A customer of ours happened into the store just then," she said, "and I, knowing the goods to have been stolen, told him to go out and call an officer. I went out on the sidewalk, and saw a wagon on the curb. An officer approached and I went toward him and told him that a man had brought some stolen goods. Race—for that was the officer's name—went over to the wagon and placed his hand on it. "Sheeny" George, I think, was preparing to get another armful of goods in the wagon when the officer put his hand on the board, and George immediately whipped out a revolver and shot him, killing him instantly. I do not know what occurred after that, as I fainted." The number of the house where Mrs. Friedberg lives is No. 423, where she has resided for a long time. She wouldn't divulge the murderer's name while her husband did not. In regard to their separation she denies that any man ever hung around her house, and says she has been a very faithful wife, standing much more than many another woman would have done. It was just before he came to Chicago, she said, that he got into some trouble about a lawsuit. He came to this city, but was taken back on requisition papers in March, 1878. She went to New York and straightened matters out, and they came to this city. He was always a cruel husband, and she often said that if she had all their money she wouldn't live with him. After he got into this last scrape she tried in every way to save him from going to Joliet, and when he was there she spared neither time nor money in efforts to get him pardoned. Her voice trembled and she afterwards cried as she told how she had walked down-town and back in order to save car-fare, and had even washed her own clothes to save money so she could spend it for his benefit. She promised to live with him if he would treat her well, but, notwithstanding her self-sacrifices and all she had done for him, which he admitted, he began to abuse her ere he was a week out of the jail. This was more than she could or would stand, and she resolved to no longer live with him. The story of the equitable division of their money, she says, is incorrect, and he didn't leave $12,000, it was a good deal less, and she spent a large amount on lawyers. There never was any stolen property bought by her husband and herself to her knowledge.

ART.

At the Water-Color Exhibition in New York Mr. Abbey's "The Old Song" has been purchased for Mr. Clarence King. The price, $3,000, is the largest ever paid for an American water-color.

The exhibition of the Salmagundi Club closed at the American Art Galleries, New York, Jan. 30, with sales amounting to $3,472. In addition to the Salmagundi sales ten water-colors have been sold from F. K. M. Rehn's exhibition for $1,060—making a total for both exhibitions of $4,522.

Another of Jules Breton's paintings has found a home in this country—his "The Last Ray," from the Salon of 1885, which is temporarily upon exhibition at the gallery of Messrs. Knoeder & Co., New York. "The Last Ray" is, with the possible exception of "The Communicants," the largest picture by Breton owned in this country

At Maurienne, in Savoy, a drawing by Van Dyck has been found which he made in return for hospitality from the family of Claude Borelly, at whose house he fell ill. It is a portrait of a little girl of 12. An amateur who has been long on the track of the lost portrait has at last traced it to its present owner.

Picture-sales are to have their historian in England. Mr. G. Redford proposes to write a history of the sale of pictures and other works of art in England, and make as full a record as possible. If enough subscribers can be had the work will appear in two quarto volumes. The price will be from $15 to $25.

Owing to the great success of the Millais exhibition at the Grosvenor Gallery, London, it is probable an effort will soon be made to gather elsewhere the works of Holman Hunt.

The monument to Delacroix will consist of his bust placed on a pyramid standing on a platform of three degrees. On the lowest will stand a Genius of the Arts applauding; on the next, a figure representing Time, who holds in his arms Justice; while the latter will hold a crown towards the bust. The sculptor is Jules Dalon, and the allegory shows the delay of Justice in appreciating Delacroix according to his merits.

The art treasures of the late King of Portugal will be sold next spring.

Sir John Millais' next contribution to popular art will be a study of child-life. It depicts a little girl dressed in garments of dark green color, sitting in a glowing landscape, blowing soap-bubbles. Sir John Millais has also on the easel a study of one of the heroines of Shakspeare.

A great red granit statue has been discovered ten miles away in the desert near Alexandria, in Egypt. It represents the famous Pharaoh, who was responsible for all the Egyptian plagues, and on one side of it is a statue of a little baby, said to be that of the next Pharaoh, who perished in his rash attempt to drive through the Red Sea. It has been lying there 3,000 years.

A large section of the famous wood of Fontainebleau is about to be felled, and the art papers of Paris are crying out at this attack on the favorit study ground of Rosseau, Diaz, Millet, Corot, and Barye.

The Corporation of the City of London have ordered several pieces of tapestry to be executed at the Royal Windsor Tapestry Works. The panels, which are to be hung in the reception hall of the Mansion House, will represent the following events in the history of the metropolis: Robert Fitzwalter, castellan and chief banneret of London in the reign of Henry III., the city champion, receiving the city banner from the Lord Mayor; the Joust on London Bridge between David de Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, and Lord John de Welles, Ambassador of Richard II. to Scotland; Queen Elizabeth proceeding to open the Royal Exchange; and Queen Victoria's reception at the Guildhall upon her accession to the throne. The tapestries will be completed in about two years.

Mr. William Schaus, the well-known art-dealer of New York, who has been seriously ill for some weeks past, is now rapidly convalescing, and it is announced that the long-delayed exhibition of Rembrandt's "Gilder," now in his possession, will be made so soon as he is sufficiently well to superintend it.

The attention of the Pope, who is a great patron of the arts, has been called to the fact that Michael Angelo's famous frescoes in the Sistine Chapel have suffered serious damage of late. The Pope has, therefore, ordered that services shall be held in future in the Cappella Paolina, and the Sistine Chapel cleared of benches, etc., be open to art students and visitors only.

Alma-Tadema's new masterpiece will depict a scene from ancient Pompeii, illustrative of an incident when its fame was at its highest.

Mr. Henry J. Ellicott of Philadelphia will make the plaster cast of the John McCullough statue, which will be a "Virginius" seven feet high. The monument, of which the bronze statue will be the central figure, will be of sandstone or gray marble, and will be finished, at a cost of $20,000, within three months.

The tomb of Washington Irving in the cemetery at Sleepy Hollow has been defaced by relic-hunters for the second time. Some vandal has pried out the piece of mosaic in the Spanish Alhambra on which Irving wrote his name in 1842.

The edition de luxe of the catalog of the art collections formed by the late Mrs. Mary J. Morgan of New York, which will be sold by auction late this month, will be delivered to subscribers this week. The cost of each copy will be $23, and in many ways the volume will be one of the most important art publications ever issued in America. It will contain twenty-nine etchings, by prominent American artists, of the same number of important canvases in the collection; twenty-nine vignets, drawn by Percy Moran, of distinguished artists represented in the collection; and twenty-three photogravures of important specimens of porcelains, ivory carvings, old enamels, lacquers, bronzes, silverware, and cameo-glass, besides an admirable photographic reproduction of the famous "Peachblow" or "Crushed Strawberry" vase.

HER HUSBAND A MORMON.

THE BURROUGHS DIVORCE SUIT—HER BETTER HALF PREACHES FOR TWENTY YEARS AND THEN BECOMES A POLYGAMIST.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 6.—Quite a story is attached to Mrs. H. A. Burroughs. Her husband is a brother of C. C. Burroughs of this city, and for some twenty years he was a minister, preaching the doctrines of Adventism. Their home was at Waterloo, Ia. About a year ago he found that he could no longer make a living out of his ministerial office, and thereupon he cast about in his mind for some new field of labor. The attractions of Salt Lake City, with no restrictions as to the number of wives, were presented to him. He thereupon deserted his wife, leaving her penniless, and went to be a Mormon, locating in the centre of Mormondom as a renowned physician. In straitened circumstances, without home or means of earning a livelihood, the wife came to Rockford, where her brother-in-law gave her a home and provided for her immediate necessities. The Mormon husband has commenced suit for divorce, it is said, and therefore the wife determined to forestall him, and consequently brought action in our courts.

MISSION OF MAUD S.

In order to fulfill her mission as an advertisement for Mr. Bonner and the New York Ledger, it was necessary for Maud S. to do one of two things—either to beat her record or to go lame. She couldn't do the first and she has done the second. We shall now have any number of interviews with Mr. Bonner on sprains, spavins, ringbones, and the like.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE BEST BOOKS.

Pall Mall Gazette: Sir John Lubbock, in giving the Workingmen's College the list of the best hundred books, which we republished last week, added that "if a few good guides would draw up similar lists it would be most useful." Sir John Lubbock, like every other seriously-minded and methodic man, had "often been astonished to see how little care people devoted to the selection of what they read." Ars longa, vita brevis; and with a view of neutralizing the inequality we determined to take up Sir John Lubbock's hint, and to invite all the best guides in England to place their clews to the bewildering labyrinth of books at the service of the public. With this object in view we applied to several leading English men and women in all the different walks of life. We sent them Sir John Lubbock's list and asked them for such comments thereon as would help the present generation to choose their reading more wisely. We have received a very large number of answers, and we shall lay before our readers all of them that seem to us to be of sufficient public interest. We begin our publication with the letter of the Prince of Wales, whose interest in the advancement of letters is well known, and who has courteously found time to answer our questions:

H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

SANDRINGHAM, Norfolk, Jan. 15.—My Dear Sir: I am desired by the Prince of Wales to thank you for your letter of the 11th inst. and to assure you that he appreciates very sincerely the compliment which you are so good as to pay him in requesting him to draw up a catalog of books which might seem to him to be the most conducive to a healthy mental state. The application is one which would require much time and thought to answer satisfactorily, and the Prince speaks, therefore, with diffidence when he expresses an opinion that the list suggested by Sir John Lubbock could hardly be improved upon. His Royal Highness would, however, venture to remark that the works of Dryden should not be omitted from such an important and comprehensive list. I beg to remain, yours truly,
FRANCIS KNOLLYS.

JOHN RUSKIN'S LIST.

BRANTWOOD, Coniston, Jan. 13.—My Dear Sir: Putting my pen lightly through the needless—and blottesquely through the rubbish and poison of Sir John's list—I leave enough for a life's liberal reading—and choice for any true worker's loyal reading. I have added one quite vital and essential book—Livy (the two first books), and three plays of Aristophanes ("Clouds," "Birds," and "Plutus"). Of travels I read myself all old ones I can get hold of; of modern, Humboldt is the central model. Forbes (James Forbes in Alps) is essential to the modern Swiss tourist—of sense. Ever faithfully yours. J. R.

MR. GLADSTONE.

The late Prime Minister is like the Prince of Wales in at least one respect—both of them are men of encyclopædic interests. Mr. Gladstone is well known to be an omnivorous reader, and he was naturally among the first of the judges to whom we forwarded Sir John Lubbock's list. Mr. Gladstone replied by return of post, and on a postcard, as follows:

JAN. 12.—Mr. Gladstone much regrets that it is wholly beyond his power to pay due attention at the present time to the very interesting suggestion of the acting editor.

It is within Mr. G.'s knowledge that one person of vast reading, Lord Acton, has framed a list of this kind, which must derive much value from the singular breadth of the author's knowledge of books. Mr. Gladstone has no idea whether Lord Acton would be disposed to make it known.

The general public were able to form some idea of Lord Acton's "vast reading" from his review of George Eliot's life some months ago in the Nineteenth Century, and we hope to be able in a subsequent article to lay before our readers the information to which Mr. Gladstone so properly attaches such high importance.

THE PRINCIPAL LIBRARIAN OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

From a maker of books it is a near cry to a keeper of them. Few men can know more of the book world than the Librarian of the vast collection in Bloomsbury, and we next give, therefore, the letter which we have received from Mr. E. A. Bond:

JAN. 15.—Dear Sir: You will find it difficult to guide young people in their reading by merely forming a list of good books. Liturature has many branches, each of which has its "best books." Let a young man choose his line of study, and he will find no difficulty in discovering the best authority in it. The result of several persons putting down the titles of books they considered "best reading" would be an interesting but very imperfect bibliography of as many sections of literature. But fuller and better information is already obtainable from printed works—each department having special bibliographies. A choice selection of them is placed in the Museum reading-room, and a list of them has been printed. A very useful guide to books in English is supplied by a work published in New York, entitled "The Best Reading," by A. B. Perkins, 8 vo., 1877. The books are classified in the form of an index to subjects. "The English Catalog," with indexes for periods of years from 1837, published by Sampson Low & Co., is also extremely useful for ascertaining what has been written on any particular subject. But the beginner should be advised to read histories of the literature of his own and other countries—as Hallam's "Introduction to the Literature of Europe," Joseph Warton's "History of English Poetry," Craik's "History of English Literature," Paine's History, and others of the same class. These would give him a survey of the field, and would quicken his taste for what was naturally most congenial to him. Excuse me if in these general remarks I have evaded doing what you specially desired. Yours faithfully,
EDWARD A. BOND.

LADY DILKE (MRS. MARK PATTISON).

Our first installment of letters would not be complete or representative without the opinion of some Englishwoman of letters. We give, therefore, the following reply which we receive from one of the most accomplished and learned women of the day:

NO. 76 SLOANE STREET, S. W., Jan. 18.—Sir: You ask me to send you a list of books on the lines indicated by Sir John Lubbock in his recent lecture at the Workingmen's College, but allow me to say that in printing his selection you took occasion to make some very excellent criticisms on the wisdom of "placing before workingmen, or any men whatever, such a vast and heterogeneous course of study," and with these criticisms I entirely agree. To be in a position to properly understand and appreciate the works on Sir John's list, I undertake to say that one must have spent at least thirty years in preparatory study, and have had the command of, say, something more than a thousand other volumes. And I would ask, further, is this list to be considered simply as a list of literary masterpieces, or is it to present us with a general scheme of knowledge? Any list of books constructed with a view to the realization of such an ideal as the latter would be a very complicated affair, to be rewritten, too, with each succeeding year. If, on the other hand, we are only citing masterpieces of literature and making fancy libraries which may illustrate the extent and catholicity of our own tastes, our task is easier, and on the rough lines laid down by my friend Sir John Lubbock we may put together a very pretty one.

In order to spare your space I will not, however, proceed to recapitulate the great names, such as Homer, Dante, Virgil, Shakspeare, etc., which are down on Sir John's list, and about which there can be no question. I will only mention a few books which seem to me (taking European letters only into consideration) to cry for notice, and which might profitably replace the works of Southey, Longfellow, Emerson, Bulwer Lytton, and others of minor note to whom Sir John has given equal place. I would add, for instance, Epictetus and Boethius to the non-Christian moralists, and St. François de Sales' "Traité de l'Amour de Dieu" to the books on devotion; to the classics, Pliny's Letters; under history I would mention De Commines' "Memoirs," Clarendon's "Rebellion," Schiller's "Thirty Years' War"; Hobbes' "Leviathan" should not be forgotten in philosophy, and, making a subdivision for political philosophy, I would cite Machiavel's "Prince," Bodin's "Republic," Hooker's "Ecclesiastical Polity," Montesquieu's "Considérations sur la Grandeur et la Décadence des Romains," Bolingbroke, and Mme. de Staël's "L'Allemagne." The famous "Familiar Colloquies" of Erasmus should surely find a place under literature, nor should Tasso, Petrarch, Leopardi, Boccaccio be forgotten. Racine, Mme. de Sevigné, Le Sage ("Gil Blas"), La Bruyère, and La Rochefoucauld, Rosseau ("Confessions"), and Mrs. Craven's "Le Récit d'une Sœur," are as typical illustrations of the French genius as Molière. No readers of German can omit to make acquaintance with some of Schiller's plays and with Lessing's "Laokoon"; while among the English poets I would claim notice for Chaucer, for Dryden ("The Hind and Panther"), for Gray ("Elegy" and Sonnet), and for Collins ("Ode to the Passions"). Walton's "Lives" must not be forgotten, nor Johnson's "Lives of the Poets," and among the essayists surely Bacon, De Quincey, and Charles Lamb must have a place. Ruskin's "Crown of Wild Olive" and "Sesame and Lillies," Pater's "Marius the Epicurean" may also be added under this head, and no list of modern fiction which omits Spielhagen ("Problematische Naturen"), Hugo ("Notre Dame de Paris," "Les Travailleurs de la Mer"), and Balzac ("La Recherche de l'Absolu," "Eugénie Grandet," and "Peau de Chagrin") can be reckoned complete. I am, sir, your obedient servant,
EMILIA F. S. DILKE.

THE CRESCENT CITY.

MOODY AND SANKEY TO INVADE THE CREOLE CAPITAL THIS WEEK—CHANGING AN OLD LANDMARK—THE HON. CHARLES GAYENE'S LECTURE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Moody and Sankey are coming here next Tuesday. There was considerable difficulty in finding a place to hold the revival. The Washington Artillery Hall was finally settled upon. It is the largest in the city, but there is speculation as to its acoustic fitness. Patti thought it a fine place to sing in, and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee had no trouble in filling it with his voice. Père Hyacinthe, however, complained that his voice was lost in it, and in some parts of the hall commands come back on the drill-master. Experiments as to the platform location are in progress. The hall will seat 2,500. Christian people want to hear Moody, while Moody wants to Christianize the wicked. A compromise was effected by dividing the tickets between the two classes. The colored people are also included in the revivals. Dr. Aitken, the English missioner, gave them a special service and invited them to his meeting. Moody will devote several services to them.

Another New Orleans landmark has lost its identity. The old mortuary chapel of St. Francis, corner of Rampart and Conti streets, is being demolished and rebuilt. This chapel was located in 1822 by Father Antoine, of blessed memory, in the outskirts of the town as a convenience to those who desired the offices of the church bestowed upon their dead, yet, at the same time, as a concession to the sanitarians of the period, who objected in years of pestilence to dead bodies being carried through the city streets to the cathedral in the heart of the town. It was located on the edge of the ancient cemetery of St. Louis, though now they are separated by a wide thoroughfare. It outlived its usefulness as a mortuary church, and a few years ago was transferred to the Rev. Father Manoritta for the use of the Italian Glory. He is having it rebuilt to suit the modern necessities of his growing congregation.

The Hon. Charles Gayene is delivering a series of public lectures on local historical matters. He lectured Thursday night on a sugar plantation of the olden time, and described in vivid language the sugarfields of his grandfather, Etienne Bore, where the Exposition Building now stands, and on which the first sugar ever made in Louisiana was produced, in 1794. Mr. Gayene is a remarkable specimen of Creole vitality. He is over 80 years old, but read his manuscript without glasses, and has the voice and vigorous manner of a man of 50. He was United States Senator in 1835, and was eminent as a historian on both hemispheres before most of living men were born. He possessed great wealth once, but is poor now, and in his old days is compelled to subsist by his pen.

A new corporation known as the Boston Fruit Company has lately put on a line of steamers to run between this port and the Bay Islands and Central America in the tropical fruit trade. So far the venture has met with great success.

Trains which have been laid up in the snow-banks between here and Cairo are coming in this morning. The Chicago mail for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday was received today.

IRONY.

I set my gaze upon two stars that seemed
So close with interblended rays they beamed
 From the deep dome of Night.

"O, happy stars," I thought, "like this to bide
 Through mighty changes, lovingly withstood,
Companioned each of each, whate'er betide,
 In silver sisterhood!"

Then sounded to my sense, from Night's great thrall:
 "On either star, this hour, there dwells a race
That knows not if the other lives at all,

BUTLER ON PAN-ELECTRIC.

He Holds that Garland Is Open to No Criticism as Cabinet Officer or Citizen.

Only a Prosecution by the Government Competent to Set Aside a Patent Obtained by Fraud.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—[New York Herald.]—Gen. Butler was called upon today by the Herald correspondent at his law-office in the Hub. His attention was directed in the course of a conversation to the Garland-Pan-Electric scandal. When asked if he would be willing to give the public his views on the relations of a Cabinet officer with the Bell telephone matter, he promptly answered: "It would certainly be politic for me not to do so." In reply to the query, "Why so?" the General continued: "Because I have very decided opinions on that matter, and they are adverse to two very large corporations—the Bell Telephone Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company—who are interested in the use of the same patents. I am, of course, counted in the opposition to the present Administration, and am not called upon to defend any acts or measures of it or of any member of it. Still, I regret to see, and by my silence seem to indorse, what appears to me a grievous injustice and wrong which is now being inflicted on the officers of the Government who have had charge of the Bell telephone affair about which you inquire."

"Yes, too unanimous to one who thinks their unanimity is very suspicious."

REMARKABLE UNANIMITY OF OPINION.

"I can do that by an anecdote. When I was running for Congress on the Greenback question against the bankers of Massachusetts, as they believed—when, in fact, I was doing the best I could for them, as they have since learned—I was surprised to find the religious press in Boston very generally taking sides against me. Being much younger and somewhat more inconsiderate then than I now am, I wondered at the cause of the apparent affinity between religion and anti-Greenbackism, until afterward I got an affidavit of one of the managers of the opposition campaign that he paid the most orthodox of those religious newspapers $300 for its opposition. Then my eyes were opened, and have remained opened ever since. When the Boston Herald, the Journal, the Advertiser, the Post, and the rest—Tray, Blanche, and Sweetheart, little dogs and all—bark at a man continually, persistently, and with a snarl, there must be some substantial reason for such confluence and effluence of opinion. Therefore, with due deference to your profession, and at some personal risk, I will give you my views if you wish.

MR. GARLAND'S POSITION.

"Well, then, it is claimed by the newspapers that the Attorney-General should resign, or, failing so to do, the President should remove him to clear his Administration from a scandal alleged to have been brought upon it by that officer. What is that scandal? Is it that he was an original subscriber for stock and a director in a Southern telephonic and telegraphic enterprise as far back as 1882, and that he had for taking such part in that enterprise received a large quantity of stock at a merely nominal value; that that stock was to be brought up to a real value by the enterprise, ingenuity, intelligence, and good business qualities of its promoters; that its value was founded upon a series of patented inventions in electrical science and their use and adoption; that the inventor and scientific man of the company, who started the enterprise, Mr. Rogers, had been for many years the electrician at the Capitol, appointed as such because of his known scientific qualifications, and kept in place as such because of his knowledge and expertness in the use of electrical apparatus? Of necessity such a man's associates and acquaintances would be among the members of the two Houses, and he would naturally apply to them rather than to other classes of business-men to take part in such enterprise; and he would naturally desire to retain the services of an able lawyer who some years afterward became the official head of the bar of the United States. Is there anything wrong in this? But, it is replied, this gentleman was a Senator of the United States. Yes; and is a Senator of the United States to have no other business relations? A large portion of the Senators are very large representatives of business wealth. They are elected with such business complications, and they must vote in regard to legislation which affects their business interests. When I was in Congress a majority of the House was composed of officers and stockholders of National banks, and, upon the occasion of a vote being taken affecting the ballots, I called the Speaker's attention to the rule of the House that no man could vote upon a matter in which he was personally interested; but it was ruled that, as they were only interested in the business of the country, they must legislate concerning the business of the country—they must vote in regard to it, although their votes might make thousands of dollars difference to them individually; and those virtuous newspapers, or such of them as were virtuous, then made no murmur even against this condition of things, and I was beaten.

ASKING NO LEGISLATION.

"But in the case of this company there could be no legislation to aid it or harm it. Certainly none was then proposed. The conduct of the Attorney-General in taking these shares has been likened to that of the lamented Garfield, Colfax, and others who took the Crédit Mobilier shares. But the difference was there was then, and must for years be, legislation required in regard to the Union Pacific Railroad, of which the Crédit Mobilier was the construction company, and that company was at the time paying large dividends. I fail to see any likeness between the two cases. And I fail to see, as the country fails to see, any wrong in Senator Garland's becoming a director or stockholder in that company, and the fact that he had done so was both well and publicly known many months before he was appointed Attorney-General, and no man whispered his membership of the Pan-Electric Company, if that is the name of the concern, as a reason why he should not be appointed or confirmed by the Senate. No one of these incorruptible sentinels on the watchtower of Liberty called attention to, or had an editorial line upon, his conduct in taking the stock.

ACTION OF THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

"What has he done since? It is admitted that he has done nothing, but that in his absence the Solicitor-General—the man who takes his place when he is away—attempted to do a great wrong. Well, what was that? He was informed—and an affidavit was brought before him among other things—that a man had bribed a Patent-Office official to open a sealed caveat and give him information by which he filed a claim to be the first discover of an invention or art which when patented was claimed to be worth untold millions. If a Government officer was tampered with in that way ought not the Department of Justice to see that thing set right? If it is true—of which I know nothing and express no opinion—that the claimed inventor of the Bell telephone bribed a United States officer to steal for him another man's invention, and he as receiver, with full knowledge of the theft, appropriated it to himself and sold it for many thousand dollars, who shall say that, by every means that the law permits, such a man shall not be brought to justice? And, in the language of the Constitution, 'if probable cause' was found by any officer, was he not bound to proceed? Did the Solicitor-General find probable cause to believe this accusation to be true? Yes.

INVESTIGATION IN THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

"But the claim is that he was so under the influence of the Attorney-General that he misjudged. Is that so? The Attorney-General, when he came home, at once had the question submitted to the Department of the Interior—which, I think, had no business with it, but that is of no consequence—and the Secretary of the Interior, after hearing arguments by the week and reading printed testimony by the thousand pages, decided that there was probable cause for the institution of prosecution, and advised that the suit should be brought in the proper form.

PRIVATE SUIT NOT COMPETENT.

"But the cry is, Why not let some private person bring such a suit? Why does the United States interfere? The answer is a very plain one: that no private person can bring a suit for the purpose and with the result of setting aside the wrong done by this patent, but the United States. True, if a person is sued by the Bell Telephone Company, claiming under that patent, the defendant may plead among other things that the patent has been surreptitiously and unjustly obtained for that which was in fact invented by another, who was using reasonable diligence in adapting and perfecting the same (United States Revised Statutes, Sec. 4,920). But, if that issue was determined in that suit, being simply a question of fact, it would not determine any other suit, nor could the patent be set aside by any power because of that finding; and, whatever private citizens might do, and however apparent and certain the theft was made, the patent would still preserve its existence, and by appealing to the Supreme Court the holder would be enabled to fight the many suits during the lifetime of the patent."

"Numbers of them. I, myself, had one brought a few years ago. A man got an old patent reissued, by which he claimed that he held a patent which controlled the blowing up of all oil-wells, and he got a Judge to grant him an injunction in one suit, which was not well contested; and then the comity of the courts, following that one Judge until the Supreme Court should decide the question, gave him many injunctions, and he brought over 5,000 suits in several States."

"What is blowing up an oil-well?"

"It is this: You have bored your oil-well down to the rock, which yields oil in small quantities; you suppose there is more lying about in the rock than flows into your well—say 600 feet or more down in the earth; you drop down a nitro-glycerine, dynamite, or other cartridge and explode it at the bottom of the well, and that blows up the rock, tears it to pieces, opens the seams in the neighborhood of the well, and allows the oil in the rock, if any there be, to flow into the well and be pumped out. It would cost some millions of dollars to try all these suits, and the oil-men were being oppressed by this patent. Being retained in behalf of those men, I looked around for a remedy, and represented to the then Attorney-General the condition of things. After examining into it he directed a suit to be brought so as to set aside the patent and try one case instead of 5,000. That being done, the whole matter was adjusted. I suppose if there is one thing better settled than another it is that a patent issued by the United States, whether for an invention or for land or anything else, cannot be set aside except in a suit brought by the United States. Therefore I say that, if there is any evidence that this invention was stolen—and there is one man who swears it was, and that he was bribed to give it—then I would like to hear from somebody a reason why the people should not be protected by the Government from such official and other corruption, and from being taxed by millions for the use of the greatest and cheapest means of transmitting intelligence? It will be a sorry day in this Republic if it turns out that through the use of newspaper or other power, and because of their money, a great corporation can cause the President of the United States to discharge a member of his Cabinet, or a member of it to be driven to resignation, as a first step to prevent the trial in a court of justice of so great a wrong, whoever may have committed it.

MR. GARLAND WILL NOT RESIGN—THE BELL TELEPHONE TRIAL TO GO ON, AND THE GOVERNMENT TO HAVE ABLE COUNSEL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 4.—[New York Herald.]—It can be said on what seems good authority that Attorney-General Garland will not resign; that the Bell telephone trial will go on, and will begin within a few weeks; that nobody pretends to know how it will result; but that the President intends to have the Government represented by very able counsel.

CHURCH PROPERTY.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—On the return of Bishop Borgess to this city a day or two ago it was announced that he would soon begin a legal action against Father Kolasinski, the deposed priest of St. Albertus' Parish, to eject him from the occupancy of the parish residence, which adjoins the church. This announcement has served to stir up the Polish church troubles, which had nearly died out, and the adherents of Kolasinski declare they will begin a counter-action to dispossess the Bishop of the church property. M. B. Breitenbach, a well-known attorney here, has been consulted in reference to the matter and has given it as his opinion that the church can be taken away from the Bishop in a court of equity.

This has raised a question as to the title of the Bishop to the Catholic church property in this diocese. In 1853 the Legislature of Michigan passed an act empowering the Bishop of Mackinaw, the only Catholic Bishop in the State at that time, to hold in fee simple all the church property in his diocese. Under this act the Church of St. Albertus is one of the numerous possessions of Bishop Borgess. There has been little occasion in this State to discuss the question, as it is conceded that the temporal affairs of the dioceses of Michigan relative to the holding of church realty have been uniformly well and conscientiously administered. This absence of discussion is the cause of a widespread misunderstanding among the people, and even among the Catholic laity, of the actual powers and rights of the Bishop in the premises. The title of all church property is vested absolutely in the Bishop, not in his official capacity, but in his private name and person, and he holds it for his "heirs, executors, and assigns forever."

In 1867, however, the Legislature passed a law that provides that whether the trust purpose for which the property is conveyed to the Bishop is expressed in the deed or not it may be implied from the circumstances, and if it is so implied the property shall be deemed to be held in trust for the uses for which it was granted. It is therefore held by good legal authority that the purpose for which property is conveyed to a Catholic Bishop may be proved by parol evidence, notwithstanding the general statute which abolishes parol proof of implied trusts. Others claim, however, that the act in question is in violation of the State Constitution, which says that no corporation shall be created by special act.

Fresh legislation in this matter will undoubtedly be asked at the hands of the next Legislature. It is said that the system of holding Catholic church property in this State differs from the system prevailing in other States, and there is believed to be a growing dissatisfaction with the existing arrangement. If the Kolasinski faction forces the St. Albertus Church matter to an issue in the courts, as they vehemently threaten to do, some very interesting questions will be raised to puzzle the Judges.

A TRAVELING DOCTOR.

HE GOES ABOUT THE STATE PRESCRIBING FOR SICK PEOPLE WHEN HE HAS NO LICENSE SO TO DO.

FREEPORT, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—On complaint of Oliver K. Meyers of Rock Grove, Stephenson County, John M. Wallingford, alias Dr. J. O. Walters, apparently about 50 years old, was arrested and placed in the lockup a Belvidere today by Sheriff A. T. Ames of Boone County, where he will remain until Monday, when he will be brought to Freeport by Sheriff Stewart of this county for the further disposition of his case. Wallingford is a traveling doctor. He came into Stephenson County last fall. His plan of operating was generally to go abroad among the poorer classes of people in the country, but never in the city, looking up those who were suffering from heart-disease, rheumatism, and various other chronic troubles, and, after making an examination of their cases, he would prescribe for them. After leaving the patient a quantity of medicine he would collect a fee of from $5 to $100 and go away, promising to send them another supply of medicine, apparatus, or something, but it is said that would be the last heard or seen of the doctor. He said he was about to erect a hospital at Rockford, near where he had a large stock farm. It is said he has operated extensively for the last half-dozen years through the States of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan. He is a salesman for a wholesale drug house, and has a wife with whom he lives at Belvidere. Inquiry of Dr. Rauch of the State Board of Health at Springfield reveals the fact that he has no license to practice.

GLANDERS IN MACON COUNTY.

DECATUR, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Several cases of glanders in its most aggravated form have just been discovered in Pleasant View Township, this county. Surgeon Bivans visited the farm of Thomas Gabriel and found a number of his horses affected with the disease, four of which were killed yesterday. Seven other horses belonging to the same farmer show ugly symptoms of the disease. They have been isolated pending the arrival of Dr. Paaren, State Veterinarian, who is expected to be sent to this county next week to see how many other cases there are in the neighborhood. The Gabriel bunch of horses was worth $1,500.

CURS OF HIGH DEGREE.

There is not much heard in Philadelphia of the outcry raised in so many other quarters against that best friend and close companion of man, the dog. The claim is made for Philadelphia that it has the finest, largest, and most valuable collection of non-sporting dogs in the country. It has many fine sporting dogs, too. The kennels of Mr. Moore, including his celebrated dog Berkely, all now in the South, are excelled by few. There are some as fine Irish and Gordon setters here as can be found, but it is especially in the class of household dogs, as mastiffs, terriers, bulls, hounds, and pugs, that this city excels and claims priority. The taste for canine pets does not appear to die or languish, but, on the contrary, was never more vigorous, having received an impetus through instantaneous photography, which enables owners of pets and valuable dogs generally to catch and make indelible their many graceful movements and picturesque postures. Collections of dog photographs are the latest fashionable craze, and no lady with a pug or pet of any account considers she is doing the dear creature justice unless she has its photograph stuck around her parlor and boudoir and adorning the albums of her friends. A great many dog lovers in society, both men and women, do their own photographing and have their dogs posed on chairs, peeping out of kennels, running, leaping, sitting up, begging, and even fighting. It is considered a cute idea to photograph puppies in a litter and then have photographs exhibiting the different stages of each dog's growth.

ARISTOCRATIC PUGS.

Among its celebrated dogs Philadelphia boasts the finest pug in the country, and, next to Comedy, the famous pug of England, the finest, it is said, in the world. "George," the champion pug of the United States, belongs to Mrs. Edwin A. Pue, who has the largest collection of pugs in the city. George's record is remarkable. In 1882, at Pittsburg, he won first prize, and the same year, at the Westminster Kennel Club Exhibition, New York, won in the champion class and also a special class as the best non-sporting dog on exhibition; in 1883, at Washington and Pittsburg, he again won in the champion class, and the same year also again carried off the champion and special prizes in New York. Out of the standard 100 points George scores 94. George's mother, the famous Coquette, was purchased in Wales by Miss Pegram of South Carolina and taken to Paris, leaving Muggins, his father, in Wales. George was one of a number of puppies born in Paris in December, 1878. Crossing the ocean Miss Pegram met Mr. George H. Boker, then Minister to Russia, and presented him George, which she named after him. Mr. Boker, upon arriving in Philadelphia, hearing of the loss that Mrs. Pue had sustained in the death of a valuable skye-terrier, presented the lady with the highly-bred imported pug. Since then George has increased in beauty and celebrity, and there are progenies of pugs numbering hundreds in the fashionable houses of Philadelphia who acknowledge him in the relation of father, grandfather, and great-grandfather. George's pug beauty is of that sort that dog-lovers rave over, and his "mask" is declared by all fanciers particularly fine. He is in appearance and every other way the ideal of a pampered pet. He has always been haughty, arrogant, and full of vanity to a really phenomenal degree. He is valued at $5,000 and has a room and a servant, and lives altogether like the bloated canine aristocrat that he is.

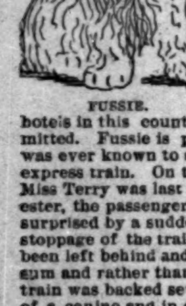

GEORGE.

SOME PRETTY PETS.

Terriers of all kinds continue to be great pets, especially skyes and Dandie Dinmonts. Mr. Frank Thompson, Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has two of the best Dandie Dinmonts in this country, which were sent him as a present from abroad. Mrs. George W. Childs' famous skye "Zip" is a most interesting creature and has at his command probably more comforts and attentions than any dog of low degree anywhere, for he does not make much pretentions to pedigree, but is simply one of the most devoted, obedient, affectionate, gentle, and intelligent of his kind. Mr. Furness has also some good skyes, one of the best being Lord Randolph Churchill. The best-known skye in the world, not excepting King Alfonso's favorit, which was allowed to attend his funeral, is Mis Ellen Terry's famous Fussie, who has traveled with her all over the world, wherever she has been, and been her almost inseparable companion day and night. Though she has changed husbands frequently she has clung with tenacious constancy to Fussie. While in Philadelphia Mr. Irving missed a rehearsal because Fussie, who is a frequent companion of his walks, disappeared for a time up an obscure alley and he did not dare face Miss Terry without her favorit. The great English actress has repeatedly refused to go to the best hotels in this country unless Fussie was admitted. Fussie is probably the only dog that was ever known to stop an American railway express train. On the way to Syracuse, when Miss Terry was last in this country, near Rochester, the passengers of the express train were surprised by a sudden whistle, followed by the stoppage of the train. Fussie had accidentally been left behind and in consideration of a large sum and rather than lose the entire troupe the train was backed several miles for the caprice of a canine and in order that Miss Terry might regain her treasure.

FUSSIE.

Poodles are as attractive as ever to many people and some "sweet," white, woolly, French poodles are owned in Philadelphia. Mrs. Rush S. Huidekoper has a very good one. A very fine specimen is owned by Mrs. Rindge. Mrs. Dunbar Price has a French poodle that is considered one of the best of its kind. The reigning fashionable dog in England just now, however, is the black poodle, and the correct thing is to have the animal clipped close about the legs and body. Miss Luck Work of New York, whose father owns Dick Swiveller, has two black poodles, each with numerous silver bangles on their legs, which accompany her in all her walks. Some Philadelphia ladies have also caught on to the wrinkle of having bangles on their dogs' legs.

NOBLE ST. BERNARDS.

There are some dogs that command general respect, and by force of genuine merit excite admiration from all. Such are the St. Bernards, Newfoundlands, and some of the finer mastiffs, of which there are so many in Philadelphia. There are no kennels of St. Bernards here, but at Tom's River, N. J., there is one of the largest kennels in the country, which includes one of the old monastery veterans described in the lines:

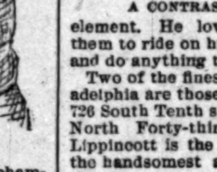

Holy St. Bernard! succor the dying,

And now he in triumph is rapidly bearing

HECTOR.

The largest and finest rough-coated St. Bernard in Philadelphia, also said to be excelled by few in this country, is the famous Hector, belonging to P. Tobin, and familiar to all the members and frequenters of the fashionable Philadelphia Riding Club stables. He comes from Mr. Lorillard's imported kennels, and is descended from the famous dog Monk. He is 3 years old, is thirty-one inches high, and weighs 164 pounds. So far as known he is the biggest dog in town. Joe Emmet, the actor, claimed to have the biggest and the littlest dogs in the country, and his St. Bernard was thirty-two inches high. Though he would fight a dozen burglars, Hector would not hurt a baby. He is as big and strong as a lion, as active as an antelope, as playful as a kitten, and as gentle as a lamb. No praise could be too superlative for this noble fellow. His intelligence is quite human and he appears to understand all that is said to him. He is the guardian and custodian of the valuable thoroughbred horses of the Philadelphia Riding Club and understands his responsibility. If any one who does not belong to the stable comes in at night, as they have occasionally, Hector goes quietly about without the least noise and sees what they are up to. Then they are in custody, from which there is no escape until some one in authority arrives. Once in he will not allow them to leave. On the first attempt he stands in front of them and barks; if they persist he seizes their clothes and throws them down. He was never known to bite any human being and is as indifferent to the petty annoyances of other dogs as an elephant would be of a flea-bite. He knows all the horses and their peculiarities and never goes near the ones that kick in their stalls. If anything is the matter with a horse during the night Hector is greatly disturbed and arouses the stablemen. He has special favorits and is particularly fond of ponies. Mr. Tobin has refused an offer of $5,000 for him. He is not only intelligent, and brave, and affectionate, and gentle, but he is also honest and obedient. He has never had to be corrected twice for a fault. He frequently makes regular visits to houses and stores where he is welcome and where some dainty morsel always awaits him, but he has been left in charge of a butcher-shop for hours and not only touched nothing himself but allowed no one else to. He is a good Catholic dog and never eats meat Friday. When the snow comes Hector nearly goes wild and runs and dashes into it and rolls and buries himself in his favorit element. He loves children and will allow them to ride on him, maul him, pull his tail, and do anything they like.

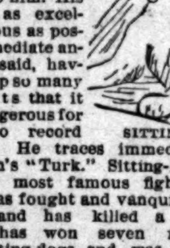

A CONTRAST.

Two of the finest Newfoundland dogs in Philadelphia are those owned by Mrs. McCully, No. 726 South Tenth street, and Miss Budd, No. 609 North Forty-third street. Mrs. J. Dundas Lippincott is the happy possessor of one of the handsomest and most valuable mastiffs in the city.

THE HERO OF MANY BATTLES.

Sitting-Bull is one of the most notable dog characters in town. Big and burly ruffian as he is, he is, nevertheless, as playful as a kitten, and to all the human and brute creation, except the fighting dogs, as gentle as a lamb. He belongs to an active member of the Union League, who is tenderly attached to him. His pedigree is as excellently villanous as possible, his immediate ancestor, it is said, having chewed up so many antagonists that it would be dangerous for credibility to record the number. He traces immediate descent from Tugman's "Turk." Sitting-Bull for years has been the most famous fighting dog in town. He has fought and vanquished at least fifty dogs and has killed a number of them. He has won seven regular battles with fighting dogs, and was matched and fought the celebrated Jack, ten pounds heavier than he was. The battle lasted over an hour and a half, when the owner of Jack gave up the fight. When in condition he weighed about twenty-eight pounds, but he is now older and quite fat. No bull-dog with an undershot jaw could stand before this gladiator in his day, and the only dogs that could be pitted against him were regularly trained bull-terriers. Sitting-Bull is a mass of scars and is the very picture now of a veteran. He does not fight any more and promenades daily in a dignified way, as if he had never been acquainted with the pit. His spirit and grit remain, however, and he has to be continually muzzled in public.

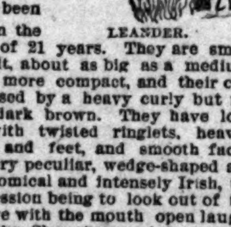

SITTING-BULL.

NOTED BULLS.

There are some fine bulls and bull-terriers owned in Philadelphia. Mr. Walter R. Furness has several. He has one bull-dog that manifests a most amazing singularity. This animal is by instinct a woman-hater, cherishing the most violent hatred of everything in crinoline. Ordinarily the dog is gentle and approachable to strangers, if they are men or boys. Upon sight of any girl or woman the dog becomes almost uncontrollable, and if allowed would tear them to pieces. Mrs. Moncure Robinson, one of the most beautiful and fashionable women in Philadelphia, has a very good bull-dog of which she is very fond. Mr. Alfred Norris has also a very good bull, and Mr. James P. Scott is also the owner of a fine one. There are, however, few finer heavy bulls in Philadelphia than Mr. Furness' wall-eyed, bow-legged, burly specimen, Bill Sykes, which is ugly, and, therefore, as attractive as anything in that line can be. Bulls are now decidedly fashionable, and the ladies have taken them up as pets. Mrs. Pue, who is an expert on the subject, has just got one from John E. Thayer of Boston, the owner of Thalia, Belessima, and Robinson Crusoe, who has the finest pugs in America, and says they are the coming dog.

THE IRISH SPANIEL.

Among the many dogs coming into popularity of late none are so interesting and striking as the Irish water-spaniel, the credit of whose intoduction to notice as a distinct variety with strong marks of good breeding belongs to Mr. Justin McCarthy. Once over the perils of puppyhood they are a singularly hardy and long-lived race, and a pure-bred Irish water-spaniel has been known to attain the remarkable age of 21 years. They are smart and stoutly built, about as big as a medium-sized setter, but more compact, and their cobbiness is increased by a heavy curly but not woolly coat of dark brown. They have long ears clothed with twisted ringlets, heavily feathered legs and feet, and smooth faces. The face is very peculiar, wedge-shaped and not snipy, but comical and intensely Irish, the prevailing expression being to look out of the corner of one eye with the mouth open laughingly, à la Con the Shaughran. A feature always present is a curious topknot of loose curls. Their eager impetuosity is an appropriate element of their Irish character, and they are very difficult to train or break, but are the best retrievers in the world. The finest specimens of the breed were introduced into Philadelphia by Michael Lafferty, the landscape gardener of Laurel Hill. From this strain came the splendid and interesting dog Leander, which, as the property of Mr. Frank Furness, the architect, who is a most enthusiastic lover of dogs, has attracted attention far and wide. For several summers at Cape May he has been a self-constituted life-guard, swimming along the danger-line during the bathing-hour and preventing women and children from passing it. He loved the water and delighted to jump from the end of the long pier into the deep ocean and swim ashore, especially if he could attack and put to flight a lot of porpoises on the way. Experienced dog-fanciers say he was the finest retriever they ever saw. He seemed to have but one idea while at Cape May, and that was to prevent women and children from going into the ocean beyond their depth. But, alas! the children at Cape May who loved him will not see him again. Leander died suddenly since this article was in preparation. Mr. Walter R. Furness, who raised Leander, and has altogether the finest collection of non-sporting dogs in the city, has also two of a new and very rare sort, the curious dachshounds or badger dogs, with long, low bodies and curious legs. Next to the black poodle they are in Europe the most fashionable of all dogs. Mr. Furness has also some magnificent stag-hounds, including one that is probably unexcelled save by Mr. Bancroft's the historian's dog, which accompanies him in his walks along the cliff at Newport.

LEANDER.

A CANINE DUDE.

No mention of the celebrated dogs of Philadelphia would be complete without Duke, the spotless white grayhound, who for many years was a familiar object on Chestnut street and regular frequenter of the most fashionable places. His proportions were like chiseled marble, and all his movements and postures were studied and statuesque. He lived but for one object—to be admired, especially by the ladies, and cared nothing about men. He was born in Florida; descended from the favorit of an Italian lady of quality, and was reared in the greatest luxury. He had his own couches and rugs, and was washed and fed regularly by a maid. He wore different colored ribbons and had many collars. In the winter he wore an embroidered fleece-lined coat made for him by the most fashionable tailor of the city. He belonged to a lady of a well-known Quaker family living on Spruce street, but with all the attentions lavished upon him Duke was not satisfied with his Quaker surroundings and pined for something more exciting and varied. About a year ago he was temporarily committed to the care of a lady in Germantown, who desired to take him with her for the summer. Incidentally he came to the notice of one of the most prominent and fashionable society women in New York, who took a violent fancy to him, and with the consent of the owner took him with her to her splendid Newport establishment last summer.—Philadelphia Times.

DUKE.

A MONOGRAPH WRITTEN BY HIM CRITICISING THE LEGAL-TENDER DECISION OF THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Boston Herald.]—George Bancroft, the historian, has written and will shortly publish a monograph entitled "A Plea for the Constitution, Wounded in the House of Its Guardians," criticising the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Guillard vs. Greenman, rendered March 3, 1884, which affirmed the right of Congress to impress upon the Treasury notes of the United States the quality of being a legal-tender in payment of private debts. "The opinion thus confidently expressed," says Mr. Bancroft, "if it should be accepted as law would be a death-blow to the Constitution; in defiance of which it not only gives a sanction to irredeemable paper money, but clothes the Government with powers that have no defined limit in its relation to the people." He then traces the history of American bills of credit in the Colonies until they were abolished by Massachusetts and Connecticut, and of the struggle for their suppression in all the Colonies or States to the end of 1786. He shows that it was the deliberate, unalterable purpose of the framers of the Constitution to withhold from the Federal Government the power to enact the promise of money as a legal-tender for debt in money; and that they did withhold the power by very large and most determined majorities. He then reviews the decision of the Supreme Court in detail, denying at once the accuracy of its statement of facts and the soundness of its interpretations of the Constitution and constitutional law. In the last chapter, under the title, "What Is to Be Done?" he says: "The present court should impartially reëxamine what it has uttered, and cannot fail to perceive that it has somewhere fallen into error since it has not failed to contradict itself. It is to be hoped that the court will not persist in an erroneous reversal of the just judgment of its predecessors when better investigation establishes the rightfulness of the first opinion. The people should wait; the court, from its allegiance to the Constitution, must correct its own misinterpretation: 'War begins when the laws are silent.' The lovers of the Constitution have a right to look to the court to establish order by restoring the rule to the highest law. No thought should be admitted of correcting the error of the present members of the court by seeking a change in the Constitution. The Constitution is already as clear as it can be made.

"It is in vain," he says again, "to attempt to enable debtors to discharge their debts by payment of currency of less real value than was intended in their contract; for, as debts are discharged from day to day, it would require a daily increase of the amount of currency in order to give an impartial advantage to debtors, and this would soon render the currency worthless. What the great industrial class needs is a stable currency, so there may be as little fluctuation in industry as possible. To quicken business under an artificial expansion of currency is to pull out the linch-pins from the car of industry before starting it on the race at full speed. The sudden increase of prosperity is followed by still greater decline, and the weight of sorrow must fall on the laborers, who, with their families, will be made wretched by the loss of employment. The only class of men who can be benefited by an uncertain and ever-varying currency are the men who, having too great conceit of their own abilities, and too daring confidence in their own favoring fortune, overvalue the chance of gain and undervalue the chance of loss, and so tempt themselves, or are tempted by others, to enter into engagements beyond their means to fulfill. They constitute an incalculably small part of our population, and by no means the part that possesses the greatest merit or deserves the greatest sympathy, and, when they begin to surmise the delusiveness of their schemes, they are the most ready and the most unscrupulous in their attempts to dictate a policy to the country."

He reckons as the great debtors of the country: First and greatest, the United States itself; second, the banks of circulation and deposit; third, our merchants engaged in foreign commerce; fourth, the railway and canal corporations; fifth, those having the administration of estates under the direction of Probate Courts; sixth, the managers of savings banks. He then says: "The infinitly most numerous class of capitalists in the United States are those who support life by their constant labor." He makes an eloquent appeal for their protection from unstable or debased money. In conclusion he says: "I speak for the poor, who can as little be benefited by an uncertainty in the value of the authorized legal-tender as by the use of varying scales and weights in the market. Nor let my words be unheeded because, after living in many lands and observing the effect of differing customs and laws, I have retired from society and active life. Old age, I well know, has its evils. The senses begin to fail. Memory sometimes seeks in vain to read its old tablets or engrave on new ones. Our thoughts, it has been said, like our children, sometimes die before us. But the man of many years can look before and after, and, seated under the tree of life, enjoying 'sweet rest with full content,' he finds that the leaves which have fallen from its branches have but opened a clearer vision of the eternal stars. The experience of many years may add to early intuitions the large inductions of experience, and so induce a clearer conviction of a superior ordering of human affairs and the overruling influence of general laws. I have written because I am persuaded that a firm and right establishment of the true relations of money to labor cannot be secure in a Republic except by cultivating the mind of its people and diffusing a knowledge of the truth through all its members. The honest illusions of many men must be dispelled, and their minds, ransomed from error, will discern the truth. I may utter these last words of admonition as assurance of that love of country, of liberty, and of truth that has been the rule of my life, and still glows in a heart which must soon cease to beat."

GREEK COMEDY THE "FAD."

Proof that the Stories About Minister Stallo's Boorishness Were Not Imaginary.

Two Very Gorgeous Dinners—Floral Extravagance—How to Be a Successful Dinner-Giver.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Quaker City society has taken to its heart an altogether new sort of pet—to-wit: a Greek play. Many of the matrons and all of the fashionable maidens who a few months ago were entranced, as they would say, by the delight of tennis and foot-ball as played by their college heroes, are just now as deeply engaged in discussing and praising the classic "fad." At an early dance given a night or two ago by one of the most popular women in society not a young girl showed her nose until past 11 o'clock. The only reason was that the "Grecians" were having a rehearsal, and all the younger female element of Spruce and Walnut streets insisted on attending.

The play is the "Acharnians" of Aristophanes. If you will recall your Greek for a moment you will see that it is full of go and action, most of the other comedies of Aristophanes having apparently depended for success on their wit, and, let us say, "Frenchiness." The heroes of last summer's tennis-field are also to be the stars of the classic show and the costumes are being made with such historic accuracy that the muscular arms and legs of the actors will be given free scope. The play has been under study since the first of the year, and the performers are already letter-perfect. The actors are all undergraduates of the University of Pennsylvania, the leading part, that of Dicæopolis, being assumed by Mr. George W. Pepper, a nephew of the provost. The performance will be the first public rendition of Greek comedy in this country, "Œdipus Tyrannus," which was given in Sander's Theatre of the Harvard University in June, 1882, and was the first public performance in the United States of a Greek play of any kind, being a tragedy. The first performance will be at the Academy of Music, May 14, and the second at the same place the following day. The music has been made as operatic as possible, to harmonize with the liveliness of the comedy. Besides historical accuracy, beauty and richness have also been sought in the character of the costumes, and tunics and cloaks will be of costly silk. The scenery, too, is up to the standard set up by the luxurious stage of today. It is now painting by Russell Smith, the noted scenic artist. The play calls for two scenes only—the first that of a street with a distant view of the Acropolis, and the second the interior of the house of Dicæopolis. Every building in the first scene is to be a copy of some gem of Greek architecture. Among other examples of the Doric and Ionic order will be shown the Theseum and the Temple of Ulysses. Mr. Russell, to whom I was talking the other night, says that work is well advanced on the scenes, but as the greatest care is required progress must necessarily be slow.

The performance will be sure to attract a good deal of attention, being only the second of its kind in the country, and the first, indeed, to be given wholly by students, Prof. Kiddie, who assumed the principal part in "Œdipus Tyrannus" at Harvard, being a professional reader and instructor in elocution. Although next to no publicity has been given in the press to the preparations making, yet a knowledge of the matter has got around among the seats of learning, and Mr. Pepper tells me that a large number of letters has been received from college professors and students in various parts of the country, making inquiries and offering suggestions. Admission to the Academy is to be $2 at each performance, and the boxes will be held very high. From the inquiries already made respecting the sale, the academy is likely to be crowded by a very swell audience, most of whom will know small Greek, but will applaud as rapturously all the same as if good Athenian had been transmitted in their families from generation to generation for ages. It is a singular anomaly in Philadelphia that, although the town has no literature or art to speak of, it nevertheless pretends to a great pride in culture in the abstract, and will turn out in squads to support it when Spruce street says so.

MINISTER STALLO'S ECCENTRICITIES.

A private letter from Rome, where there is just now a considerable colony of Philadelphians, gives me an interesting account of the state of disgust into which the eccentric actions of our new Democratic Minister to the Quirinal have thrown the American residents in the Eternal City. Notwithstanding the incredulity displayed on the part of the State Department at Washington as to Mr. Stallo's speaking at the reception at the German Club in Rome of his own country as "barbarous" when compared with the civilization of the Teutons, he nevertheless did, an American who was at the reception writes me, make the observations attributed to him. It has been noted by society at Rome, besides, that at the entertainments given by Stallo himself Germans always largely preponderate, and that very few Americans have been asked to any of them. The Germans, with their thorough appreciation of the virtue of patriotism, are speaking in anything but a complimentary vein of Mr. Stallo, notwithstanding the "taffy" he gives them, and, it is needless to say, the Americans are nettled and angry.

The Catoldi incident has hightened this feeling of indignation and spread it, besides, through all society in Rome. As my correspondent was at the dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Delametta's, where the occurrence took place, his account of it may be taken as unquestionable in point of accuracy. The most ludicrous part of the whole affair lies in the circumstance that the dinner was arranged for to please Mr. Stallo's daughter, who seems to have sounder sense than her father, and who was very desirous of meeting the celebrated Mgr. Cataldi. The cleric had gone to Milan when the invitation was sent him, but, returning while the dinner was in progress, he went directly to the Delametta house. As he sat down at table Mr. Stallo arose and said: "Come, daughter. We cannot stay here," and, followed by his child, he at once left the room. The company lifted their eyes in well-bred amazement, and after the entertainment had closed the Minister's conduct was the one topic of comment. The extraordinary explanation said to have been offered by Mr. Stallo—namely: that he had been directed by the authorities at Washington to have no relations with representatives of the Vatican—does not seem to have satisfied anybody in Rome, since the general sentiment, I am informed, is one of condemnation of his action.

Cataldi doubtless takes it all in his quiet, philosophical way. Chicagoans who have resided in Rome will remember him as a handsome, witty, and polished society priest. He realizes in his grace and tact the common notion of Mgr. Capel. He is to be met with at all the quieter entertainments given in the Eternal City, and is popular alike with both Romans and the foreign residents.

The Pope looks very feeble, but apparently his Holiness is in no danger of dissolution just yet. My correspondent attended the private mass of the Pontiff and was subsequently presented in private audience. The Pope spoke blithely but in a low, tired voice. He made several inquiries concerning and enthusiastic references to the United States. Although his Holiness has a knowledge of English, he spoke altogether in French. Queen Marguerite, who is said to edify the Catholic Americans in the Roman colony by her piety, was to have a levee Feb. 1, at which four or five noted Philadelphians and a few other of our country men and women were to be presented.

TWO GORGEOUS DINNERS.

Apropos of dinners, we have just disposed of two at home whose gorgeousness would surely have caused our Quaker City grandfathers and grandmothers to open their eyes a little wider than ever before at the luxuriousness of their descendants. They were the outcome of a generous rivalry on the part of two sets. The first was given last week by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Coxe. There were ten covers only, but the decorations were exquisit. The cloth was of rare silk plush. A floral piece five feet high, containing only the rarest and costliest flowers and valued, it was whispered, at some $300, occupied the centre of the table. The other floral decorations were in harmony with this, and the floral favors were also rare and costly. The menu comprised every delicacy that could find a place in the dream of a gourmet. The service was very fine, one set of china, used for a single course, being valued at $1,000.

The second dinner took place night before last and surely merited the palm for splendor, if not always for grace. It was given by Mr. Stuart Wyeth, whose father practically retired from active business a few months ago, after having accumulated a million in the retail drug trade. It was much larger than Mr. and Mrs. Coxe's entertainment, covers being laid for twenty-eight. Mrs. Thomas McKean and Mrs. Robert Sturgis, two of the handsomest of the married belles of the Quaker City, matronized it. Their toilets were new and particularly splendid. Mrs. McKean's gown was of rich corded silk, trimmed with lace that was worth its weight in gold. Her husband's millions came to him out of sugar. Mrs. Sturgis wore lilac and lace and a few rare gems. The rest of the company was made up of very young women and very young men, and therein lay its defect, for, while beautiful maidenhood is always a joy, too many "boys" always make a table either a bore or a trough.

Everything that lavish expenditure could do to make the dinner a go was done. Flowers were everywhere on the table and about the room. Seven hundred rare roses alone were used at a cost of $1 each. The favors were roses and fans of costly ostrich plumes. No gas was lighted. Candles burned on the table and in high, gilded candelabra that stood on the rug-strewn floor. I shall not put the menu into print. Types could not do justice to its meaning. The viands were served in rare china and gold plate. One set of Louis Philippe plates, comprising twenty-three pieces, a twenty-fourth having been broken, were valued at $500 each, and Mr. Wyeth's mother, to whom they belong, probably would not part with them at that or any other price. They were bought for her by an agent in Paris, who, it was explained, got them from a noble French family, into whose possession they had come when the Citizen King fled in a hired hack from the back door of the Tuileries as a wild mob burst in at the front. Coffee was served in a cozy suite of rooms above stairs. The service was of massive solid silver, and among the china was another bit of Louis Philippe's collection, a few cups and saucers exquisitly decorated and of great value. The spoons were of solid gold, embossed with the monogram of the family. The dinner cost, I understand, about $1,500. Still it was a bit tiresome.

FLORAL EXTRAVAGANCE.

Wild extravagance in floral decoration that was a note of the season before last, and of one or two before that, but ceased last year, has broken out again. Indeed, more money has been spent in this city for roses this season than probably ever before. A leading florist with whom I was talking tells me that the four or five principal dealers in roses here are doing a business altogether of a million and a half a year. The rarest and costliest flowers have been in constant demand, and extraordinary prices have been asked and obtained. Three or four hundred dollars for flowers for a private dinner has been ordinary, and $600 or $700 not uncommon. One up-town coal millionaire, who gave a dinner of fifty covers at his house the other night, had all the curtains in and about his big dining-room removed and replaced with others, all of flowers, at a cost of $100 each.

The taste of this sort of thing has gone beyond the point of doubt; it is bad, and the fashion cannot last. Some people are made ill by the odor of dying roses, and more than one entertainment has been spoiled by the sudden sickness of a guest whose nerves were unequal to the strain put upon them by the fragrance of decomposition.

Last night at a dinner party where less attention was given to roses than to the selection and harmonizing of the company, I was chatting on the subject of dinners with Daniel Dougherty, who has dined out more than any other man in Pennsylvania, and, perhaps, as much as any other bon vivant in the country, and is known everywhere at home and abroad as a sparkling dinner-table talker.

"A few flowers, my boy," he said, "add to the grace of a table. A mass of them detract from it by making the impression of ostentation on the mind of the beholder. And ostentation always suggests vulgarity, no matter who the people may be. A dinner should be primarily an intellectual feast. O, I know all about the delights of a well-furnished table, but the most delicious viands will pall on one before the three or four hours necessary to a dinner close, unless there is abundance of wit and sparkling talk. Then the company! It must be chosen with a good deal more care and tact than is needed to make a bouquet of roses, let me tell you. And the man or woman who possesses that tact is always a social success, no matter what intellectual qualities they may lack. Now, there is Mr. Blank. His entertainments have made his name known all through the country. The finest people of our own and foreign lands have been delighted to sit at his table. The list of people whom he has entertained would, I venture to say, contain more distinguished names than could be shown by any other host in America, and I have met a good many large entertainers in my time. Yet he lays claim to no great attainments, and he says almost nothing at his own dinners. His success is due nearly altogether to his skill in the choosing of his guests. The great scientist goes because he knows that a congenial artist is to be there, and the great society man snaps up an invitation to attend because he is confident that both the scientist and the artist will please. Thus each guest entertains another, and the host himself quietly lies back and enjoys the products of his tact, and accepts his company's expressions of genuine delight and gratitude. A bright, dinner-table talker, I take it, is, like the poet, born, not made, though cultivation will do a great deal for him, and most of the good talkers whom I have known always primed for special occasions. Speeches at private or semi-private dinners are an abomination. As to speeches at public dinners, I have only two guiding principles, and they are simple enough: Always begin with wit and end with sentiment, and never let your speech be more than ten minutes long." AT THE KAW'S MOUTH.

A MOVEMENT TO FORM A FREIGHT BUREAU—PERSONAL—THE CRAZE FOR CABLE RAILROADS NOW RAGING.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Promoters of the movement to form a freight bureau in Kansas City have not been idle. The sub-committee that visited the pool managers at Chicago are preparing to submit a report to the Board of Trade directors and invited business-men Monday. At Monday's meeting the whole question will be canvassed and some one of the plans proposed will probably be adopted, as the business-men are thoroughly alive to the necessity of an organization to stand between them and the roads.

C. W. Smith, First Vice-President of the Santa Fé Road, accompanied by his wife and son, passed through the city last night en route to New York to attend the meeting of the Transcontinental Association Feb. 12.

The trial of the Henry electric motor for street railroads was made yesterday and worked like a charm. The inventor will endeavor to have a motor introduced on the street-car lines.

The Kansas City Club is becoming more select. The membership fee has been changed from $50 to $100.

The projected St. Louis, Kansas City & Colorado Railway continues to be a mystery. The projectors are as mum as oysters as to who is back of it. At first the Bee Line was thought to be.

The death of D. N. Jarboe of the Keystone Iron-Works removes probably the oldest resident of Kansas City. The Jarboe family came from Nelson County, Kentucky, in 1834. In 1856 Jarboe built the first brick store in the city. He was a devout Catholic. His disease was pneumonia.

Already builders are preparing to begin early and avoid the rush. It is estimated that more than 200,000,000 brick will be laid the coming season.

C. S. Wheaton, Grand Chief Conductor of the Order of Railway Conductors, arrived in the city today from Albuquerque, and will be tendered a reception tomorrow.

Lyman McCarthy, for many years a well-known railroad man of this place, but at present ticket agent of the Baltimore & Ohio at Philadelphia, is visiting in the city, accompanied by his wife.

The weather is pleasant again. Delayed trains are arriving on the Western roads, and the blockade on all is now lifted.

While the cable street-railway fever is on rumor tells of another and tenth one in prospect. One is now in operation. Franchises have been granted to six within the last week. Another is in the hands of a committee of the Council. Petitions are being circulated for the ninth, and a tenth is talked of today by a syndicate, with George Sheidley, a cattleman, at the head of the enterprise. Ex-Gov. Crittenden heads the list in one company to which a franchise has just been granted.

The bold diamond robber who grabbed up a handful of diamonds at a Main street store Wednesday and shot his way to liberty has not yet been apprehended. His three victims, however, it is now thought, will recover. Generous citizens have raised a handsome subscription for the obscure carpenter who endeavored to stop the thief and received a bullet in his mouth. The wounded man has received every attention, and his family is provided for, proving again that the Kansas City public is not ungrateful.

SOCIETY AT THE CAPITAL.

Senator Wade Hampton Violently in Love with Rhea and Making Himself Ridiculous.

Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton and Her Excruciating Court Bow—Visiting Made Easy—Receptions, Teas, Etc.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special Correspondence.]—Washington society people are having another brief respit from social entertainments, and this, too, is caused by another death in the Bayard family. Although Mrs. Bayard had been so little in society on account of her ill-health, all who had been fortunate enough to meet her had a genuine liking for the little, mild-mannered lady. She had but little force of character, and seemed to have little energy even when feeling comparatively well. In seeing her it was easy to understand how her daughter, who had such a strong will, had dominated and ruled the entire household, though at the same time always showing her mother great affection and the most marked respect. Mrs. Bayard had a large family of children—twelve in all, though only seven are now living. Her strength seemed all exhausted, and the severe attacks of neuralgia from which she suffered so frequently were the result. But this winter she had been so much better that her family had every reason to hope that she would live for a long time, and she probably would if it had not been for the sudden death of her daughter, her main strength and support. With the death of her daughter her remaining strength seemed to go out, and her breath stopped without a struggle. When the remains of Miss Katherine Bayard were taken away from the city to Wilmington only one carriage followed the hearse. This was at the earnest request of Mr. Bayard, who wished everything to be done in as simple a manner as possible. Monday, however, when Mrs. Bayard's remains were taken from the home on Highland Terrace down Fourteenth street, through Pennsylvania avenue, to the station, the hearse was followed by five or six carriages. Immediately following the carriage in which rode Mr. Bayard and his family was the carriage of the President. In this carriage were President Cleveland, Miss Cleveland, and Col. Lamont. All of the members of the Cabinet and their families followed in the other carriages. The Postmaster-General was out for the first time in several days. The Cabinet members, with the exception of Mr. Vilas, went over to Wilmington to attend the funeral services in the quaint little church which stands close by the track of the Pennsylvania Railroad. None of the ladies of the Cabinet families went beyond the station in this city.

WADE HAMPTON'S FLAME.

Wade Hampton seems to be struggling to fill the place which was so long held by Gen. Sherman in the hearts of the pretty actresses who come to Washington. Senator Hampton is not quite so general in his attentions to these ladies, but for the one or two whom he admires he goes far beyond any demonstrations which Gen. Sherman ever made. For two or three years Senator Hampton has made himself a laughing-stock for his fellow-Senators by his devoted attentions to Mlle. Rhéa whenever she was in Washington. He has not been content with calling upon her at her hotel or at the theatre, but has taken her to the Capitol and lunched her in the holy of holies—the Senate restaurant—the inner dining-room reserved for Senators and their particular friends. Last spring he followed Mlle. Rhéa with such devotion that she could hardly tear herself away from him at the wings as she went upon the stage, and sometimes it seemed almost as if she would be forced to appear on the stage with the old Senator clinging to her and stumping along on his one leg. He frightened his family very much by proposing to the little actress, but Mlle. Rhéa appreciated him only as an advertising medium and did not care to go beyond that. Last week, when Mlle. Rhéa was here again, Senator Hampton made himself as ridiculous as ever, and even dragged Secretary Lamar after him, though it is not likely it required any great exertion to get the Secretary to run after a pretty woman. At least he has always had the reputation here of appreciating beauty when he saw it. These two old gentlemen occupied a box every evening last week at the National Theatre, and smiled at the actress until the audience would become much more entertained in watching these two officials than in watching the stage. After the performance they promptly ran behind the scenes, and staid chatting with Mlle. Rhéa until her manager, the good-natured Jimmy Morrissey, even lost his temper and said that he was tired of it, and that Mlle. Rhéa was entirely worn out with these attentions. "Why," said Morrissey, "it did very well for a while. It was a good advertisement for my leading lady to have people know that a well-known Senator was in love with her; but the old Senator has got to be such a nuisance that it more than offsets any advertising advantage."

THE COURT BOW.

The most unique thing in Washington society at present is Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton's court bow, or courtesy, which she makes every Saturday at Miss Cleveland's public reception when she is ushered into the Blue Room. Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton—and she must be called by the whole name, a combination of the names of her two husbands, who have died—is rather unique herself. She is very short and round, her back forming a short curve, probably caused by too much practicing of these courtesies. She probably was a blonde in her youth, and now, although her face is thickly covered with fine lines, she wears a blonde wig of curls, which sets out around her head and gives her something the appearance of wearing an entire false head several sizes too large for her body. She dresses in youthful costumes, and is quite distressed when any one calls her daughter Mrs. Berghmann instead of Miss. Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton was a Philadelphia lady, and married many years ago a Secretary of the Belgian Legation in this country. That is where she gets the Berghmann part of her name. She went to Europe with her husband and lived abroad several years, and it is presumed that there is where she got her remarkable courtesy. After the death of her first husband she came back to Washington and married a young man much younger than herself—in fact a very great deal younger than herself. For this display of heroism the young man was to receive the sum of $10,000 a year during his life from his wife, and she added the name of Laughton to the name of her first husband. But, as one well-known society lady said, "The poor young man only lived about ten months and so was not able to draw his first year's salary." He died abroad, where they had gone for his health. Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton then came back to Washington, and, as she is a very agreeable lady and has a handsome home, with plenty of means for entertaining, she is very popular. She and Miss Cleveland seem to have formed a particularly close friendship, and Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton is always invited to stay to tea after Miss Cleveland's Saturday afternoon receptions. But Mrs. Berghmann-Laughton's entrance into the Blue Parlor gives her special prominence this season. She stands back a little in the door leading from the Red Parlor to the Blue Room until the path in front of the ladies receiving is clear. She holds the crowd back until she is ready to make her grand entrée. Then she catches her dress on either side daintily between her little, short fingers, and takes two short steps forward and then two back, bowing almost to the ground, so low that all conversation in the Blue Parlor is hushed and people hold their breath with anxiety to see if she will be able to recover her position. But the little lady knows what she is about, and comes back to a standing position easily and gracefully, and continues these remarkable postures until she has passed the receiving line.

The press club of Washington, called the Gridiron Club—for what reason is not known, as a gridiron seems very remote from anything connected with newspapers—gave their regular monthly dinner last Saturday night at Welcker's. It is the custom of the club for each member to invite one friend to each dinner given by the club. Last Saturday evening a number of prominent public men were among the guests. Speaker Carlisle was the honored guest of the evening. Secretary Whitney was invited, but declined. After the dinner a number of the guests made short speeches. The emblem of the club, a gridiron made of handsome flowers, was the centre-piece in the decorations of the table.

RECEPTIONS, TEAS, ETC.

The week has been moderately quiet socially in consequence of Mrs. Bayard's death, but it would take a great many deaths to put a stop to all gayety in Washington in the middle of the season. Monday Mrs. Miller, wife of Justice Miller, did not hold her regular reception, as she lives in the same square with the Bayards. The wives of the other Justices, however, held their regular receptions. The reception at Chief-Justice Waite's was very largely attended, as Mrs. Dulles, the daughter of ex-Minister Foster, who was recently married, received with Mrs. and Miss Waite. The Foster house, which it will be remembered was partly burned out the night before the wedding, has not yet been wholly repaired, so Mrs. Waite kindly offered her parlors to Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Dulles for their reception. Three teas were given Monday afternoon—one by Mrs. Crowninshield, another by Mrs. Cosby, wife of Pay-Director Cosby, and the third by Mrs. and Miss Voorhees. This latter tea was for young people, and dancing had been announced but was omitted out of respect to Mrs. Bayard. A number of young ladies received with Mrs. and Miss Voorhees. Miss Nicholson, Miss Paul, Miss Loring, Miss Key, Miss Dolph, and Miss Fall were among the number. Mrs. Voorhees wore black embossed velvet. Miss Voorhees, a slender blonde, wore pale blue silk with white lace garniture and a corsage bouquet of pale pink roses. Senator and Mrs. Sherman omitted the second of their Monday evenings on account of Mrs. Bayard's death, and Mrs. Leiter again sacrificed her reception on account of the mourning in the family of the Secretary of State. She will give her reception, at which there will be dancing, the 15th of the present month.

VISITING MADE EASY.

Tuesday the streets were full of carriages, ladies trying to get as far through their long list of visits as possible. A great deal is said about the nonsense of Washington ladies in making themselves such slaves to calling. The fact is that visiting in this city is different from visiting in almost any other city, and is far from being such a task as described. Ladies who have their days at home have a number of young ladies assisting them every week, refreshments are served at nearly every house, and each reception is almost like a card reception. It is not like dashing into a house and finding one lady standing stiff and solemn, saying two words to her, and then dashing out again to another house and going through the same farce. Instead of this one is ushered into a drawing-room where the hostess and her pretty young lady friends are ready to receive, other friends, also visiting, are found, and the afternoon is spent pleasantly and fully as profitably as it would be if the ladies were staying home shut up in overheated houses.

Senator and Mrs. McPherson had issued invitations for a dinner Tuesday evening in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Whitney, but the invitations were recalled on account of Mrs. Bayard's death. The German Minister had also issued cards for a dinner this week, but he, too, postponed the dinner. Maj. and Mrs. Bates gave a small tea Tuesday evening.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Today the ladies of the Cabinet and Mrs. Carlisle did not hold their regular receptions, and Miss Cleveland will not hold her Saturday reception this week. This evening the Wednesday German Club give their second german. The dancers will be limited to fifty couples. Mrs. Robeson, wife of ex-Secretary Robeson, will receive the guests, and Dr. Ruth of the navy will probably lead.

Mrs. Pugh, wife of the Alabama Senator, and Mrs. Conger, wife of the Michigan Senator, will not hold their Thursday receptions this week on account of Mrs. Bayard's death, both ladies being neighbors of the Bayards. Mrs. Logan will have as usual a number of ladies receiving with her. Miss Andrews of Ohio and Miss Gillett of Chicago are visiting Mrs. Logan. Mr. Manning Logan has also been in Washington this week, coming over from New York Saturday evening. The President, of course, postponed the dinner which he was to have given Thursday evening to the Justices of the Supreme Court. This dinner will probably be given next Thursday evening.

Col. and Mrs. John Hay, who have been building one of the handsomest houses in Washington, have arrived in the city, and are making preparations to soon occupy their new home. Their house stands at the corner of Sixteenth and H streets, opposit the quaint old St. John's Church. The house is very massive in style, the foundations being of solid blocks of granit.

Mrs. Marshall Roberts, the wealthy New York widow, has taken the house of Mr. Archibald Hopkins, at the corner of Dupont circle and Connecticut avenue, for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Alley of Boston gave a large reception at their home on Farragut square Tuesday evening. Mr. Alley, who is a very wealthy man, was formerly a member of Congress from Massachusetts, and now spends every winter in Washington.

Col. and Mrs. Ingersoll are expected in Washington this week for a stay of two or three days.

Mrs. and Miss Gouverneur gave a tea this afternoon, which was quite largely attended in spite of the driving snow-storm. NELL.

A DETROIT DIVORCE SUIT DRAGS THROUGH FIFTEEN YEARS OF LITIGATION AND IS YET UNSETTLED.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A remarkable divorce case has just been revived in the Wayne Circuit Court. Way back about the first of the '50s Samuel E. Peters married Mary E. Case. They had two sons, who had just about grown up when Mrs. Peters began to get jealous of her husband. She brought a divorce suit, alleged cruelty, and insinuated other things. Later she discontinued this suit, and all might have ended happily had Peters not broken his leg. When Peters finally recovered he filed a bill for a divorce in which he charged his wife with cutting his broken leg with a butcher knife, refusing to take care of him, and with having deserted him while sick abed. This was Jan. 6, 1871. At the time the divorce was started Mrs. Peters could not be found and the customary legal forms were gone through in her absence. The case was ready and the day set for a final hearing before the court when Mrs. Peters suddenly reappeared and settled down at the old stand. She engaged a lawyer to contest the divorce and started an opposition action.

When each of the contestants had done this they ceased from their legal labors, and after six months' waiting and no trial Peters' lawyer got disgusted and withdrew, and Peters hired another attorney. Still nothing was done. Peters and Mrs. Peters continued to live in the same house at No. 739 Third avenue. Mrs. Peters contracted bills for Peters to pay, and whenever a bill came in Peters would rush down-town and have a notice of trial served. When the time would roll round nothing was done. In 1875 Mrs. Peters' lawyer got tired of this child's play and withdrew from the case, and the wife hired fresh legal talent, giving him a retainer from her husband's purse. Thus for fifteen years this couple made a farce of life and the marriage state, the lawyers even becoming thoroughly disgusted. The other day Peters and his wife had a birthday. He was 70 and she 60 years old. It occurred to Peters that if he was ever going to get that divorce it was about time he did it, or he would soon die without it. Accordingly he returned to his original lawyer and put up another retainer, and the case was put on the docket for call this term.

The parties to this long drawn out divorce case are well known and well off, and with the exception of their conduct in this case are generally respected. It is the longest divorce case in the history of the Detroit courts. The opinion prevails that a decree of divorce will be refused by the court.

THE INNOCENT VICTIMS IDENTIFIED.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 6.—The remains of the two men shot down near Oakdale Junction last Tuesday night under the supposition that they were burglars were identified today as the bodies of George and Frank Taylor of Dayton, O. They were identified by a brother and brother-in-law, and the bodies were conveyed back to their former home. The most intense excitement prevails over the killing, and the three members of the party who fired the shots have been placed under arrest upon a charge of murder. It is not clear that the dead men were the parties sought, and grave apprehension is felt that they were innocent boys. The third individual who was with them when they were killed has not been heard from since, and no trace of him can be found. The Taylors left Dayton to visit Chattanooga.

FEBRUARY.

Rare primrose tints at evening in the west—
Of song-pearls which the joyous robin threads
For charming May. The hedgerows are a-bloom
With snow-wreaths, and the heather's white plume
Slowly the bound Earth to the Sun-spell yields
Wake, heart, and sing! The Spring is near!

AMUSEMENTS.

A Week During Which Theatrical Patronage Has Been Evenly Distributed.

WHAT LAST WEEK HAS SHOWN.

The week just ended has not been a notable one at the theatres. At three places of amusement there has been no change of bill and at the others the new attractions have been of a moderate type. The only thing occurring to disturb the even current of affairs was the mixed performance at McVicker's Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Theatrical Mechanics' Benevolent Association. There was the usual disconnected performance of a benefit, when a number of companies participate, but the work was, as a whole, cleverly done, and was appreciated by a crowded house. The honors were rather carried off by Rosina Vokes with "His Heart Was True to Poll" and by Pat Rooney in his specialties—at least the most applause followed their efforts. The result of the performance must have been satisfactory to the association to benefit which it was given.

The business has been very evenly divided among the theatres. Robson and Crane have played to moderately good houses, the Vokes company has lost little in drawing qualities with a second week, and that successful jumble, "The Tin Soldier," has been presented to at least paying audiences. The Hanlons have done well at Hooley's, and so have the minstrels at the Chicago Opera-House. There has not been and is not likely to be a week in the season showing such impartial division of patronage among theatregoers. The waning charms of some performances given for the second or third week has put them on a plane with less pretentious but fresher attractions.

If anything in the even exhibit merit special mention it has been features of the performances at the Columbia and at Hooley's. Rosina Vokes has made herself decidedly a favorit here, and the song which is the feature of her performance is whistled on the streets. She acts it all in a way which is catching, and she is sufficiently original all the time to hold attention with a remarkably beautiful personage on the stage beside her. Miss Leslie Chester is as charming a personage physically as her photographs have made her, and, oddly enough, she can sing and act a little.

The feature of the Hanlon performance at Hooley's which strikes the observer is that Miss Kate Davis is playing the good spirit. Ordinarily the good spirit in anything like "Fantasma" is represented by a plump and pleasant young person with an attractive figure and with about as much conception of how a benevolent witch or fairy queen should conduct herself as of the geology of the dog-star. Miss Kate Davis surprises the audience by violating all the traditions and giving the part some character. Furthermore it is discovered that this lady, who has chosen usually to appear in characters not particularly attractive to the front row, has a figure of her own which will stand the test of inspection when arrayed in the simple and elegantly-fitting garb of fairy-land.

A DROLL CRUSADE.

The sudden crusade made against the appearance of women in tights is attracting a degree of attention in New York. It is observed that managers interviewed on the subject take views regulated somewhat by the quality of their own attractions. The veteran Samuel Colville, interviewed on the subject lately, thus expressed himself:

"Real burlesque is a humorous story, with a necessity for dramatic action in it—a play in which great actors are needed, and not 'entertainers.' It is as different from what I may call the naked-woman exhibitions as can be. In the days when actors like Mr. Jefferson appeared in it the public went to see burlesque with just as much enthusiasm as they do the spectacular burlesque comic opera that is so popular today. They saw a show, too, that had nothing immoral or indecent about it. Now, in the ballets the girls don't even wear trunks. Why, it's outrageous! What exhibition could be more improper than that given in 'Nanon' and 'Evangeline'? I declare," said Mr. Colville, with a virtuous indignation that did credit to the man who brought over Lydia Thompson's troupe, "I don't think there was ever more solid nudity offered the public to feast on, even when the 'veiled statuary' created so much excitement."

"Do you think the audiences regard them purely as scantily-clothed women rather than artistic things of beauty?"

"O, pshaw! If they simply wanted to see the female form divine in all its perfection they would visit art galleries and look at statuary. Even statuary is suggestive to the majority of people. An artist friend of mine in New Orleans had a copy of the Greek Slave that he offered to show an old lady whose picture he was painting. When he drew the curtains the old lady jumped back in fright and exclaimed, 'O, it isn't finished yet. You haven't got her clothes on!' I always think of that old lady when I visit one of these spectacular burlesques. I expect they will be getting up a Greek Slave ballet next. There are several that could pass for that now and require no change in costume."

"Yet you have given burlesques yourself in which there have been spectacular features, have you not?"

"I certainly have, but they were ballets that could properly be called so and without a suggestion of indecency about them—professional dancers that were under the direction of a balletmaster. No one thinks of blushing at the ballets in grand opera. They are beautiful, graceful, and respectable. I don't see what right to the word 'ballet' the amazons in burlesque and comic opera have. They are simply the chorus without any clothes on worth mentioning."

"Do you think that the legitimate drama is in much danger from the craze for burlesque?"

"To be sure it is. There is just about so much money that is every day spent on amusements. If one theatre gets an undue share the others must suffer. When the 'Black Crook' was running, I believe that it averaged to hurt every other theatre in the city $200 a night. But you can't drive the public—they will go where they want to. It is a mistaken idea to suppose that the stage is the leader. Not at all. It must follow the public taste, and the public now want a light form of entertainment. It lies with the managers whether that form shall be harmlessly amusing or morally degrading. One thing has been thoroughly demonstrated of late years, and that is that Shakespearean productions have got to be given in very small doses to be paying. The experience that Mr. Booth had with his theatre here will prove that."

PROGRAM FOR THE WEEK.

There will be another week of "The Comedy of Errors," and "Fantasma" will hold the board at Hooley's. At the Grand Opera-House "The Tin Soldier" will give way to "Mixed Pickles," which was produced here late last season. Mr. J. B. Polk has made something of a success of his comedy in the East, and has some clever people with him, including Alex. Vincent, Milton Rainford, Willis Page, J. W. Parker, Mrs. Sol Smith, Miss Julia A. Polk, Miss Jennie Christie, and Miss Nellie Sheldon.

Miss Jeffreys-Lewis will tonight for the first time since her return from Australia appear at the Chicago Opera-House. Miss Lewis has not been seen here for nearly three years, when she acted in "La Belle Russe." It is now nearly ten years since she first came to this country, playing the leading female character in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," with King, one of the best of the romantic actors England has sent here. She became a star about 1879, and acted throughout the country with success. Since her return from her Australian tour she has been playing in San Francisco such parts as Camille, Odette, Frou-Frou, and Stephanie in "Forget-Me-Not." She will open in the last-named play.

FOYER GOSSIP.

"The Rajah" runs to good business at the Third Avenue Theatre, New York.

Mestayer-Vaugn's "We, Us & Co." will be at the Chicago Opera-House in a week.

The death of Mr. Alexander Henderson, the husband of Lydia Thompson, is announced.

Arrangements have been made with the Kiralfys for the production of "The Black Crook" at a Chicago Opera-House. The spectacle has been revived by the Kiralfys in San Francisco with great splendor.

Lawrence Barrett's performance in "Hernani" is highly spoken of in New York, and the piece is probably in for a long and prosperous run at the Star Theatre.

Miss Jennie Dutton, Miss Amy Fay, and the Chicago Lady Quartet have engaged to participate in the Russell recitals to take place in Haverly's Theatre soon. Mr. Russell means to have good music in connection with his own work.

Mr. Sidney Woollett will give the second and third of his poetic recitals at Haverly's Theatre next Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Tuesday afternoon Mr. Woollett will read Tennyson's beautiful poem "Elaine," and Thursday afternoon Tennyson's "Guinevere."

MUSIC.

MUSIC VERSUS TECHNIC IN THE PIANO-PLAYING OF MME. HOPEKIRK AND OTHER PIANISTS.

Mme. Helen Hopekirk's fourth and closing recital was attended last Tuesday by a large audience, the door receipts being among the largest ever taken in the city for a piano recital. The sympathetic appreciation and support between the pianist and her audience were quite as marked as upon any former occasion, perhaps more so. Counting the two recitals in Milwaukee, Mme. Hopekirk has played no less than nine recitals in Chicago and vicinity since Dec. 31, six of them in Chicago. All of the programs have been played without notes, and all, it is believed, with a memory nearly or quite faultless. As the repertory has embraced at least sixty compositions, of all grades and schools, this fact is a sufficient certificate to the musical ability of the artist, for no person wanting in genuine musical life could have retained and reproduced from memory so varied a list of works in so short a time—a time allowing but little rehearsal for even the most difficult numbers. In respect to the ease and sureness with which the artist accomplished this part of her work, Mme. Hopekirk takes rank with the best pianists who have been heard here.

A most gratifying circumstance of her Chicago visit has been the warmth of her reception upon her own merits solely, and without any kind of advertitious managerial arts. In this respect her success has been phenomenal, particularly inasmuch as her playing is wanting in certain qualities of technical perfection which other artists have taught us to expect. Of these later. Her success and personal popularity in Chicago rest upon an honest liking for her as a simple, unaffected, and unpretentious personality, and an artist of characteristic and valuable gifts. Her unconventionality in dress and manner is the expression of a quiet intention of having her own way—a way which her unassuming manner renders inoffensive. As to mental gifts, Mme. Hopekirk is well endowed. She is a person of wide reading, of sympathetic intelligence, and genuine good sense. These points not only appear in her conversation; they come out in her playing, her readings being sensible rather than sensational. The peculiarly musical intelligence of her readings is due to her possession of what the Germans call phantasie, a spontaneous activity of mind—namely: in turning over, recombining, and originating musical material. If her playing did not testify this quality in unmistakable terms, her compositions are so varied and so fresh as to leave no doubt upon the subject. It is this spontaneous quality in her playing, its sounding as if it might be the expression of her own thinking, that renders it so attractive to the average hearer. In this respect she is to be counted among the foremost pianists who have been heard in this city.

The musical quality of her playing was often coexistent with certain technical shortcomings clearly perceived by many and more or less felt by all; these were not to have been expected in a virtuoso. One of them has already been pointed out—namely: the undue preponderance of the thumb and first finger in chords. This defect rests partly upon a faulty balancing of the hand in the descending stroke (so that the weight of it falls upon the thumb) and partly upon an underestimate of the degree of accentuation necessary for enabling the listener to follow the melody with a minimum of effort, and, consequently, with a maximum of pleasure. The correction of it would have improved almost every page of every piece in the entire series, so pervasive is this fault. The other imperfection referred to was a want of finish in all the passage-work. At the moment of present writing there is not recalled a single cadenza or brilliant passage in any of the recitals which had really been finished in the sense that Joseffy polishes a passage. For want of the diligent practice needed to do this, Mme. Hopekirk's playing, even in so comparatively easy a work as Chopin's third ballade, failed to make the effect belonging to it. The rippling, purling effect of several of the runs in this work under Joseffy's fingers, and the particularly dazzling brilliancy of many of the Liszt passages as played by him and by other virtuoso pianists, were all wanting here. Each particular failure of this sort has to be set down as a lost opportunity of impressing the average hearer, and, it may be added, of expressing the composer. For it is not to be overlooked that Chopin and Liszt have intended just these brilliant, rippling, purling effects—which stood to them in the moment of composition as something poetically desirable—just as much so as the modulations and the melodic phraseology. To fall short of this standard in public performance is to lame the interpretation by just so much. The only question is as to whether there is an offset of greater value.

Opinions will differ as to the relative worth of piano-playing like Sherwood's, Joseffy's, Mme. Rivé-King's, Mme. Carreño's, and Mme. Hopekirk's. That all should be alike is not desirable, for no one is perfect or all-sided. What Joseffy does is to bring certain pieces of music in order to illustrate piano-playing, and his own piano-playing in particular. What Mme. Hopekirk does is to use the pianoforte for the purpose of interpreting certain tone-poems of Beethoven, Chopin, Schumann, Liszt, and the rest. In the one case, music is sacrificed to mechanical perfection of performance. The instrument is made to sound at its best; but Mr. Joseffy's Hamlets, Othellos, Juliets, and other imaginary beings materialize with extremely clear-cut corners and finesse of trimming. Mme. Hopekirk's heroes and heroines materialize in something like the "impressionist" school of painting; looked at in detail there is a blotch of green here, of brown there, a heavy line here, and so on. From the proper distance the blotches and heavy lines fall into place and the essential effect of the scene is carried over to the beholder—carried over, it may be added, with more directness and power, and with less misdirected attention to the unimportant than in line engravings and such-like laborious methods of reproducing linear beauty. Therefore it is not necessary to derogate from Mme. Hopekirk's playing to call attention to its technical imperfections.

It is primarily a question of mental attitude on the part of the player, and in this an interesting study for musical students in general. Mme. Hopekirk's musical imagination is fed by its possessing so large a store of the best tone-poems laid up in memory. Fed, also (and this is the most important consideration), by the habit of playing a wide range of pieces. Just as soon as the practice is lengthened and concentrated upon some one difficult piece the imagination is dulled and bored by the process, at the very time when its ordinary stimulus has been diminished. The peculiar staleness of most virtuoso piano-playing is due to this cause. The conclusion of the whole matter is that Mme. Hopekirk deserves to be remembered as one of the most interesting players ever heard in Chicago. Whatever one may conclude with regard to her wisdom as a virtuoso in foregoing virtuoso effects which are easily within her reach, there can be no question but that for amateurs generally her example is the very best possible.

ITALIAN OPERA.

Tomorrow evening the ladies will turn out in their grand toilets and the gentlemen in their best to welcome once more Col. Mapleson's tuneful warblers. The old-time rapport between Italian opera and fashion will have a fresh opportunity to show itself. Col. Mapleson is rather kind to the patrons of opera in the lovely original. With a single exception he will keep strictly within the precedents so long established and so carefully observed by Strakosch and himself. Massenet's pretty opera of "Manon" is the only novelty; it leans upon its older brother, Bizet's "Carmen." Both are evidences of plucky Minnie Hauk's perseverance. Against an endless succession of "Martha," "Lucia," "Trovatore," "Traviata," "Sonnambula," and the like she for a long time struggled in vain. The veteran manager felt that he had done his duty by posterity when he had devoted forty years of his life to popularizing the favorit operas of Donizetti, Bellini, and Verdi, with an occasional side issue in form of "Don Giovanni," "Huguenots," or something pretentious. By great effort Mme. Hauk changed all this. She broke the ice with "Carmen," but Mapleson drew the line at that. This year she has broken it again with "Manon," of which we shall know more next Wednesday night. The prospect for the season is encouraging. The personnel of the troupe has already been given. The new singer, Mlle. Föhstrom, will make her first appearance. She is represented by many as being the best singer of the company. At all events her record leaves no doubt that she is a pleasing and a fresh artist, if not a great one. The repertory and casts of the week are so fully given elsewhere as to make it unnecessary to repeat them here.

THE MUSIN CONCERTS.

The second of the Musin concerts Saturday afternoon brought out much more clearly than the first the merits of the company and particularly of Mr. Musin himself. This artist is unquestionably one of the very best, if not absolutely the best, popular violinists heard in this country. For popular audiences, perhaps, it would be well for him to have a few pleasing folk-songs in reserve, but, for any audience with a capacity to be pleased and entertained by violin-playing of the higher sorts, no better representative could possibly be found. In his concert yesterday Mr. Musin showed again his brilliant mastery of violin technic and his capacity for the lighter and brighter forms of sentiment. His numbers were the Grieg sonata for piano and violin in F, the Leonard transcription of Haydn's variations on "God Save the Emperor," Henrique's "Fairy Stories," and Wieniawski's mazourka, as well as two or three recalls not identified. The pianist also, Mr. Godowsky, improved upon further hearing. His reading of the Chopin scherzo in B flat minor was extremely fine in every way, and almost as much could be said for the lighter numbers that came later. He is but 16 years of age, a pupil of the Kullak school in Berlin, and unquestionably one of the best and most promising pianists of his age ever heard in Chicago. His repose is admirable, as also are the clearness and accuracy of his playing—especially praiseworthy on account of the warmth that actuates it. Miss Ewan gave a creditable rendition of "Ah fors e lui" and of several smaller airs. She is an uncommonly good concert singer. Something of ease and sentiment might indeed be added to her improvement. The tenor, Mr. Dunham, is pleasing if not robust. The accompanist also was satisfactory. It is one of the perversities of the concert-going public that so superior a company as this should have been so poorly supported. Another visit, however, will probably bring things around into satisfactory balance. Mr. Musin appears next in Cedar Rapids.

MOZART AS AN OPERA COMPOSER.

The revival of Mozart's "Magic Flute" by the American opera company has naturally called out some unusually plain speaking with regard to its inherent worth as a lasting musical work. The New York Evening Post, whose musical columns are of a pronouncedly Wagnerian flavor, cites the opinion of Dr. Riemann, one of the most impartial of German critics, that "the first century which has elapsed since the composition of these operas has not done them any damage; nothing, absolutely nothing, is today antiquated in 'Don Juan,' 'Figaro,' 'Cosi Fan Tutte,' and 'Magic Flute.'" The statistics of the Berlin Opera-House hardly bear out this verdict; for, although the Mozart operas come next after Wagner's in frequency of performance, their four times a year each are but a feeble concession to a classical sentiment which has had the combined influence of most critical writers and of all conservatories to create. The Evening Post then proceeds to the following heretical and irreverent sentiment, which, however, is simply and strictly just. It says: "Although we can find very few traces today of the much-vaunted Mozartean dramatic instinct and power of characterization, yet the music is always sweet and melodious, and so simple that a child can understand it, inasmuch as it was written by a composer who remained with one foot in the cradle all his life." The closing touch is unmanly in its suggestion of spite, but here also there is a basis of truth. The writer goes on to regret Mozart's having conceded to popular demands to the extent of uniting such meaningless florid music as that of the Queen of Night, which it not unrightly characterizes as being "as insipid as anything ever written by Donizetti or Rossini."

If this sort of writing were to have the effect of throwing contempt upon Mozart's operas it would deserve the reprobation of every musician. Mozart was not only a great composer for his own times, but for all times so long as the tonal system is made the source of musical discourse. He brought into music a sweetness, a pure tenderness, a graceful melodiousness, and a perfection of formal beauty not only new in his time but unsurpassed since. Within his personal limitations to depth and range of emotion his intuitions were wholly clear and valid. What Mozart wrote for the tender, the pleasing, the joyous will remain expressive of these states so long as human ears recognize existing tonal relations and enjoy pleasant rhythms. Whenever the "Jupiter" symphony becomes trivial a great part of the Beethoven creations will have to go. When daisies, buttercups, roses, and the other unevolved adornments of the field lose their interest to an advanced generation whose eyes have "gotten beyond them," it is quite possible that more complicated flowers will have to be sought out, or the floral department of the poetry of the time be closed out at a sacrifice. The Mozart operas are nearly all based upon amusing stories and are carried through in a spirit of gayety which even in "Don Juan" is only occasionally relieved by something deeper and more serious. Nevertheless, when these deeper moments do come they fail of producing upon modern ears the impression of depth and seriousness intended. Within his limits, as before said, Mozart's dramatic characterization is clever and valid. Consider, for instance, the high-bred air of the music of the Countess in "Figaro," and observe how it contrasts with the peasant-like jollity of Figaro. Still more marked are the contrasts between the music of Donna Anna, Zerlina, Don Octavio, Don Juan, and Leporello in "Don Juan." But of melodramatic music, descriptive music, in the modern sense, there is very little in Mozart; it is this lack which modern ears most observe. Weber is suffering a similar process of disillusion. His once-famous Wolf's Glen music in "Der Freischütz" is childish beside the supernatural incantations of Wagner. It would be a great mistake, however, to conclude that by reason of these defects Mozart's music ought to fall into disuse. The true solution of the problem will lead to an honest appreciation of Mozart for what he really is—namely: the most tuneful, spontaneous, and charming of composers; and not for impossible excellencies such as no composer had until long after his day. For, we must not forget that even Beethoven, with all his depth of feeling and with his matchless intuition of musical means by which deep feeling could be expressed, was never a dramatic composer. All his descriptive passages stop short of the clearness (and perhaps crudity as well) which alone are effective upon the stage. There is, moreover, this one thing to be said by way of tu quoque—namely: that Wagner's music, when heard in long succession, is as monotonous in its way as any, possibly even the most of any. Melody possesses a perennial charm.

NOTES FROM NEAR AND FAR.

Emma Abbott's next Chicago season will be given at the Chicago Opera-House, following soon after the Duff "Mikado."

Mr. C. J. Smith's Costa Club will sing four selections from Costa's "Eli" at the Michigan Avenue M. E. Church this morning.

The vocal pupils of Mr. Miner gave a song recital at the Musical College yesterday afternoon, and will hereafter give one every two weeks, Saturday afternoon.

Miss May J. Brown has been playing a highly-appreciated series of three piano recitals in Oak Park and has been presented with a handsome copy of Beethoven's works.

Miss Meta Bischoff, the banjo expert, will have a benefit at Weber Hall Tuesday evening, when some remarkable banjo work may be expected, the whole under the direction of Mr. J. E. Henning.

Mr. Mathews' second lecture Friday morning at 10:30 will be devoted to the second period of Beethoven's creative activity, from sonata pathetique to sonata appassionata. The illustrations played by Mr. Seeboeck will consist of the sonata in A flat (op. 26), the "Waldstein" sonata (op. 53), and the sonata appassionata (op. 57). The course comprises ten lectures—three upon Beethoven, three upon Chopin, and three Schumann.

Mr. W. C. E. Seeboeck played a piano recital at Jacksonville, Ill., Thursday evening, with a remarkable program, containing among many others the whole of Beethoven's fifth concerto, a concerto of Mozart, etc. At Mr. Mathews' lecture next Friday, at 10:30, Mr. Seeboeck will play sonata pathetique, the Waldstein sonata, and sonata appassionata, representing Beethoven's second period.

Dr. Louis Maas, the well-known pianist, will play two recitals at the Haverly Theatre Friday afternoon, Feb. 19, and Saturday morning, Feb. 20, at 11 o'clock. The programs are very pleasing. The first one contains the Schumann "Phantasie," the Liszt arrangements of Schubert's "To Be Sung On the Waters," "Thou Art My Rest," "Gretchen at the Spinning-Wheel," and "The Erl-King." Also by Liszt, "Au bord d'un Source," Polonaise in E major, "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Liebeslied," "Magic Fire Scene," and a "Meistersinger" paraphrase and two selections from Tausig.

SIGHTS IN GOTHAM.

New York Belles Who Are Quite Conscious of Their Charms—Fashion Patronizing Art.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—[Special Correspondence.]—A certain public man remarked, and meant it, too, that he never saw a parade of war veterans without being displeased by the sight. He gave the reason, which was that the display lacked so much in martial aspect that no heroism was expressed by it. Solid ranks, stiff in their precision, exactly uniformed, and sternly commanded, were essential to his idea of a warriors' procession. A few hours later I happened to see two of the War's famous Generals, Sheridan and Hancock, shaking hands with each other, and it struck me forcibly that the critic of the rank and file would have been compelled for consistency's sake to condemn the looks of these chiefs. In everyday costumes, away from all connection with military life, they would have displeased him grievously. Sheridan has grown rather stout, and his hight is not sufficient to save him from an appearance of heaviness. Hancock shows his age and sorrows, for death has been at work in his family, and yet he is still a big, handsome man. Put the pair into blue and gold, pose them strikingly, and they would become sightly commanders; but at this time they had the appearance of solid merchants with excellent appetites bountifully catered to.

THE SOCIETY YUM-YUM.

Happy is the person who has sound reason for satisfaction with his or her own personal appearance. I once heard Samuel J. Tilden say, in jocose yet half earnest self-condemnation for having ever gone into politics, that portly men were the only ones suitable for statesmanship. What he meant was that personal influence, especially among politicians, depended considerably on an imposing physique. A politician has to be all the smarter when he's small. It is undoubtedly true that a man often chooses his pursuit in life with direct reference to his being able to look it. The lean, lank, and sallow fellow is apt to become a poet; the chap with an uncommonly straight spine goes to West Point if he can; the possessor of a sober, honest face gets into a bank; the sorrowful visage sends its owner into the ministry, and so on. The most interesting study of self-complacency and perfect certainty arising from a know-thyself kind of knowledge is afforded by the New York society belle who chances to be beautiful. Gilbert has a habit of making the sopranos in his operas assert their own loveliness placidly. It was so with Patience and Yum-Yum, and the examples seem to have been potent, for I have observed that our social beauties are hardly less openly conscious of their charms than their professional sisters. It was one of the almost perfect creatures at a Patriarchs' ball to whom a rapt and somewhat bewildered beau remarked: "You are quite the loveliest girl here—you are, indeed you are."

"But have you looked around thoroughly?" she calmly inquired.

"O, yes; I've seen every woman in the house, and I assure you that you're by far the most beautiful."

"Then Miss —— hasn't come," the belle said, in a casual manner that outdid Yum-Yum's declaration that she is the most attractive girl in all the world; "there's nobody else in society with whom I am comparable."

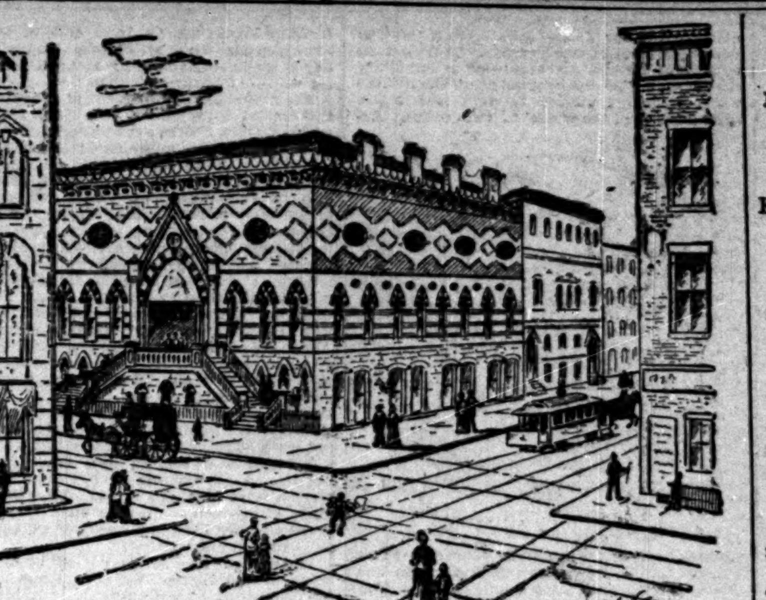

How can a pretty girl help finding out about her comeliness when persons reflect it as quickly and clearly as mirrors do? At every step she sees admiration expressed in glances and hears it in some form of words. Why shouldn't she accept the unanimous opinion? When she treads on the mass of gout and rheumatism that an old curmudgeon calls his foot, and sees him grab up the agonized thing, she does not fly from impending wrath, for she knows that she can face it out with the fair visage that nature has given to her. "Blest if you ain't the only one in the house that could be so infernally careless and awkward," he raged; and then he looked up at her, his grimace became a distorted sort of grim smile, and he apologetically added, "without getting damned for it." This was simply one more victory of matter over mind.

PATRONS OF ART.

Fashion has taken up art in New York unprecedentedly this winter. This picture shows the Academy of Design, which is the place of several annual exhibitions. The building is so distinctly venetian in architecture that it looks like something utterly foreign, the more so as its surroundings, at Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street, are made up of contrastingly ordinary structures. In reality, a small proportion only of the art shows are given within these ornate walls. Artists dissatisfied with the management of the Academy get up frequent rival collections, some of the importers of paintings maintain galleries often containing better and more celebrated work, and there are occasional collections—just now a remarkably fine one made by the Union League Club—that the Academy cannot begin to equal with new American canvases. Notwithstanding contradictions, it is sure that the young Vanderbilts intend to build and endow a public art show—using their own collection for a start—and a big one, too. It used to be common to say that William H. Vanderbilt had no taste in art, and that he bought poor things at rich prices. That is not true. He did pay extravagantly, but how could it be otherwise when the sellers were aware of the wealth of the buyer? He knew exactly what he desired, and was bound to have it anyhow. His ideas were fixed and clear. He believed that pictures for pleasure ought to be pleasant as well as technically meritorious. There does not hang in his house a single shocking picture. Views of torment are altogether absent. Not one nude figure is visible. On that point he was invincible.

THE QUESTION OF STAGE MORALS.

A powerful combination of theatre managers has undertaken to bring the public taste up to a similar attitude as to stage amusements. I stood on a street corner with one of them near to the rear door of a theatre devoted to burlesque. A matinée was over and the performers were emerging. "There is proof positive of what I've been arguing to you," he said, referring to two young women who came out. The foremost was clothed in an extremely expensive fashion. A rough estimate of the cost of her attire was $600, not counting in the $50 dog that she carried. "She is in the chorus," said the manager, "and her salary can't be more than $15 a week." Behind her was a contrasting woman whose clothes and manner were plain and modest, and she walked off alone, while the other rode away in a carriage. "That is Miss ——," the manager continued, mentioning the name of a tolerably well-known actress who was playing a leading rôle in the burlesque; "her income must be somewhere near $75 a week." No particulars are requisit to convey his meaning; and he was right in so far as he condemned the shame that comic opera and burlesque have brought upon the stage of this city. Other towns get nothing so bad. Symptoms of a reaction in public sentiment are happily observable; and Thursday afternoon

Managers Wallack, Daly, and Palmer, controlling the three permanent stock companies employed legitimately, struck their first blow at nudity by giving for the Actors' Fund entertainments from which tights were rigidly excluded. They are open to the charge of self-interest, of course, for their business has been badly hurt by the rivalry of successful shows of women. Moreover, Wallack and Daly have had on their stages the same kind of exhibitions which they now condemn; but their appeal to decency is felt to be reasonable. It has suddenly become unfashionable to go to burlesques, and the rare and radiant belles of Fifth avenue who can gaze on a grand-opera ballet without a wink now decline to see Amazon marches. Much of this sentiment is an outcome of the numerous flagrant scandals that have made some of the beautiful burlesquers notorious, and the rest may be set down to mere whim. Luckily for Wallack, Daly, and Palmer, their leading actresses at present are free of public reproach, and therefore can impersonate respectable heroines without any suggestion of incongruity. They are Ada Rehan, here pictured in the centre of the group, with Annie Robe at her right and Marie Burroughs at her left. All are handsome and of a type enabling them to enact society heroines agreeably.

RIOTOUS SOCIETY PEOPLE.

Society itself finds it hard to be altogether graceful and seemly. For instance, the very people who profess to be so extremely polite are notoriously riotous in their onslaughts upon the refreshments at balls and receptions. The rush and scramble at the tables were so violent at this week's Delmonico assembly that a fork was driven by collision into a girl's mouth, where it made a painful wound. The belles are expected to smile superior to the emptying of wineglasses on their exquisit toilets, and to show no annoyance when greasy viands are dropped into their satin laps, but this one screamed loudly as soon as the fork was pulled out of her palate.

So difficult is the task of distinguishing themselves by polite ways from plebeians that several of the scions of wealth have given it up, and have on several ceremonious occasions appeared in suits of the usual swallow-tail cut, but made of pearl-gray material. Thus they are not mistaken for waiters, and awkward blunders are avoided.

LEADING THE GERMAN.

The funniest of disasters, and yet extremely regrettable to the victim, befel a lively little man who excels in leading the german. Military maneuvres are nothing compared with the evolutions through which he can put the fifty to a hundred couples engaged in a german. His preparations are comprehensive and careful, but this time he made an awful miscalculation. On examining the floor of the ball-room the day before he found that it had become a little roughened by use. Therefore he sent his dancing-shoes to have the soles polished like glass in smoothness. He put them on, and at length stood on the field of command in them. Horror! The floor had in the meantime been scraped and waxed until it was as slippery as new ice. The time to start the german had arrived. He dashed desperately forth. All in vain. He might have skated over that surface, on which the common-shod dancers had to move with caution, but he couldn't walk. Up went his feet, down came his head. O, but it made a thud! The stunned leader was helped out into an ante-room, where he dazedly declared that somebody else must take his office. Then came Genius to the rescue. "Heat your soles," counseled Genius, "and they'll stick sufficiently to the waxen floor to give you foothold." That was done. Before commencing, and at every available interval thereafter, the leader had his shoe bottoms gone over by a waiter with an iron brought hissing from the kitchen. DAUCET.

THE WEEK IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, Jan. 13, 1886.—Sire: The letter with which your Holiness has honored me, and the high order which accompanied it, have given me great pleasure, and I ask your Holiness graciously to accept the expression of my deep-felt gratitude. Every mark of approval towards a work of peace in the consummation of which I have been able to assist is the more precious to me on account of the satisfaction it gives to his Majesty, the Emperor, my illustrious master. Your Holiness makes the remark in your letter that nothing is more consonant with the spirit and character of the Roman Pontificate than assistance in works of peace. That very reason caused me to ask your Holiness to accept the noble trust of arbiter in the difficulty between Germany and Spain, and to propose to the Spanish Government that both countries should appeal to the decision of your Holiness. The circumstance that both nations are not in the same position in regard to the church which honors your Holiness as its head has never been able to shake my confidence in the loftiness which was to me a guaranty of the strictest impartiality of your decision. The relations of Germany to Spain are of such a character that peace between these countries cannot be endangered even by a permanent divergence of their interests, nor by difficulties resulting from the past, nor by jealousies created by geographical position. Their accustomed relations have only been disturbed by accident. There is, therefore, reason to hope that the peace-making of your Holiness will be of lasting effect. Therein I include above all the grateful remembrance in which both contestants will keep the illustrious arbitrator. As regards myself, I shall always and zealously improve every opportunity that offers itself in the fulfillment of my duties toward my master and my country, to prove to your Holiness my sincere gratitude and deep-felt devotion. I am, Sire, with a sense of the highest esteem, your Holiness' most respectful servant,

V. BISMARCK.

A villa has been purchased at Koburg for Prince Alfred of England, the eldest son of the Duke of Edinburg, and as such the heir presumptive to the Duchy of Koburg-Gotha after his father. The young Prince, who is now in his 12th year, will make Koburg his permanent home and is to visit the classic school at that place so as to receive a thorough German education. It is even possible that he may succeed directly his grand-uncle, Duke Ernest, as his father seems to prefer his position as the eldest brother of the future King of England and of an Admiral in the British Navy to that of a petty German sovereign. Besides, he knows very well that he is not liked by the people of the Duchy, nor is he on good terms with his uncle.

Prince Leopold of Anhalt, whose death was announced a few days ago, was the eldest son of the reigning Duke of Anhalt and his presumptive heir. He was nearly 31 years of age, but leaves only one daughter, 11 months old, so that the succession descends under the Salic law to the brother of the deceased, Prince Friedrich, born Aug. 19, 1856.

The latest craze at Berlin is half a dozen Bella Coola Indians from Vancouver Island, B. C., brought there by the Polar traveler Adrian Jacobsen. They were exhibited before the Anthropological Society of Berlin at Kroll's establishment, with learned speeches by Prof. Dr. Virchow, Prof. Bastian, and Dr. Aurel Krause, who proved—to their own satisfaction at least—that these particular Indians, as well as all North American Indians, are of the same race and origin as the Japanese.

Great distress reigns among the working population at Meerane in Saxony. Most of them had to take their scant furniture to the pawnshops, 184 families not being able to even retain a bed to sleep in, while nearly all the rest have nothing left but one bed, which has to do for the whole household. Typhus-fever has broken out in consequence, and committees are now being formed to find beds and bread for the needy.

In view of the expulsion of 30,000 Russian and Austrian Poles from the eastern provinces of Prussia, and Bismarck's declaration that the Prussian Government intends to drive out the large Polish land-owners by buying up their estates and converting them into small holdings at a perpetual rental, it may be of some interest to know the proportion the Polish population bears to the total population in their respective districts. There are in all 12,684,000 Poles, of whom 7,000,000 live in Russia, 3,230,000 in Austria, and 2,454,000 in Prussia. In the latter country only the four eastern provinces are inhabited by Poles, and in only one of them—Posen—are they in the majority, the proportion being: In East Prussia, 1,434,000 Germans, 350,000 Poles; West Prussia, 936,000 Germans, 470,000 Poles; Posen, 810,000 Germans, 890,000 Poles; Silesia, 3,168,000 Germans and 740,000 Poles; in the aggregate 6,348,000 Germans and 2,450,000 Poles, or seventy-two Germans to twenty-eight Poles in a hundred. As will be seen, the German population outnumbers the Polish nearly three to one, and it appears strange that, such being the case, the moral weight and influence of the majority, assisted as it is by its higher civilization, should not be sufficient to Germanize the minority, and that so broad measures as the expulsion of whole families—widows and even orphans—involving the destruction of great business interests, should have been found necessary.

A fatal Christmas present was sent to the family of a mechanic living at Fittau by relatives in Pomerania. It was a ham, not of an American but of a Pomeranian hog, of which the recipients freely partook. At last reports the mechanic and his wife had died and all the children were suffering terrible tortures from trichiniasis.

At Hamburg all the slaughtering-houses in the export business have closed their doors since New-Year's on account of the excessively high prices prevailing in the live-stock market, which preclude the possibility of competition with the American product in foreign markets. This proves to be productive of great distress to the poorer classes, as it deprives them of the cheap meats, not wanted for export, which they were accustomed to buy at the slaughtering-houses.

A tragic occurrence is reported from Sommerach in Bavaria. A young girl, who had found a pocketbook containing ten marks ($2.50), and had immediately turned it over to the owner, was charged by the latter with having appropriated therefrom fivepfennigs—one and a quarter cents. She was found guilty and sentenced to one day in prison. Overcome with shame, the girl has disappeared, and every indication points to the presumption that she has taken her own life. The owner of the pocketbook had not been lynched at last accounts.

THE FASHIONS.

Hoop earrings set with pearls, diamonds, garnets, or rubies are very fashionably worn with full evening toilets. Hooped clasps to match fasten the velvet dog-collars, now the invariable addition to a dressy costume.

The fresh spring silks will show a diversity of new half-tints and several novelties in decided colors, samples of these elegant goods showing that blue in a number of superb dark but distinct shades, and golden browns with an added golden sheen to an already beautiful surface, will lead as first choice for carriage and visiting wear, not, however, excluding gray, which appears in lovely soft Parisian dyes, if possible more attractive than ever—this exceptionally beautiful color, the pride of Frenchwomen, proving as capable as Cleopatra of infinit variety.

Many plush pelerines are worn this winter by ladies who adopt the warm, serviceable chamois jacket as an under waist. With a good deal of wadding these capes are made nearly as warm as those of fur. There is now added a very deep rolling collar, and often the fronts are cut in "stole" fashion, which lends added protection. In color the pelerine usually matches the costume worn with them, or otherwise to correspond to that of the dress trimmings. The new, thick, shaggy plush, closely imitating natural beaver, is much used for both short coats and pelisses. Jockey caps and muffs are shown to match for skating uses.

Furs are always the handsomest of winter trimmings, and the fortunate possessor of good furs need not trouble herself to follow the prevailing mania for marabout. Its wear, like that of ziblinet, is by no means satisfactory, and, although inexpensive, the necessity for frequent renewal materially increases the original cost of the mantle or dress of which marabout is the adjunct. Nevertheless, motives of economy do not deter people from wearing a great deal of marabout trimming. It is certainly graceful in effect and always becoming, and is a very pretty trimming for house dresses. Marabout is now dyed in the most exquisit pale tints, which makes it particularly desirable as a garniture for delicate evening gowns and wraps of silk or satin.

FLORAL JEWELRY—BODICES.

Flowers formed of real diamonds or other rare stones have been one of the curiosities of modern fashion, and now in paste, mock opals, "French" rubies and emeralds begin to find their way among elegant trinkets of the fashionable jewel-case. At a celebrated Broadway lapidary's are shown unique and beautiful devices in flower brooches, necklets, and bangle bracelets with tufts of forget-me-nots, star flowers, lilies, and roses, in fine gold or silver filigree, and buds in pale pink cameo overlaid with diamond chippings. Necklaces with angles, points, and curves which fit the throat, and odd dog collars of wrought metals set with "electric" diamonds, links, clasps, and slides are all in vogue, and, taking the places of brooches, etc., are ornaments which resemble military decorations, straps, grelots, and châtelaine appendages.

In no point whatever is fashion subjected to any rigid rule in the shape of bodices. Of peaked waists, round waists, pleated or gaged waists, Jersey bodices, casaquins, or coats there is no end; they may be either in vest habit, Gretchen, cuirass, Zouave, Russian, jaunty French, or severe Quaker style; they may be as long and "wooden" in their fashion as a Joan of Arc bodice, or the natural waist-line may be relegated to half way up the length of the waist, a la bébé, and yet be in best form. The only question at present to be weighed in regard to the corsage is, Which of all is most becoming? And here opens a wide choice, for more attention, this season of gayety, is given to the style, shape, and decoration of the bodice of one evening corsage than is bestowed upon the decoration of the skirts of half a dozen trained skirts of brocaded satin, broché velvet, and like figured goods, which illustrates the truth and perfection of beauty unadorned.

THE "LAVEUSE" TUNIC—SKATING AND OTHER COSTUMES.

The "Laveuse" tunic will again be a popular overdress with spring fabrics. It is caught up at both sides, and fastened under the back pouf exactly as peasant girls tuck up their skirts. The front breadths are cut almost as long as the underskirt. The front and side breadths are joined, then pleated up and fastened at the back by a sash or wide loops of the dress-goods. The deep upturned portion of the front of the tunic is faced with a contrasting fabric and color, as, for instance, a dress of sapphire-blue foulard with rever-facing of cardinal red, or the tunic may be of a cream-colored serge with facing of golden-brown velvet, or of veiling with revers of embroidered surah. The effect of the "Laveuse" tunic is always "Frenchy" and coquetish, but invariably negligée, and it cannot be worn with an evening toilet, except by very young ladies and in light materials, such as veiling, albatross cloth, Canton crape foulard, or India silk tissues.

There appears to be no end to the variety of handsome skating costumes worn this winter. Among those noted recently was a stylish suit of Persian striped plush in dark moss-green and gold, with Marquise coat above the plain green plush over an ample vest of the striped goods; this fastened down the front with heavy silver agrafes. The hat, a Glengarry, was of the plain green plush, with a narrow band of Persian silk set close to the head above the waves of raven black hair. A twist of the plush was set at one side of the cap, with the head of a golden pheasant peeping from amid its folds. Whole costumes are made of cardinal stockinet trimmed with beaver, with fur cap en suite, also of golden-brown Bective cloth bordered with astrachan, and of Roman-plaided velvet trimmed with "Grecian" lynx. In fine contrast are stylishly-made suits of black velvet with close-fitting French surtouts and long, shaggy coachman's capes of black fox entirely covering the shoulders. Around the bottom of the skirt is set a wide band of fur to match.

At a Modjeska representation of "As You Like It" last week a very lovely-looking young lady among the audience was attired in a stylish and elegant costume of fawn-colored Ottoman rep, the cord of the silken fabric exceedingly heavy and showing a superb lustrous sheen upon its rich surface. The skirt was laid in wide panels, with fan pleatings between made of the dress goods, the panels elaborately embroidered with gray silk flowers outlined upon each hand-wrought device, with tiny plomb beads. The coat of the same fabric was also bead-worked upon the front and bordered with golden beaver bands, as were also muff and princesse bonnet, which had an extra decoration of gray sea-swallows set above the narrow fur band which bordered the entire bonnet. A pair of softest gray gloves of undressed kid, a large cluster of real violets, and a golden brown hand-painted satin fan depending from an antique silver châtelaine were the tasteful accessories which gave artistic effect to this most charming costume.

BRIDAL COSTUMES.

At a very elegant wedding up-town last week the bride, a tall, graceful blonde of slender but very beautiful form, wore a perfect-fitting princesse dress, the front of which was a mass of pearl and crystal embroidery, the long white satin train caught up with elegant ornaments of pearl. The corsage was cut out heart-shape, and narrow bands of lace and pearl embroidery served in the place of sleeves, the long Suède Saxe gloves nearly reaching to the bands. The bridesmaids, three in number, wore pink plush dresses, with vests covered with garnet bead embroidery and corsage bouquets of blush roses, buds, and sprigs of cape jasmine and foliage mingled. Garnet ornaments were worn upon hair, throat, and wrists. The bouquets were exceedingly large, and in addition each carried a tiny basket of exotics on her arm. The bride's mother wore a trained dress of gray satin brocatelle. A young lady guest was attired in a unique toilet of ruby velvet, trimmed with olive and gold-striped satin and velvet, the two fabrics made up in Oriental fashion, with short sleeves with "wings," these held on the shoulders by antique clasps of hammered gold, quaintly decorated in brilliant enameling. A singularly elegant yet simple dress, worn by a lady from Philadelphia, was formed of mauve satin, with a long train clinging closely to the figure. Across the front was a graceful scarf drapery of real Spanish lace. The Medici corsage was cut out square in the neck and edged with the lace, and beyond was the high satin fraise covered entirely with white pearl embroidery. A large bouquet de corsage of pure white roses completed a most becoming and lady-like toilet.

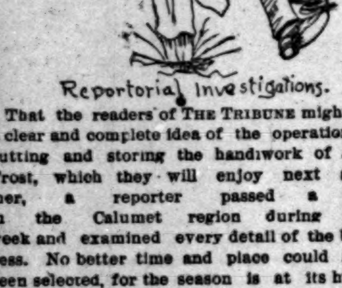

ICE-HARVESTING.

How the Crystal Cakes Are Cut, Rafted, and Stored Away for Future Use.

Feeding and Lodging an Army of Employes—The Work in Severe Weather.

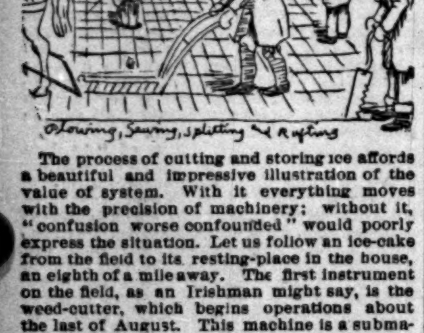

Ice, once regarded as a luxury, is now considered a necessity by the civilized world. So, in climes where Nature does not turn her hand during a part of the year to purifying earth, and water, and air by the application of frost, man supplements Nature and with inventive hand manufactures her crystal coolness or else draws from the stores of colder latitudes. In those regions where the north wind blows and with its chastening and purifying touch plays its part, raising man to his full mental, moral, and physical stature, Jack Frost with his magic wand makes ready the crystal store to the hand of man. The average citizen, as he gulps down his beloved and deadly ice-water on a blazing July day, or hears its refreshing tinkle as he stirs it in his cold tea or iced cocktail, beams with satisfaction and emphatically declares that he could not live without it. Yet there are occasions on which his satisfaction is turned to grief—when the refrigerator is empty and when the ice bill comes in. Then he grumbles because the ice-man, who has thousands of tons that he doesn't know what to do with, doesn't deliver larger chunks and at his exorbitant charges and enormous profits. "Why," he exclaims with heat, "the bloated bondholders have only to pick it up all winter long, and here they charge me for it as if it were gold." The worthy citizen is not entirely incorrect in thinking that the ice lies ready to the ice-man's hand; but it requires a cunning hand to do the picking, and the process is not by any means so easy as he imagines.

Reportorial Investigations.

That the readers of THE TRIBUNE might get a clear and complete idea of the operation of cutting and storing the handiwork of Jack Frost, which they will enjoy next summer, a reporter passed a day in the Calumet region during the week and examined every detail of the business. No better time and place could have been selected, for the season is at its hight, and operations in this locality are conducted on an immense scale. Nearly 2,000 men are now at work, and as many as a dozen large ice-houses are located on the Calumet River and the several lakes of the Calumet system in the immediate vicinity of Pullman and South Chicago, to say nothing of as many more located at more remote points of the Calumet region.

The point selected was Wolf Lake, where the two largest houses of the Knickerbocker Ice Company are located. The lake is next in size to Calumet Lake and lies about half and half in Illinois and Indiana, the houses being about half a mile over the Indiana line and about two miles southeast of Calumet Harbor. The houses, which for convenience may be designated as Nos. 1 and 2, stand on the west shore of the lake at its northern end and are about three-fourths of a mile apart, No. 1 being furthest north. The latter is 350x176 feet and sixty feet high, containing twenty rooms and holding 50,000 tons of ice. No. 2 is 440x200 feet, sixty feet high, contains thirty-six rooms, and holds 80,000 tons. The houses are now more than three-quarters full, and will be filled to their full capacity if the weather continues favorable for another week. Perhaps the clearest idea of the quantity of ice may be obtained by using acre measurement. A simple calculation shows that the two houses hold about three and a half acres of ice forty-five feet thick. An ice-house is not necessarily a handsome structure, its chief features being a roof and walls that will keep in the cold and keep out the heat. Consequently a tarred and graveled roof and double walls a foot thick, lined with tarred paper and filled with sawdust, are the essentials. The decoration is supplied by ice-lifts and galleries at the front and narrow apertures extending from roof to floor at the rear, and planked on the inside with weather-stained boards of all sizes and shapes. The ice-lifts run from the roof to the edge of the water on a sharp incline and resemble exaggerated toboggan slides. House No. 1 has two and house No. 2 has three. The galleries that run across the front of the houses are about ten feet apart and look like piazzas one sees at the back of a tenement house. A few clotheslines fluttering with dilapidated garments and the resemblance would be perfect.

Plowing, Sawing, Splitting and Rafting.

The process of cutting and storing ice affords a beautiful and impressive illustration of the value of system. With it everything moves with the precision of machinery; without it, "confusion worse confounded" would poorly express the situation. Let us follow an ice-cake from the field to its resting-place in the house, an eighth of a mile away. The first instrument on the field, as an Irishman might say, is the weed-cutter, which begins operations about the last of August. This machine is a submarine mowing-machine affixed to the side of a flat-bottomed steamboat, and cuts a nine-foot swath through the rushes at the rate of eight miles an hour until about 250 acres have been cleared. The rushes come to the surface and the wind and waves deposit them on the shore. When the ice has formed and has frozen to the requisit thickness a channel is cut to the foot of the lift and the operation of cutting is begun. With a straight-edge and a hand-plow two straight lines, at right angles to each other, are drawn across the field. The marker, which is composed of two parallel plows, twenty-two inches apart, is then drawn over the field by horse-power until the entire surface is divided into regular squares by grooves about an inch deep. Close behind the markers follow the plows. These act on the principle of the carpenter's plane and are composed of a number or narrow steel teeth set in a solid frame at a forward slant. Each tooth cuts a little deeper than the one in front of it and the whole plow cuts out about two inches. The spaces between the teeth allow the shavings of ice to rise to the surface and the plows are of graded depths. The final cut is usually about two-thirds of the thickness of the ice, as the remaining third will easily support men and horses and yet is easily split by an iron bar.

In the meanwhile an army of men with hand-tools has been following closely behind. Men with large saws have cut clear through the ice in parts of the three sides of a raft of about thirty cakes, the fourth side touching the clear water of the channel. A man armed with a heavy iron bar with a chisel-shaped point drives it through the ice at intervals between the sawed portions. After a few blows the raft parts company with the field and a raftsman springs on it, and, with long pole, propels it slowly towards the foot of the lift. The first raft is always cut from one end of the field so that each succeeding raft is open to the water on two sides and requires less sawing and splitting than the first one. The rafts are usually of uniform size—four cakes one way and eight the other. Just one layer of rafts ahead of the sawers and splitters goes the calker, who with an iron bar with a wedge-shaped end calks with ice chippings each plow furrow for a few inches from the line where the saw cut will be made. This is done to prevent the water from flowing in and filling the furrows. As the channel nears the lift the width decreases until at its foot it is but a trifle more than the width of two cakes. Accordingly the raft is gradually dismembered as it nears the lift, the last stroke of the iron bar separating the pairs into single blocks. The blocks are then caught, two at a time, by the hoisting machinery and leave the water on their upward journey.

The handling of the ice from the moment it is taken out of the water by the lift until it is snugly stored in the house is perhaps the most interesting part of the whole operation. Up to that moment the work has, to a certain extent, been leisurely conducted. Now steam-power takes a hand and there is a rapidity and dash which is fascinating in the extreme. Everything flies; the ice is handled on the fly, and the long procession of glistening cakes which extends from the foot of the lift to the right and left, front and rear of the immense house never slackens or halts. The lift has been compared to a toboggan slide; the simile may be extended. It takes power to drag the sled to the top of the slide; but it goes down of its own accord. So with the ice; the powerful hoisting apparatus with many a rumble and groan lifts the cakes, fifty a minute, to the required level, and then releases them to take care of themselves. The force of gravity gives them momentum, and a deft touch here and there from a powerful hand gives them direction until with seeming intelligence they glide rapidly through the labyrinth of galleries and slides and pause within a foot or two of their resting-place.

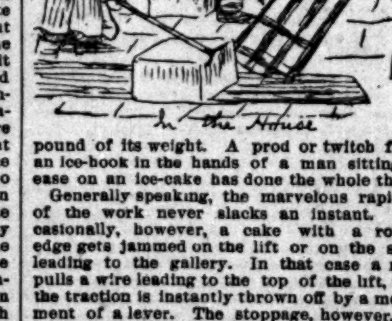

The lift is practically two parallel, endless chains connected at regular intervals by stout wooden cross-bars. These chains and bars run up the face of the lift freighted with blocks of ice, discharge their freight into a slide, pass over a pair of cog-wheels, drop perpendicularly to the ground, and pass under the lift to the starting point. The lift is so arranged that the ice is discharged at any one of the six galleries. Soon after leaving the water the cakes pass under an automatic scraper, the invention of an official of the company. It is simply a huge hanging door or portcullis swung on hinges at the top and shod on its lower edge with iron. The power of the lift forces the ice under it and its resistance scrapes from the top of the cakes all the chippings and loose ice which have accumulated. These fall into a steam-box fed with waste steam, are melted as fast as they fall, and run out of the box in the shape of water. This scraper and steam-box are regarded with great satisfaction by the company, since they effect a large saving in labor and space. The former item amounts to several thousand dollars a year, as each scraper saves the labor of two men during the cutting season and in summer that of a number of men, who, under the old method of hand-power scraping, were kept busy removing refuse ice in the houses caused by defective scraping. The space saved amounts to three tiers of ice in the house and without the steam-box as much as 1,000 tons of scrapings would accumulate about each lift.

Lift, Scraper and Steam-Box.

Arrived at the level of the gallery to be used, the cakes are discharged by the lift into a slide and part company, being diverted to the right and left by a stout tongue of wood. They glide easily and rapidly down the slide, turn the corner, and take their way along the gallery. From this a slide runs at right angles into each room in which storing is going on. At the opening of each slide sits a man with a tool resembling a boat-hook. If storing is going on in three rooms on this side of the lift, the first man takes every third cake. As it passes him he sticks the sharp point of his ice-hook into the top of the cake, gives it a practiced twitch, and turns it without any apparent effort into the mouth of his slide. As the level of the ice in the room is perhaps ten feet below that of the gallery, the cake will run to the rear of the building—a distance of 200 feet—if unchecked.

At intervals, however, short slides are stationed at right angles to the main slide, and as the cakes pass a man with an ice-hook prods them, swings them with perfect ease around the right-angled corner, guides them down his slide to a plank laid on the top of the ice already stored, and lands them within a foot or two of the place each block is to occupy. Then men with ice-hooks arrange the cakes side by side in regular rows. The cakes not appropriated by the first gang go on to the second, and so on. The gang at the rear of the house have the easiest work of all, as the end of the main slide is here on a level with the ice, and with a touch each block can be made to slide into the very square to be filled. The beauty and simplicity of the whole operation strike the observer impressively, when he realizes that a cake 22x22x15 inches and weighing not far from 300 pounds has been conveyed from the top of the lift to the rear of the house—a distance of some 440 feet—without a man having laid hands on it or lifted a pound of its weight. A prod or twitch from an ice-hook in the hands of a man sitting at ease on an ice-cake has done the whole thing.

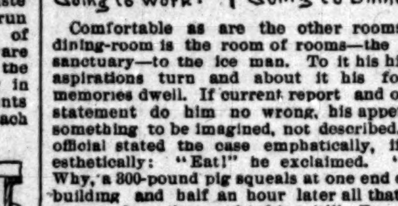

In the House.

Generally speaking, the marvelous rapidity of the work never slacks an instant. Occasionally, however, a cake with a rough edge gets jammed on the lift or on the slide leading to the gallery. In that case a man pulls a wire leading to the top of the lift, and the traction is instantly thrown off by a movement of a lever. The stoppage, however, affects only the one lift, as the shaft which runs the whole length of the building and furnishes the motive power to each of the three lifts keeps on turning. Stoppage of the engine is therefore avoided. Practically there are very few stops. If a defective cake makes its appearance it causes no delay. It is run on to the gallery, passes all the house slides, and, by the lifting of a timber at the end of the gallery, is allowed to run off and fall to the ground. And here it may be remarked that a shaft 440 feet long and capable of furnishing the power to lift twenty-two tons of ice every minute is considerable of a shaft. As a rule, the heaviest shipments are made during the summer; but a considerable amount is sent out each day during the cutting season. The operation of putting the ice into the cars is very similar to that of storage. A switch track from the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago Road runs by the rear of the houses. A certain proportion of the ice is allowed to run by the house slides and goes to the end of the building, around the corner, along the side, and into the cars, gravity still being the force and an ice-pole the directing power. Seventeen cars may by loaded at a time, and an engine and crew are devoted entirely to the company's business. When summer shipments are made a perpendicular lift (or drop) at the rear of the building lowers the ice to a slide on which it runs into the cars as before. Thirty cars a day is the average amount shipped during the six warmer months of the year.

The actual number of men at work at the two houses last week was 790. Such an aggregation of men makes a community of its own in which there are many novel and interesting features. It is an aggregation of many nationalities, trades and conditions of life. It is also a community practically without the presence of woman. Besides the ice-houses there are three boarding-houses accommodating 200 men each, twelve cottages holding 100 persons, one house occupied by forty superintendents and bosses, barns holding fifty horses, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, etc. The cottages are occupied by men and their families, who take boarders to the extent of their room. About 100 of the laborers live in Colebour and go home each evening. The great majority of the men come under the head of "muscle" and are paid $1.37 per day. They are charged 19 cents per meal and their lodging is furnished free. Their wages are therefore $4.80 per week of full time. Muscle combined with a fair amount of brains gets from $45 to $70 per month. Promotion and steady employment reward faithfulness and intelligence, and many of the men holding the more responsible positions have been in the employ of the company for ten years or more.

When men are severely tried by arduous labor in cold weather their food and lodging are matters of vital importance. Aside from any motives of sentiment, the ice men have learned by experience that it pays to feed and lodge their men well, and it is the universal rule that the laborers are well treated. The transient laborer stays longer, works better, and is sick less when so treated. The boarding-houses are unpretentious frame structures of two and a half stories. On the ground floor are dining-room, wash-room, kitchen, and pantries. The second floor is taken up by a huge sitting-room, a baggage-room, and a number of sleeping-rooms holding sixteen men. The half-story is the sleeping-room proper, the sleeping-rooms below being given to men who come in gangs and prefer to keep together—as, for instance, sailors. There is usually little use for the baggage-room, for the wardrobe of the average laborer consists of what he has on his person. In case he has a box or a gripsack it is put in the room and a check given. Once in a long while a man arrives with a trunk. It usually happens that he is so unmercifully guyed that he does not stay more than a day or two. The men sleep two in a bunk. Each bed is furnished with pillows and blankets, which, strange as it may seem, are kept clean by frequent washings and the application of steam and hot air. The cimex lectularius does not thrive under these conditions, and a man afflicted with smaller, if not less offensive, parasites is discharged the instant his condition is discovered. If these measures were not taken it would be very difficult to keep for any length of time the better class of laborers. The boarding-houses are kept scrupulously clean, and are weather-tight and thoroughly warmed.

Going to Work. Going to Dinner.

Comfortable as are the other rooms, the dining-room is the room of rooms—the inner sanctuary—to the ice man. To it his highest aspirations turn and about it his fondest memories dwell. If current report and official statement do him no wrong, his appetite is something to be imagined, not described. An official stated the case emphatically, if not esthetically: "Eat!" he exclaimed. "Eat! Why, a 300-pound pig squeals at one end of the building and half an hour later all that goes out at the other end is his tail!" Exaggeration aside, the men do eat with a zeal and persistence that know no faltering. It is a common thing for men to eat themselves sick. For instance: A weather-beaten and travel-stained tramp appears. He has not had a square meal for months, mayhap. Consequently he devotes the first week to replenishing the springs of life, and before the time is up he has gorged himself ill. It is stated and vouched for that one man drank fourteen pint-cups full of coffee at one meal. Even where the men eat rationally they consume an immense amount of food, as the following figures, for one house only, will show: A 750-pound beef is consumed each day. Fifty apple pies and 150 loaves of bread are baked each night. About sixty pounds of butter are set out each meal, as well as three bushels of potatoes, to say nothing of beans and other vegetables. Coffee is made in twenty-gallon boilers, and the men average four pint cups each a meal. In the dining-room are twenty tables seating ten each. The dishes are of tin and the knives and forks are of iron. The food is of first-rate quality and well cooked. A force of fifteen men cook, do chamber work, and wait on the tables in each house.

The operation of cutting and storing the ice as above described is a fair sample of the work in pleasant weather. In bitterly cold weather the work is exceedingly difficult, as may be easily imagined. For instance—a night when the mercury is down near the bulb gangs of men must spell each other all night to keep the channel open. This is done by towing an ice-raft up and down the channel and keeping the water moving. Storms also cause delay and trouble. In a heavy snow-storm it is no uncommon thing for the channel to drift full of snow until it has to be abandoned and a new one cut. Even when it does not drift a heavy fall of snow makes a large amount of extra labor, as a force of men and horses are obliged to turn out with snowplows and scrape the field. When the snow falls on damp ice and then freezes, the field must be abandoned, even if nearly or quite ready for rafting. Every now and then a laborer gets a ducking, which in cold weather is a serious affair. He starts on a run for the engine house and bakes himself beside the boilers until he and his clothes are dry. The cold tells severely on a man not used to exposure, and a certain proportion of the force is always on the sick list, usually with lung troubles. The horses, too, die largely before becoming acclimated, lung-fever proving especially destructive. The company prefers Germans, Scandinavians, and Americans.

The men are paid once a month and draw their wages upon a time-card, which states the number of days and hours worked, the number of meals eaten, the amount of tobacco drawn, and the number of tickets between Chicago and the houses used. Any man may draw money at any time, provided he will draw all that is due him. Tickets are bought in quantity at special rates by the company and sold to the men at cost price. That the men ride extensively is shown by the fact that 5,000 tickets on the Lake Shore and 5,400 on the Pittsburg have been used this season, as proved by the numbers on the special form used. The men are not charged for meals not eaten when they give notice of absence. The expenses of the company average $10,000 per month for the year and nearly $2,000 a day during the cutting season.

There is no saloon nearer the houses than Colehour. Last fall a man located a saloon just across the lake, a short distance from the houses. The company got rid of him in a singular effective manner. Their men frequented the saloon and got drunk and shiftless until patience ceased to be a virtue. The man was told to get out. He refused. The company then gave notice that any man caught in the saloon would be discharged instantly, even if he had been in their employ for ten years. In three days the saloonkeeper came and offered to sell out. He was told that the company did not care to buy. Then the following conversation occurred between him and an official of the company:

"Go to Colehour and keep a saloon if you want to. You're too —— handy."

"I belong to the Saloonkeepers' Association and if you drive me out we'll boycott you."

"Clear out. If we sell ice as cheap, or cheaper than anybody else, the saloon men will buy of us. If they don't, we can better afford to lose their trade than have you here. Skip!"

LEW WALLACE STILL FULL OF FIGHT.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Feb. 6.—Gen. Lew Wallace is preparing another statement in regard to Gen. Halleck's connection with the defense of Washington in 1864, and will give it to the public in a day or two. He has procured copies of many official dispatches that have never been published, and he says the people will be astounded when they learn the true inwardness of that remarkable campaign.

A PRIEST ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The Rev. Father William Fennelly, pastor of a Roman Catholic church at Oneida for twenty years, was struck by the cars at that place this morning and died in thirty minutes. Father Fennelly was 86 years old.

LOVE'S PETITION.

For The Chicago Tribune.

I fell awake in the night and prayed
As the clock was striking two,
And this the prayer my poor heart made
To Heaven, concerning you:

That all the days of your life be bright,
Nor ever a cloud appear;
And, whether your love mine own requite,
Or no—God bless you, dear!

LILY CURRY.

REAL ESTATE.

An Active Market, with Prices Still Tending Upward—Notable Transactions.

The Demand for Room in the Business Quarter—Some Proposed Changes.

The market continues in an active, healthy condition, and the tendency of prices is still upward. Brokers are surprised to see so large a demand at a time of the year when they would naturally look for quietude. One leading house reports that it did as much business in January, 1886, as in January, February, and March, 1885, and the experience of other houses is similar. Handy & Co., the abstract men, are doing twice as much as last year at this time. There is a steady trade in small lots and houses, but the inquiry for inside business property is still the most conspicuous feature of the situation. Acres are not attracting a great deal of attention. As for renting, the season has not opened yet, but the business has, and the outlook for property used for commercial purposes is excellent. Perhaps the most notable transaction of the week was the exchange of the Woodruff Hotel on the southeast corner of Twenty-first street and Wabash avenue ($125,000) by Norman B. Ream for the Busby Block on the east side of Dearborn street, between Randolph and Lake ($210,000). Mr. Ream is known to have a decided fancy for inside business property. The purchase by Martin Ryerson of Charles M. Henderson for $87,500 of the lot on the north side of Adams street, 150 feet west of Franklin, is another evidence of the fact, to which attention was recently called, that capitalists are looking more and more to the wholesale quarter as a locality for investment. The lot is one of a very few in that vicinity not now improved, and it will be utilized for business purposes.

Percy W. Palmer has closed a sale of the five-acre tract at the northwest corner of Jefferson and Twenty-second streets to Stephen W. Rawson for $50,000 cash.

M. Petrie has sold for H. Vogler forty-two feet on Market street, near Jackson street, for $34,500 cash, which is expected to be improved during the summer for a wholesale building.

Fleischmann & Co., yeast manufacturers of Cincinnati, have bought for $27,000 of H. and J. Schwabacher the premises Nos. 245 and 247 South Canal street, which they will occupy for offices and storerooms, besides erecting a $15,000 stable for their own use in the rear. The sale was made by Harry Greenebaum.

L. A. Gilbert reports the following sales at Woodlawn Park, Hyde Park, and Englewood: House and lot fronting east on Woodlawn avenue, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets, lot 75x187 feet, for Mrs. J. R. Fairman to J. H. Lobdell, $5,000; Lot 9, Block 7, Wait & Bowers' Subdivision, 50x200 feet, running through from Oglesby avenue to Madison avenue, for Newell J. Miner to William Wyles, $1,250 cash; Lot 23, Block 1, Wait & Bowers' Subdivision, for Mrs. Bartlett to E. J. Porter, $1,250; Lot 14, Block 21, Cady's Subdivision, Hyde Park, 150 feet east of Kimbark avenue, for William Miller to Mrs. Catonne Hays, $2,500; two lots on Dickey street, Block 1, University Subdivision, Englewood, $750 each and taxes and assessments for 1885.

S. E. Gross & Co. report the following sales: At the new subdivision, Humboldt Park, lot on California avenue, corner Cortez street, $700; lot on Division street, corner Barclay street, $1,050; two lots on Richmond street, corner Thomas street, $1,100; cottage on Gross parkway, near Rockwell, $1,900. At Gross Park, in Lake View, a lot on School street, near Gross avenue, $500. At Madison street subdivision, a cottage on Monroe street, $2,200; a cottage on Albany avenue, $3,000.

Noah Barnes sold during the week in Hyde Park 160 feet, west front, on Kimbark avenue, south of Fifty-fourth street, for $4,000; 100 feet, east front, on Monroe avenue, 200 feet south of Fifty-sixth street, for $2,300; 40x100 feet, north front, on Fifty-third street, 60 feet west of Madison avenue, for $2,000; 50 feet, east front, on Monroe avenue, 100 feet north of Fifty-seventh street, for $1,400; 50 feet, with house, on Jefferson avenue, east front, 122 feet north of Fifty-fourth place, for $5,100.

A GOOD DEMAND FOR BUSINESS QUARTERS.

Nothing indicates the confidence of the people in the future of business better than the demand for business accommodations thus early in the season. Although in many cases the intending tenants do not purpose to occupy their quarters till the 1st of May, they are already on the ground engaging the best of the offices and stores. The demand is perhaps most marked on La Salle street, and it goes to confirm the belief of many people that that thoroughfare is to be a second Wall street. The applicants are, however, by no means confined to the classes of people engaged in financial or speculative operations. The new buildings in the vicinity of the Board of Trade are taking some tenants away from other parts of the city, but there is also a large inflow of people from outside the city. It is understood that the Fort Wayne Road will remove its freight offices to the Clark Building on the corner of Sherman and Jackson street. Farther north, one of the main offices of the Gaff Building is to be taken by the National Dispatch Line, and it is presumed that another railroad company will occupy the other front office on the first floor. A large proportion of the upper rooms of this building have also been engaged, and the Gaff Building will not hereafter be ranked among the properties in that part of the city which pay their owners a poor income. A visit to the Home Insurance Building will convince anybody that its rooms are to be well marketed. The Adams street front is about all taken up, and an unofficial estimate of the rental to date is $80,000. The managers of the building state that they are not cutting rates at all. There is an understanding among the owners of buildings in that part of the city in regard to rates, and there is thus far no evidence that it has recently been violated. Still farther north on La Salle street, between Madison and Washington, the old buildings, which were somewhat hurt by the southward drift of business, are in good demand. It does not do to ask very nigh rents there, but there seem to be plenty of traders and others who are satisfied with the accommodations, and a number have already made engagements for the 1st of May. In some localities the larger concerns are driving out the smaller ones. On Dearborn street, for instance, there is a demand for stores which will oblige the retail shopkeepers, tailors, etc., to go over to La Salle. The north half of the first story of the Howland Block is to be cleared of its present tenants and given up to a bank. On Washington street between Dearborn and Clark there is to be considerable shifting about, but no important new enterprises have yet been developed. The rent-roll of the Chicago Opera-House Building is still growing, and now amounts to $140,000. There is complaint of a scarcity of stores in various localities. The erection of that class of structures has not kept pace with the increase of business. Certain Lake street concerns have been discommoded by recent changes, and the supply of the right sort of accommodations there is small. The Northwestern Road has appropriated the northwest corner of Wells for its offices, obliging Fairbanks, Morse & Co. to leave. They go to the southwest corner of La Salle, necessitating the removal of Hart, Austin & Co. Some stores have recently been built on State street south of Jackson, but tradesmen dislike to move to a new quarter, and the shortage of room in the old localities is a little trying.

NEW BUILDINGS.

The low temperature of the last two weeks has put a stop to nearly all outdoor work on new buildings, and has also had the effect of placing a damper upon definit operations in architects' offices. At best there is very little that architects can certainly calculate upon at this time of the year, but the number and character of the inquiries and conversations by would-be builders during this month furnish pretty reliable straws with reference to the coming spring and the amount of work that will probably be commenced. A thorough canvass of the architects' offices results in the almost unanimous information or opinion that indications are favorable to one of the most active openings that Chicago has ever seen. While the winter has not been unusually severe, it has by no means been what could be termed open, and what outside building has been done has been carried on under many more difficulties than were anticipated when the jobs were begun. The continued cold has also prevented many who no doubt would have taken advantage of the mild weather to put in foundations from doing any work, and the chances are that the greater part of the work which was calculated for winter will be carried over till spring. Thus building will be practically forced into seasonable weather, which by common consent is the very best thing that could occur for all concerned in the business.

As usual, the question of strikes is cutting a more or less prominent figure in the minds of people who contemplate building, and it is interfering somewhat with definit arrangements in numerous instances. It is not feared that artisans will strike for more wages than they were getting last year, but that the agitation of the eight-hour question will result in a strike that will seriously delay any work that may be commenced. But this apprehension seems to be confined almost wholly to those least informed as to the situation. Builders generally pooh-pooh the idea of a strike—leastways in the spring—and say there is nothing more unlikely. They argue that the men have been getting and will continue to receive good wages, and that the feeling on the eight-hour movement has not mounted to a hight that would create the slightest suspicion of an early strike. As far as can be learned there will be no appreciable increase in building materials unless it be iron, and it is not unlikely that some articles may be lower. However, architects and builders are very confident, and as this is not a common feeling among them at this season it is safe to assert that they have some good reason for it.

It has recently been decided to complete only five lower stories of the Rialto Building this year, leaving the five upper ones for another year, and with that view new bids are now being obtained for most of the interior finish, and nearly all will be let during the present week. The work of completing the lower stories will be pushed with all possible dispatch, for it is intended to have the offices ready for May renting. The outer walls will be pushed during good weather and the whole structure will be roofed in as soon as possible, but in the meantime a temporary roof will protect the lower stories.

During the last week Architects Edbrooke & Burnham have been awarded orders for plans for a court-house for Henry County, Missouri, to be erected at Clinton, the county-seat. It will be constructed of stone and brick, and will cost about $100,000. Also for the splendid Y. M. C. A. Building that is to be erected this year at Atlanta, Ga., at an expense of $100,000. The firm is now erecting a $1,000,000 State-House in the latter city. Architect John F. Doerr has made plans for three four-story stone and brick dwellings at No. 2901 to 2905 Wentworth avenue for Ludes & Schneider, to cost $20,000. Architect G. A. Weary has planned for H. V. and J. H. Coleman a block of flats at No. 271 to 275 Campbell avenue, to cost $12,000. They will have fronts of pressed brick, stone, and terra cotta. Charles Rennert is building a store and flat building for himself at No. 200 Twenty-fifth street, to cost $5,000.

Architect Ohman has planned and is superintending the construction of a flat building for Marks & Cohn, at No. 158 Townsend street, to cost $6,000. Architect H. R. Wilson has planned for H. Davis a block of dwellings on Sawyer avenue, south of Douglas Park, to cost $20,000. Architect L. G. Hallberg has commenced the erection of a fine stone-front residence for J. A. Barnhart on West Jackson street, near Laflin, to cost $15,000. Architect Krueger has made plans for a three-story store and dwelling for M. Sass, to be built at No. 1095 Milwaukee avenue, to cost $10,000. Architect L. B. Dixon has let contracts for the erection of a three-story dwelling for F. L. Stevens on South Park avenue to cost $15,000. Architects Thomas & Rodgers have planed a two-story warehouse for Masury & Son in the rear of 189 Michigan avenue. John Austin is making plans for a block of six houses on West Jackson street for J. A. Landon; also six houses for the same owner on Belden avenue. The houses in both blocks will cost about $6,000 each. W. A. Furber has designed nice residences for J. L. Stogg and W. T. Lindley which will be erected during this year—the first at No. 3147 and the last at No. 3143 Calumet avenue. J. H. Moore has planned for H. B. Matthews Jr. at No. 1026 Washington boulevard a two-story and attic residence to cost $7,000. Thomas Nicholson is building two nice houses for himself on Thirty-fourth street, just west of Vernon avenue, to cost $12,000. F. B. Townsend is building a fine residence for J. H. Jackman at Janesville, Wis.

Burnham & Root have a very large and very handsome water-color elevation of the splendid building that will cover the old City-Hall lot on exhibition at their office in the Montauk Block. Estimates are now being secured on this building and many of the contracts will be let during the present month. Figures are also being received by the firm on the Phœnix Insurance Building on Jackson street, the foundations of which are now being put in. The superstructure, as well as the foundations of the Commerce Building, further south on Pacific avenue, have been let to Wells & Son. Architect Barfield has planned a four-story store and flat building to be built for Henry Reicke on Cottage Grove avenue, near Thirty-ninth street. It is stated that A. J. Snell has about concluded to proceed with his improvement of the triangular lot corner of West Lake street and Bryan place, for which plans have been made by Alfred Smith. The houses will be three stories high, facing both streets, and the block complete will cost about $125,000. The plans contemplate one of the best improvements yet made by Mr. Snell.

As soon as the weather will permit Messrs. Lombard and Sawyer, who built about twenty-five first-class houses near Douglas Park, will commence, after plans by Architects Ostling & Bourgeoise, the erection of about twenty-five more houses, many of which will be superior to those already erected. Mr. Lombard and Mr. Sawyer are both completing residences for themselves in the new colony.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Malek A. Loring has bought five acres of land on Champlain avenue, Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets, at $3,000 an acre, as a permanent investment.

Important improvements are projected on Forty-fifth street. A sewer is to be laid from State street to the Grand boulevard, and as soon as the assesments are approved it is expected arrangements will be made for the extension of the cable road to Englewood. The pavement of State street will soon be extended from Thirty-ninth street to Englewood.

Persons who are thoroughly familiar with the history of the removal of the Board of Trade to its present location say it is no use to resist the claim of the Rialto Building to the privilege of constructing bridges across the alley. It is down in black and white on the agreement, they say, and was a part of the original scheme under which the Board of Trade got possession of its lot.

The Mayor told one pretty big story at the banquet of the real-estate men. He said that he recently found a squatter on a lot of his whose house was entirely constructed of "for-sale" boards that had been placed there by enterprising brokers.

R. S. Parker has sold to William Fitzgerald a twenty-five-foot lot and house situated fifty feet south of Thirtieth street, on Wabash avenue, for $12,000.

The Union National Bank will the coming spring remove to the Home Insurance Building, occupying the entire first floor on the Adams street side, where their accommodations will be as good as any in the city.

For great value in small compass the store occupied by Daniels, the cigar-man, on the northwest corner of Dearborn and Madison, bears off the palm. It is about 15x40 feet, and an offer of $6,000 a year for it has been repeatedly refused.

Lenders on Chicago realty do not appear to be doing much of a business. One loan of $125,000 at 5½ per cent was placed last week on a good piece of business property in the Board of Trade quarter.

Mr. Lobenstein has refused $160,000 for his vacant lot, 87x120, on the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street.

The spirit of change is among the real-estate men of Washington street and some of their near neighbors. W. D. Kerfoot & Co. will the 1st of May leave their present quarters and go across the street to the office now occupied by H. C. Morey & Co., who may move to La Salle street. E. S. Dreyer & Co. will go to the northeast corner of Dearborn and Washington, occupying the rooms recently vacated by the National Bank of Illinois. Snow & Dickinson will remove from the basement where they are now located to the first story of the same building. J. C. Magill & Co. have already left Washington street for La Salle. The Merchants' Loan & Trust Company will extend their rooms back to the quarters now occupied by F. B. Peabody & Co., who will go to the Illinois Bank Building. Counselman & Day, brokers, will also have a branch office in that building. It appears that the bank which is going into the Howland Block is the Chicago National. Bogue & Hoyt will move up one story.

Resolved, That this board does deprecate and denounce any and all efforts to dispose of the abstract books now in possession of and used by the County Recorder by lease or otherwise; believing that these books should remain in the possession of the county authorities, and under their control, to the end that the public may have, as a matter of right, access to them for the purpose of procuring information at a moderate cost; and that a lease or other disposal of the books, or any part of them, would prevent or subvert that desirable condition, and might lead to the establishment of a monopoly of the abstract business in this county, to the obvious detriment of all dealers in real estate, and particularly of those who buy small lots for their own occupancy, and of those who sell similar lots to such purchasers.

Resolved, That we will cheerfully and heartily coöperate with the Citizens' Committee in any lawful endeavor they are making for the purpose of preventing the lease or sale of the abstract books in question or any part thereof.

The following committee was appointed to coöperate with the special committee of the Citizens' Association in this matter: William A. Bond, Lyman Baird, Henry C. Morey, M. R. Barnard, Willis G. Jackson.

BORING FOR OIL AND GAS.

THE EXCITEMENT AT LIMA, O., INCREASING—THE WORK IN ILLINOIS.

LIMA, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The latest oil "strike" here has proven a flowing well, the first of the kind here. It is now flowing at the rate of about ninety barrels per day. The same well also produces a large quantity of gas. Home capitalists and those from abroad are thickly studding the outskirts of this city with derricks. Twenty-five new wells are being bored.

CLINTON, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The Natural-Gas & Heating Company of this city has suspended the work of boring for natural gas until the weather shall have gotten warmer. A hole about 200 feet in depth has been bored and piped, but no evidence of natural gas has been discovered. The work had been in progress for several weeks.

JOHN BROWN.

At the recent celebration at Topeka of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of Kansas to the Union a poem was read by the Hon. Eugene F. Ware, which thus speaks of John Brown:

And there is one
Fame yet shall placard on the walls of Time.
He dared begin,
He dared begin, when failure was a crime.

When over Africa
Some future cycle
When, as with trumpet
Of Archangel Michael,
Culture shall bid a colored race emerge;

When busy cities
There, in constellations,
Shall gleam with spires, and palaces, and domes;
With marts wherein
Are heard the noise of nations,
With summer-groves surrounding stately homes;

There future orators
To cultured freemen
Shall tell the valor and recount with praise
Stories of Kansas
And of Lacedæmon—
Cradles of freedom, then, of ancient days.

From boulevards
O'erlooking both Nyanzas
The statued bronze shall glitter in the sun,
With rugged lettering:
"John Brown of Kansas.
He dared begin.
He lost,
But, losing, won."

THE WEEK IN IRELAND.

"I was born a Protestant, I was bred a Protestant, and I hope to die a Protestant," was the pithy phrase in Mr. Parnell's Parliamentary reply to the charge that home rule would effect a Roman Catholic supremacy in Ireland.

Charles Russell, the Attorney-General, is as satisfactory to Ireland in his office as John Morley in his. Russell is of Irish birth, was educated at Trinity College, and has always been a sympathizer with home rule. Recognized as the first intellect at the bar of the United Kingdom, he has not been active in politics. His book, "New Views on Ireland," published four years ago, was an unanswerable arraignment of the present Governor-General of Canada for tyranny on his Irish estates and gross misrepresentations of facts connected with them.

Mr. Gladstone has "taken the curse off" the appointment of Morley as Chief Secretary by his choice of the Duke of Aberdeen as Irish Viceroy. It was hoped the post would remain vacant. Aberdeen is Scotch and nobody otherwise, except High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland.

The Belfast Street Tramways Company has just paid a half-yearly dividend of 6½ per cent; and the Great Southern & Western Railway has paid a dividend, half-yearly, of 4½ per cent.

Pierse O'Brien, a landlord, has applied to the Dungarvan poor authorities for relief. He says in his letter that he has paid thousands of pounds in taxes for sixty years, and needs public assistance until he can "get his affairs settled."

Edmund Harvey, whose comprehensive summary of Irish grievances was the subject of editorial discussion in THE TRIBUNE during the week, is a Quaker who resides in Waterford. He is not merely a home-ruler; he believes in separation if home rule cannot be obtained. Alfred Webb, Treasurer of the National League in Dublin, is also a Quaker. The sect had a lively taste of British rule in Ireland in the days when the crown managed the business of conscience. William Penn enjoyed the hospitality of a jail in Cork.

There is a fair prospect that at last a technical school will be founded in Dublin. The effort in its behalf has been patient and strenuous and all sorts of obstacles had to be overcome. The Nationalist leaders were among its promoters, which was enough to keep the anti-Nationalists away from it. The result of the sweeping victory in the Parliamentary elections has been to persuade skeptics about home rule that at least they may as well prepare to see its principles applied in local affairs under corporation control; and, as their interests are at stake, a number of them have made their first appearance as sympathizers with Irish ambition in connection with the technical school. Application to Earl Carnarvon for state aid brought a characteristic reply. He thought that he might recommend that a fraction of the Irish Church surplus—every shilling of it Irish money—be appropriated, provided the citizens of Dublin were correspondingly generous. The answer evoked great laughter at the public meeting where it was read. The project has gone on without any aid from the Government and is on the verge of practical success.

Mr. Edmund Dwyer Gray, M. P., stated in an address in its behalf that when the old Irish Parliament sat in Dublin art and trade enjoyed advantages which disappeared with the abolition of that body and the transfer of the seat of legislation to London, and he described grates, fenders, andirons, fine designs in fancy metal pieces, pottery, plaster, mantels, stone, marble, etc., made in the last century in Ireland as being now the most attractive decorations of splendid houses in England. The English bric-à-brac hunter had rescued this work, for which the demand in Ireland had long been dead, from the garrets and junk-shops of the abandoned Irish Capital. He claimed that the transfer of the Parliament back to Dublin would revive industrial and fine art there more than any other means that could be devised, and doubted the fortune of the experts whom the technical school would turn out unless a domestic demand for their skill should be thus created.

A phenomenal accident occurred at Belfast, where a workman fell from a roof into a tank of vitriol. He dexterously clutched the sides of the tank and, thus immersed, held himself until rescued. Although frightfully burned he did not die.

The General Synod of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Ireland has decided that the See of Meath has National precedence.

The Irish Cattle-Trade Association have adopted "the American system of selling cattle by live weight."

The paper-mills in which machinery was first used for the making of that article in Ireland have been closed for some time, but are about to be reopened. They are run by water-power, the abundance of which in Ireland, totally unused, is more eloquent than Parliamentary speeches about the industrial death of the country.

The Cork cattle-carriage dispute has never been settled. The company which had in the beginning a monopoly of the trade has made several reductions in the hope of overcoming, by commercial considerations, the objections aroused by its political course; but the shippers have not returned to their wharves. Meanwhile the organization of the rival company has been slow on account of the timidity of capital. William J. Lane, one of the Cork M. P.'s, is at work in the north trying to interest moneyed men there, and is said to be meeting with encouragement.

The intimation that Bishop Nulty is to be made a Cardinal will be accepted with a smile of incredulity until the red hat is on his head. Those who are familiar with the veto controversy, the best account of which is in the Castlereagh correspondence, know that, in the past, favor with the British Government was primarily necessary for an Irish prelate who wanted promotion. Archbishop MacHale, the great antiquarian, scholar, and patriot, should have been in the cardinalate for half a generation before his death, were merit the test of selection. Cardinals Cullen and McCabe were little less politically than British agents. The reversal of this ancient policy was inaugurated by the appointment of Dr. Walsh as the Archbishop of Dublin. It would receive an equally remarkable confirmation should the prelate who first cried, "The land for the people" in Ireland, be given the red hat.

Achilles O'Neill Daunt, son of the well-known Irish pamphleteer, is writing a series of tracts on the financial relations of England and Ireland. He has irritated the Orangemen by recovering from historic dust tremendous resolutions adopted by lodges in favor of home rule in Grattan's time—resolutions in which these daring fellows swear by their particular kind of Deity that "they will spill their blood" in defense of Grattan's Parliament. As Grattan's Parliament is precisely what Parnell is after, Mr. Daunt wants the Orangemen to proceed and spill their blood in advocacy of it instead of threatening to spill other folks' in opposing it. The Orangemen appear to have an ancient and ineffectual way of swearing and doing nothing more.

Mr. Davitt can afford to smile over the newest aspect of affairs. He has maintained, since his release from prison that the land question should take precedence of the Parliamentary question, and necessity may now compel Parnell to acquiesce. There are, strange to say, sincere thinkers who fear that if the farmers of Ireland get title to the land and are enabled to put in their pockets the vast rental they now pay over to the landlords their interest in National progress will suffer a serious diminution. Parnell had to give them a savage hint two years ago after they had begun to get some benefit from the Arrears act, that they owed something to their fellow-countrymen.
